Resolved, That this Sunday-school hereby expresses its deep sorrow for the loss of her who has always been faithful in the Master's cause, and endeared herself to all with whom she came in contact by her sweet and Christian-like bearing.

Resolved, That we extend to the family and relatives our heartfelt sympathy in this time of grief, and exhort all to emulate her disinterested sweetness and amiability.

MRS. MAMIE CABAWAY, for Com.

HOPKINS—Resolutions passed by Moss Point M. E. Sunday-school, Oct. 16, 1898:

Whereas, It has pleased all-wise Providence, the ruler and dispenser of all human events, to enter our community and body of Sunday-school workers, and on the twenty-sixth day of September, 1898, remove from our midst by death our esteemed friend and class-mate, WADE HOPKINS; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Wade we realize that the home has lost a dutiful son and an affectionate brother, and the church and Sabbath-school a true and faithful member. We shall miss his familiar face from his accustomed place here, as well as the sweet music of his cornet, with which he so ably assisted the choir.

Resolved, That this Sabbath-school hereby tenders to the bereaved family its sincere condolence and sympathy, and pray that the merciful Giver of all good may sustain them in this hour of affliction.

Respectfully submitted.

CATARRH CAN NOT BE CURED

With LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they can not reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it, you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.

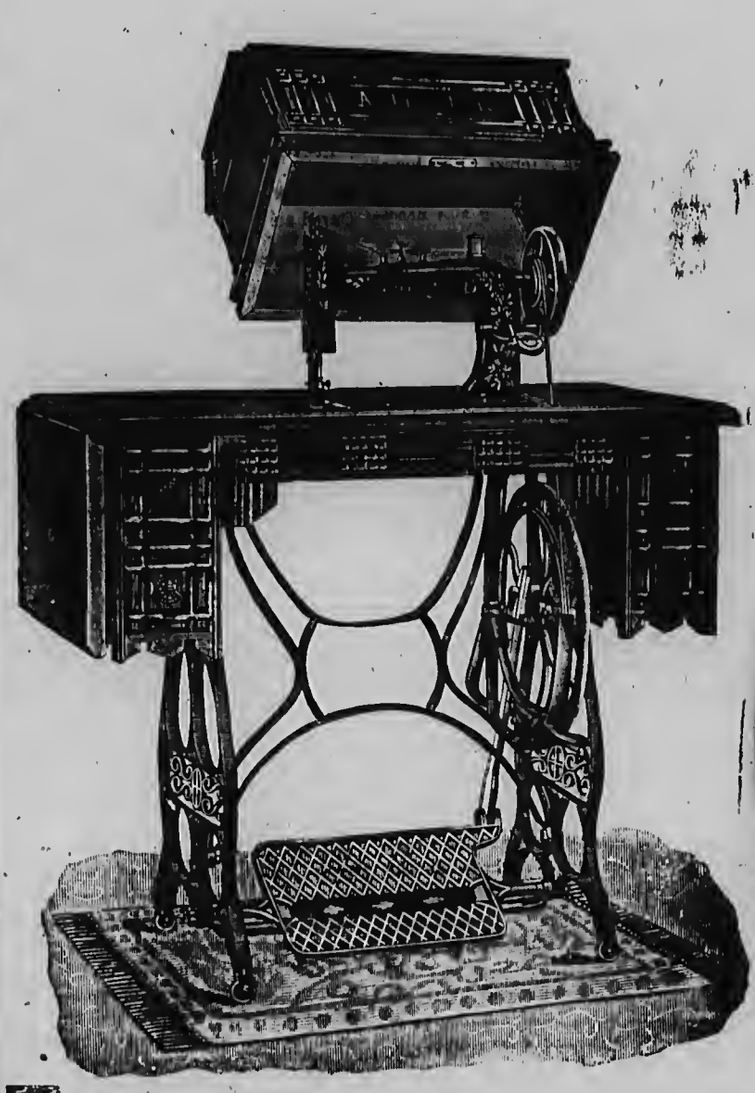
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great length; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $19, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to December, '99, and send $17 additional, and we will send you the machine. This price does not include freight.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

TO AGENTS:

We will send this machine free to any preacher or other person who will send us twenty new subscribers with the cash—$40. Address

The Sana-Cura treatment for the cure of Catarrh, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Deafness and all diseases of the Head, Throat and Lungs.

MISS LILLIE FRUSH, Elwood, Ind., writes:—Three years ago I was a mere skeleton and thought to be a hopeless victim of Catarrhal Consumption. My entire system was saturated and diseased with the catarrhal poison. I belonged to a consumptive family and no one ever expected me to get well again; but I was placed in charge of Dr. M. Beaty who gave me his Sana-Cura treatment. Shortly, the coughing spells left me, my appetite returned, I grew stronger, increased in weight and after a 3 months' course was completely cured. I am now in perfect health and a stout hearty woman, as you will see by my photograph.

Three Months Home Treatment Free!

To introduce the Sana-Cura Cure in every community and prove that it cures when all others have failed, I will for a limited time send medicines for a 3 months treatment free. Send a description of your trouble, name and P. O. address at once; or, write for Question Blank and prompt attention will be given you free. Address DR. M. BEATY, Prin'l, National Dispensary, Dep't T 11. 125 W. 12th St., Cincinnati, O.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The Vermont Hense has rejected a hill to grant suffrage in municipal affairs to tax-paying women.

The Navy Department has presented Miss Helen Gould with an 800-pound projectile as a souvenir of the war.

There was an immense fire in Covington, La., last week, which destroyed about thirty houses.

The Supreme Court of Illinois has upheld a law which provides that textbooks in schools may not he changed more than once in four years.

Generals Garcia, Sangnilly, La Nneza, Jose Miguel Gomez and Antonio Gonzalez, members of Cuban delegation from Santa Cruz, are en route to Washington. They are accompanied by members of their staff and many Cuban officers.

The W. C. T. U. National Convention at St. Paul, Nov. 14, decided by a vote of 285 to 71 to abandon the temple project as an affiliated interest. Five hours of animated, vigorous and occasionally bitter and personal debating was necessary before the vote was reached.

As a result of the elections, last Tuesday, the Republicans will have control of the United States Senate after March 4, with a majority of 20. The Republicans now have President, House and Senate. Col. Roosevelt, of the Rough Riders, Republican candidate, was elected governor of New York.

The President has notified the American Commissioners that Spain must give a definite answer this week. The Cabinet reached this decision at a special meeting. It is said that the administration has read in the result of last Tuesday's election a demand to go slow in the programme of territorial expansion.

Last week there was cleared from this port for Liverpool what is considered to he the largest general cargo ever taken out of New Orleans. The British steamship "Monarch," belonging to the Elder-Dempster Line, was the vessel carrying this cargo, which was equal to the bulk of 27,500 bales of cotton—that is to say, four times as large as the average cargoes of twenty years ago.

The annual report of the General commanding the army, Major-General Nelson A. Miles, was made public last week. Contrary to all expectations, the report contained no sensational disclosures or ill-humored criticisms of department officers. It is, in fact, a very interesting and valuable document, briefly summarizing the history of the army's part in the war with Spain.

The Louisiana sugar planters, at their meeting last week, devoted considerable of their attention to the probable effects on their industry of the annexation of the Spanish possessions in the West Indies and the far East. Very naturally they are much concerned at the prospect of these rich sugar-producing countries becoming an integral part of the United States, thereby securing the right of free entry within our borders for their sugar.

The news received from Havana and other Cuban cities is far from reassuring. The mutinous conduct of the Spanish soldiery in Havana, and similar conduct of Spanish troops in other places, prove that the Spanish authorities are fast losing control of the situation, and that life and property will soon be unsafe in Cuba. The most serious disturbance which has occurred was the revolt of the regiments of the "Orden Publico," a sort of military gendarmerie. Their revolt was due to the failure of the Spanish Government to pay the troops.

In Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, on Sunday, a meeting was held to consider the political condition of Cuba. Addresses were made by Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, William Willard Howard and others. Mr. Howard described the condition of Cuba as he has seen it, and pointed out that the only remedy for the existing misery lay in giving employment to the poor. Resolutions were adopted indorsing a plan for Cuban industrial relief as a practical and effective means of helping the Cuban poor by providing for them honest employment, instead of indiscriminate gifts and temporary relief.

It is the purpose of General Brooke, military governor of Porto Rico, to retain as far as possible the governmental institutions, both general and municipal, now existing there, and to permit these various institutions to regulate the island's affairs in the future as they have done in the past. It is distinctly understood that each and every institution is under the absolute control of the American military government, and that this state of affairs shall continue until such time as the Congress of the United States shall have determined just what sort of housekeeping we shall undertake in Porto Rico.

The rumor to the effect that the Spanish ship, "Infanta Maria Teresa," the flagship of Admiral Cervera, reported as having foundered at sea in a heavy gale, about a week ago, had been seen stranded on the beach at Cat Island, in the Bahama group, turns out to be a fact. Last week the government received reliable information from the American Consul at Nassau to the effect that the ship which went ashore on Cat Island was actually the "Maria Teresa." The Navy Department has sent two vessels, under command of Captain McCalla, an experienced officer, to ascertain if the stranded vessel is actually the "Teresa," and, if so, to take the proper steps to save the ship, if possible. The raising of the vessel will no doubt entail further expense and trouble; but the government is now more than ever determined to have the ship, and will no doubt take the steps necessary to bring her to port, no matter what the cost.

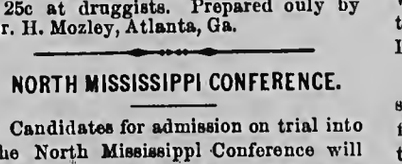
A Preacher's Discovery.



Samples Mailed Free.

We have given away 100,000 trial packages of Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure to persons afflicted with Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, Deafness, etc., and now offer another 50,000 packages absolutely free. If the trial package does not convince you of its curative properties, you will have been at no expense; if it proves beneficial, you will gladly order a month's treatment at $1.00. We are willing to take all the risk, knowing what the medicine will do:

This remedy was discovered by Rev. J. W. Blosser, M. D., the well-known Minister of the Gospel and Catarrh Specialist. It is a harmless, pleasant, vegetable compound, inhaled by smoking in a pipe, which we furnish free. It cures the worst cases. If you wish the free package, write at once to Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 38 N Broad St., Atlanta, Ga.

HELP WANTED.

To Those Who Are Interested in Church Building:

We are laboring to erect a house of worship in the town of Cumberland, a small village in Webster county, Miss., and are unable to accomplish this blessed work without aid from our friends. Cumberland High School is located here. R. P. Linfield, the president of this school, is a son of a Methodist preacher who is in glory, and a brother of Bro. Linfield, of the Mississippi Conference.

Any help you can give us will give us pleasure, and we will acknowledge same in the ADVOCATE.

Send to Prof. R. P. Linfield, Cumberland, Miss., or to the Rev. D. L. Cogdell, Eupora, Miss.

DR. BULL'S COUGH SYRUP WILL stop your cough at once. Take advice and buy a bottle of this reliable medicine for 25 cents.

NOTICE.

The Annual Meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference will be held at Brookhaven, Dec. 2-5. We hope for a large attendance of delegates and visitors. Rates from the different railroads have been secured, provided we have the requisite number in attendance, and we urge everyone who shall come to secure a certificate, stating that a full-fare ticket was purchased at the place of starting.

Let all come praying for the success of the meeting.

ADDIE V. MARSHALL, Pres.
MOLLIE MCQUEEN, Rec. Sec.

James actually declares that if a man has perfect patience he has a perfect character. I wish I had a voice that could ring over our rum-mad country in this end of the nineteenth century, when men are tumbling over one another, rushing after nothing and finding it. I would like to proclaim this lesson: Whoever has perfect patience has a perfect character.—John A. Broadus, D. D.

The law of the harvest is to reap more than you sow. Sow an act, and you reap a habit; sow a habit, and you reap a character; sow a character, and you reap a destiny.—G. D. Boardman.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Booneville, Miss., EDITOR.

"Covet earnestly the best gifts."

Read good books and, above all, read the Bible.

We are glad to record the fact that the Bible is rapidly becoming a textbook in the schools and colleges of our country.

One of the things that most impressed the American delegates to the recent World's Sunday-school Convention was the commendation by the Lord Mayor of London of the Bible and Bible study.

During the convention Bishop Fowler spoke of his inability to deal in twenty-five minutes with a Book which God had taken twenty-five centuries to prepare for and fifteen centuries to write.

Mr. Spurgeon once compared the hostile critics of the Bible to men who tried to protect the British lion by putting him in a cage and standing on guard at the door.

"All you have to do is to let the lion out of the cage, and he will give a good account of himself; and all we have to do is to let the Word of God have free course, and it will confound its enemies."

We once read of a man who lost his way in the famous Mammoth Cave, and finally lost his mind because he refused to follow the guide. The man who undertakes to go through this world without the direction and light which the Bible gives will lose his way and finally lose his soul.

The Epworth League will only accomplish that for which it was organized in proportion as the membership endeavor to fashion their lives according to the teachings of the Word of God.

The League is a part of the church designed to build up in the most holy faith the youth of Methodism, that they might become workmen that need not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.

The North Mississippi Annual Conference will (D. V.) convene in Aberdeen, Nov. 30. We would be glad to get postal card reports from all the Leagues in North Mississippi at once, that we may arrange them and publish in the Conference edition of the ADVOCATE, Dec. 1.

Dr. John Mathews, the veteran preacher and popular pastor, is a living illustration of the fact that there need be no "dead-line" just because the almanac indicates that long since the meridian of life has been passed.

Recently he has been appointed as pastor of McKendree Church, Nashville, Tenn., the leading church in Southern Methodism, and has commenced his work with as much enthusiasm as a young preacher entering his first city pastorate.

Catarrh Can Be Cured.

Catarrh is a kindred ailment of consumption, long considered incurable; and yet there is one remedy that will positively cure catarrh in any of its stages. For many years this remedy was used by the late Dr. Stevens, a widely noted authority on all diseases of the throat and lungs. Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, and desiring to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all sufferers from Catarrh, Asthma, Consumption, and nervous diseases, this recipe, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing, with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 929 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

Used Morphine and Whisky

REMARKABLE CURES.

Wonderful Power of the Remedy in Overcoming These Diseases Without Suffering. Used in Far Africa.

An order has been received from Johannesburg, South Africa, by Messrs. B. M. Woolley & Co., of Atlanta, Ga., for their celebrated Opium Cure, the best remedy of its kind known to the civilized world.

Johannesburg is in South Africa, and it took the order thirty days, a full calendar month, to reach Atlanta.

It is wonderful how the fame of this great cure for these terrible diseases, the opium and whiskey habits, has spread.

Dr. Woolley's name is known in almost every city in America, and frequently orders for his celebrated cure are received from Europe, but this is the first time that an order has been received from far-away Southern Africa.

It would be a blessing to this country and all other countries if everybody suffering from these terrible diseases could be induced to try this great cure. There are thousands of men and women who would give all they possess to be freed from the terrible consequences of one or the other of these fearful monsters that have possibly for years preyed upon them. Thousands rejoice in the fact that they have been rescued, and would that others might be saved from their wretchedness, but from some cause or other they and their friends fail to give this matter the attention they should, and thus many a life is sacrificed that might otherwise have been made a blessing to themselves and the world.

Write to Dr. Woolley, in Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you his book giving full particulars.

Read the following from those who have been cured, which is the best of all evidence:

Had Used Morphine for Thirty Years—I am Sure She is Now Cured.

Madison, Fla., April 8, 1898.
Dr. B. M. Woolley, Atlanta, Ga.:

Dear Sir—Your kind letter of inquiry about your patient, my wife, has not been replied to earlier for the reason that I wanted to be sure that she was cured. I am now sure, "beyond a reasonable doubt," as the lawyers say, that she is cured, and that her cure dates from September, A. D. 1897, and I am equally sure that she owes her cure to the use of your Antidote. She had been using morphine for over thirty years, and had been turned off by an institute of your city as incurable, of which I wrote you in full detail when I applied to you for treatment for her. There can be no doubt of the efficacy of your remedy if faithfully taken under your direction. Gratefully yours,
E. J. VANN,
Attorney-at-Law.

Our Child Used a Large Amount of Morphine—We Had No Hope of His Recovery, But He Stands To-day a Monument to the Virtue of Dr. Woolley's Remedy.

Capel's Mills, N. C., Feb. 17, 1898.
About one year ago Dr. B. M. Woolley, of Atlanta, Ga., commenced treating my son, Boyce, for the morphine habit. He had been taking it hypodermically for eight or ten years. He was a great sufferer from childhood, and we gave him morphine as the only relief from pain, until it was a fixed habit, and it took a large amount to keep him up. We had no hope in the world of his recovery. His was an extremely bad case. The doctor himself did not take the case with much hope, but he stands to-day a monument to the virtue of Dr. Woolley's remedy. I am no flatterer. I hate fraud. I write this of my own free will, because it is just and right. If anyone doubts a word I write, let him ask the leading lawyers or bankers as to my veracity.

Let me say, in conclusion, if you are in the morphine habit, and have the money, don't hesitate to put yourself under Dr. Woolley. For any further information write me, enclosing stamp.
Yours truly, A. C. COVINGTON.

New Orleans, La.
Dr. B. M. Woolley, Atlanta, Ga.:

Dear Sir—I received your letter, and was just thinking about writing to you. I am the same as when I left off the Antidote. I have had no desire for drink whatever since you treated me, which will be two years this coming March. Do not be afraid; I know what whiskey has done for me, and I will never go into it again as long as there is any way to keep from it. I am well at present, and my weight is 158 pounds.
Yours very truly,
HENRY J. MAGRATH,
Rampart street, between Maison and Bartholomy streets.

The Organ that Suits the Choir

THE organist and the choir get the finale if anything goes wrong with the music—it embarrasses the preacher too.

The church organ ought to be in perfect tone; sweet toned; easy to pedal; under perfect control; in perfect order all the time; and it ought to have big bellows.

NOTE: Most organs have bellows altogether too small. The bellows are the lungs. When too small the organ is short of breath; the organist has to pedal so fast she gives out.

EPWORTH ORGANS are better made than ordinary organs, very much better. That's why such competent judges of tone as Prof. E. O. Excell and Prof. Chas. H. Gabriel, two of the best known S. S. song writers, use them in their work and recommend them.

The local preachers should all be present at their respective quarterly meetings to present written reports of their labors during the year on the passage of their characters.

The pastors will please insist on the Boards of Trustees preparing reports to be submitted to their respective Conferences in answer to Ques. 24 of Discipline, as the law directs.

Attention to these matters will be highly appreciated, and will very much expedite the business.

THANKSGIVING HYMN.

BY J. G. HOLLAND.

For Summer's bloom and Autumn's blight,
For bending wheat and blasted maize,
For health and sickness, Lord of light,
And Lord of darkness, hear our praise!

We trace to thee our joys and woes,
To thee of causes still the Cause;
We thank thee that thy hand bestows;
We bless thee that thy love withdraws.

We bring no sorrows to thy throne;
We come to thee with no complaint;
In providence thy will is done,
And that is sacred to the saint.

Here, on this blest Thanksgiving night,
We raise to thee our grateful voice;
For what thou doest, Lord, is right;
And, thus believing, we rejoice.

—Bitter-Sweet.

MEETING AT LOUISVILLE.

We are now in the midst of a gracious meeting at old Walnut Street Church. This is the original hive from which all the other societies of Methodism have swarmed. It is quite an inspiration to preach here where so many grand men of the past have stood, and with fiery tongues of eloquence have proclaimed the glad news of salvation. Dr. Chapman, who is so well known in our church as a writer and preacher, is pastor. He is a grand man. He is not only a scholarly gentleman, but he is very spiritual. His people are very devoted to him, and he is a great power for Methodism in this city. It has been a great blessing to me to be associated with this man of God and his cultivated Christian wife. I believe Dr. Chapman can do more work than any man I have ever known except the sainted Bishop Haygood. He has, in addition to the work of a large pastorate, the editorship of the Central Methodist, and also writes much for our Sunday-school Magazine and other periodicals.

In addition to my regular work here, I have found much to interest me. The people here are very social and hospitable, and they have been very kind to take me here and there over the city to see the different points of interest. The cemetery seems to be the greatest place of attraction; and it is certainly beautiful. I saw out there the places where the bodies of Bishop Kavanaugh and Dr. Rivers rest. Small marble slabs, with very simple inscriptions on them, mark their resting-places, while many who lived and died in great wickedness had great, costly shafts with elaborate inscriptions at the head of their graves. I thought to myself I had rather lived as these men of God, and have my name written upon the hearts of men, than to live and die as these wicked men, and have my name "rot" upon a tombstone. "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his."

There are several large medical colleges here. This seems to be a city of all kinds of schools. One can sconre, I am told, a classical education in the high schools of this city. The great Southern Baptist Theological Seminary is located here. It has over three hundred "theologues," I am told. This is said to be the largest attendance of any theological institution in the world.

I can't close this without saying a word about Methodism in the city, and also the grand set of men who are pushing her interests. Methodism is very strong here, but there is no one power so strong as the world.

Dr. Lewis is presiding elder, and he is a grand man. Bro. Moore, of this place, has recently come to the city, but he is making a fine start. He has charge of one of our "most principalist" churches. There are others of whom I would be glad to mention, but time and space forbid. There are as many fine laymen here as any place of which I know. We need strong, consecrated men in a place like this, for the influences against the church are powerful. I find here, as everywhere, that card-playing, dancing, and promiscuous theater-going are three great enemies of the church. However, whisky is the most powerful enemy here to our Christianity. It has a very strong hold in this city. Oh, that the day may soon come when God may arouse the conscience of our people of the enormity of its awful blighting curse!

Success to you, Doctor. Hope to meet you at Conference.

W. M. McINTOSH.

CHURCH VALUATION.

MR. EDITOR: Let me call the attention of brethren to what is deemed an error in some of our statistical reports: the great reduction in values of churches, parsonages, and other church property, frequently without other reason than the general depression in value of real estate. That seems to be an insufficient reason. No church property, especially a church-building or house of worship, ought to be scaled or discounted in value because of changes in the real estate market, for no house of worship could at any time be put on the market and sold for anything like its actual cost, because there is never a demand for ready-built churches. The Roman Catholic cathedral in Natchez cost about $125,000. If put on the market, how much—or, rather, how little—would it bring? Yet in all church statistics it is rated at its cost. The Jefferson Street, Natchez, M. E. Church, South, cost $30,000, and is a substantial, well-built structure, meeting all the requirements of the congregation. Why, then, should it be rated in our Conference reports at only $15,000? Why throw away the other half of the cost? Does it not represent to Methodism in Natchez and to the Mississippi Conference fully as much now as when the money was first contributed?

Now, my good brother, the pastor of Jefferson Street Church will not attribute any sinister motive to me in singling out his church, but will, if he please, regard it as only a liberty taken by me in matters where I am familiar with the facts, and where the cathedral and the church-building are in the same town. And none of my brethren should regard me as intending to reflect unkindly on any of them, for I am not criticising men, but methods.

In the report of the Secretary of Education, East Mississippi Female College is valued at only $10,000, when the grounds, without any of the buildings, is believed to be worth so much, and the buildings represent an actual cash outlay of considerably more. Of course, under the hammer the property might not bring the $10,000, but that is not the question. What did the property cost, and what is it worth to the M. E. Church, South? What would the trustees and the Mississippi Conference take for the property?

Let us neither magnify nor minimize our values. Don't throw the church property into bankruptcy because of a financial crash on Wall street.

REVIVAL AT CENTENARY.

We are in the midst of a gracious revival of religion among our students. It is not my purpose to refer here to all the religious work of which this is an outcome. Many of the young men joined the Y. M. C. A. as active members, but others had never enjoyed any religious experience, and to win these, special services had been in contemplation. When the regularly appointed Week of Prayer for the Y. M. C. A. arrived it was felt that the time was ripe for a revival. This Week of Prayer has just closed, but the series of meetings continues, services being held on the campus in the hall of the Y. M. C. A. There have been a number of bright conversions and a general uplift in Christian life.

For two days past Bro. T. B. Clifford, the newly-appointed agent for Centenary, has been with us, and his coming at this time seems to have been in the providence of God. His effective preaching and work among the boys will be long remembered, and as the servant of God in the great work of Christian education in our State in the capacity of agent for both Mansfield Female College and Centenary College, Bro. Clifford shows himself highly qualified. It will be remembered that his appointment as agent was made some months ago, but, owing to quarantines and the necessity of finishing up his work for the present Conference year at Booneville station, North Mississippi Conference, he has been delayed in entering upon his canvass of the State in the interest of the two colleges named. He authorizes me to state that he will enter upon this canvass within the next few weeks.

As an evidence of the favor with which he has been received here, he has been assured that he will be followed in his work by the prayers of every Christian boy at Centenary College.

Bro. Clifford comes to our State with great interest in the work before him, a consecrated enthusiasm, and confident hope. Let every Methodist home in our State be open to him, and everyone who can lend a helping hand.

J. M. SULLIVAN,
Secretary of Faculty.

AS OTHERS SEE IT (US).

How long will our pastors continue to afflict our churches with such methods as those referred to herein? Not long since I received a personal letter from one of the most scholarly, pious and successful pastors in one of our sister denominations. In the letter he referred to a meeting which had not a great while ago come under his own observation. It is a calamity from which our pastors should save us.

"We surrendered our services to unite with the Methodists in a meeting conducted by Bro. Blank, who commenced sanctification services. A crowded house, composed of all denominations, heard a sermon full of energy and striking points, wonderfully well illustrated, more than an hour long, delivered to the church, with more outside sinners in the house than I have seen in a long time. There was not a word spoken to those who had not so much as a touch on the hem of Christ's garment, but all to those whose struggle has been, through opposition and temptation, to maintain their hold, and all to shame them! Could he have applied his fine thoughts, energy and splendid illustration to the enemies of Christ, as well as to his friends, who, though faulty in service, are bearing the heat and burdens of the day, it would have been less partial, and certainly more just. The very element to which all his caustic argument was addressed was the one that had given the means to build that pretty church in which he preached were weekly sacrificing to maintain sanctuary service and privilege. Such a sermon, in my estimate, damages the church and makes it a stench in public nostrils. It strips it of every attraction, and only encourages the world to keep out of it, as one would steer clear of a carcass. I believe great gifts and noble thoughts are prostituted by such a course. There are brethren everywhere who agree with a Bishop in your church in being tired of everlastingly 'calling the saints to repentance.' The matter of the sermon I enjoyed immensely, but the application was partial, unjust, and deeply injurious to all who are 'pursuing,' though it be in a 'faint' kind of way. Partial statements are very misleading when applied to truth, and no less so when applied to character. Bro. Blank makes the inconsistent parts of good men stand for the whole when we all know that no mathematical ingenuity will ever be able to make a part of a thing stand for the whole."

These criticisms seem so just, and are so kindly expressed, that I thought it well for your readers to see them. The entire letter breathed so brotherly a spirit that not one sentiment or word could be objected to by even the brother whose methods are so frankly criticised; yet I have thought it best to give no reference to either the preacher or writer.

METHODIST.

Selections.

CHANGE YOUR MANNER.

To the preacher who is in the habit of presenting the truth in a harsh, censorious and antagonizing way to his hearers, I say, change your manner. I care not though your message be full of gospel truth, you are sure to weaken its force and lessen its fruitfulness by declaring it in a stern and severe manner. Some ministers, because they are confident that they are on the side of pure gospel truth, think that they are warranted in presenting it with sledge-hammer blows, especially to all who oppose what they consider to be the truth. Such preachers are quite inclined to ridicule and berate those who differ from them. This manner is decidedly wrong. It often defeats the true purpose of preaching. It tends to stir up animosity, not only to the preacher, but also the truths which he preaches. One great reason why various errors gain an influence over people is because those who preach them, or teach them, do so in a very pleasant, smooth, and inoffensive manner. They do not abuse those who differ from them. They will say that others are wrong, that they are in error, but they refrain from speaking roughly about them. And one reason why many advocates of the Prohibition party have failed to win any considerable number to them from the ranks of the temperance people is because they have heaped abuse upon Christians and Christian churches.

One scarcely ever hears a Prohibitionist make a speech without hearing him scornfully berate Christians and churches. Granted that such a cause is most worthy, and, therefore, deserves the support of all temperance people, yet the manner in which its interests are presented is, in many instances, very bad, and it operates very seriously against the cause.

The way to get favors from one's neighbor is not by misusing them, not by speaking harshly to them, but by kindly and respectfully asking them for them. So there is very much in one's manner in preaching the gospel. One can loyally preach a full gospel without carrying a club in the pulpit. One can be a true soldier of Christ without using a sword to cut off the ears of the opponents. —C. H. Wetherbe, in St. Louis Advocate.

BETTER OR WORSE.

"Is the world growing better or worse?" We know there are very many encouraging and hopeful evidences and signs. In the field of invention and discovery, rapid transit, electric lights, cathode rays, our floating ocean palaces, Pullman cars, and perfected machinery of whose products the middle classes and even the poor get the benefit, so that people in moderate circumstances can have conveniences in their homes which a king could not have purchased one hundred years ago. The poor man can go five miles for five cents in a street car within much less time and with more comfort than the proud millionaire jolts over cobble stones in his carriage. Benevolent and reform organizations are in this age almost numberless. Hospitals have never been so numerous, and they are for all classes of sufferers. Orphanages are everywhere, and free schools abound. In strong evidence is the blessed work of the deaconesses. The Salvation Army's drumbeat is heard the world around. Christian young people are banded together by the million. Five million dollars are given yearly for foreign missions. Church members of all kinds number 25,000,000. The Methodists are building four churches a day. Hear the arbitration talk. Notice the prolongation in the average term of human life. Many other indications which we have not the space to name will doubtless occur to the reader. No wonder that those who look only on this side of the question see only brightness.

On the other hand, the pessimist is not altogether without foundation for his wail. Think of the destruction with opium in China, and rum in Africa, during this century, and both inflicted by Christian nations. There was spent in our own country for intoxicants in 1896, $1,196,878,422, and for tobacco $600,000,000, while the expenditure for flour was only $345,000,000. There were, according to the Philadelphia Press, in 1892, in the 17,000 jails and 52 penitentiaries 900,000, and the criminal expense is not less than $100,000,000. The secretary of the New York Prison Association says that while the population is increasing 20 per cent., crime is advancing 33⅓ per cent. Insane asylums are overcrowded, and the margin between marriages and divorces has so decreased until, in some communities like San Francisco, the ratio of divorce to marriage is one to five. In the United States, in 1897, there were 10,000 homicides. And what a horrible array of suicides every morning in the daily papers!

As to whether the world is getting better or worse, we are inclined to answer both better and worse. The real citizens of the kingdom of Christ on earth, inside and outside the visible church, we believe to be growing better, and rising year by year to a higher and nobler standard of life, while the real citizens of the kingdom of Satan are getting worse as the years go by.—St. Louis Advocate.

PATIENCE LEADS TO POWER.

A gentleman who had occasion during a recent tour in Italy to study the methods of the best teachers of vocal music said on his return: "The great thing in Italian music study is that one learns to work quietly without the feverish anxiety for immediate success. The Italians understand that after all voice-training is a matter of muscles, which must be worked daily, gently, gradually, to accomplish the best results."

This principle here involved is applicable to all educational plans and enterprises. As a class, our American students are too much in a hurry, too eager to finish a hasty course of school instruction, too anxious to get out into the world. Their "feverish anxiety for immediate success" hinders them from making or executing any plans which have success in the long run, and of a high grade, in view. Young men of sense, who have the ministry of the gospel in prospect, for instance, will do well to consider the folly of a policy of haste in the case, which means meagre and inadequate equipment, paucity of intellectual resources, mental faculties lacking in discipline, a narrow foundation for the work of life, and at the last an outcome wanting in the richer, larger, and nobler fruitage of life. The fields are indeed white unto the harvest as we look about us, but what God needs is not mere laborers, but trained, skilled, consecrated, disciplined men and women, who will approve themselves to their Master, to themselves, and to the world, as workmen who need not be ashamed. It is the voice of wisdom which says to the young man who looks forward to the itinerancy, "Take plenty of time for scholastic preparation!"—Central Advocate.

THE MINISTRY OF THE RELIGIOUS PAPER.

A religious paper should be in every home, and by this we mean a denominational paper representing the church to which the family, or members of the family, may belong. It should be read by every member in the home who can read. Parents who fail to provide the home with such a paper are recreant to a sacred obligation, the fulfillment of which is essential to good influence in the home. It is better to be deprived of some things which may be considered "necessaries" than to be without good reading.

The church member who does not read his denominational paper will soon become shriveled, narrow, anti-missionary, and then go into "innocuous desuetude." On the other hand, a church member who reads, and becomes an agent in his church for a religious paper, is a benefactor. He is performing a service for Christ and the church which is second to none. A pastor who will from time to time call the attention of his people to important articles, special numbers, and will urge upon his congregation the value and need of taking a religious paper, and will then follow it up with a little earnest solicitation, will strengthen himself among them. They will become informed, appreciative, and responsive to the denomination and to Christ.—Arthur T. Fowler, in The Standard.

PASTOR WITH ONE EYE.

"A good man and his wife, who are members of the Henson household of faith, have felt for some time that their pastor would be much improved if the lame eye could be made whole like unto the other. These persons are firm believers in the faith-cure theory. Why should their beloved pastor not have two good eyes as well as one? They went to see him about it.

"'We have been praying for you that you may have two perfect eyes,' they said to the Doctor, 'and have now come to pray with you. Will you not ask the Lord right here and now to give you a new eye?' Dr. Henson's reply was startling. 'What kind of teeth have you?' he suddenly asked the brother. 'Why—why, that's a strange question,' he stammered; 'but I don't mind telling you that my teeth are mostly false.' 'What kind of teeth do you use, sister?' he asked of the other. 'Same kind,' she frankly admitted. 'Well, good friends,' rejoined the Doctor, 'you go and ask God to grow some new teeth in your mouths. According to your theory, he will do it without delay. When you get your teeth, come around and we will see what can be done about that new eye!' This happened some little time ago, so report saith. The good people are still grinding on artificial molars, and Dr. Henson still looks down on his great congregation with one eye. But he can see farther with that bright optic than most people can with two."—Northwestern Advocate.

Emphatic commendation should be given to the superior quality of our Sunday-school literature. Dr. Atkins and his able corps of assistants are furnishing our schools with the choicest matter and the "Home" is sending it out in most attractive form. How mistaken the motive that will induce a school to subscribe for the namby-pamby productions of irresponsible publishers, because it is cheap!—Baltimore Advocate.

HARVEST HYMN

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Once more the liberal year laughs out
O'er richer stores than gems or gold
Once more with harvest song and shout
Is nature's bloodless triumph told.

Our common mother rests and sings,
Like Ruth among her garnered sheaves;
Her lap is full of goodly things,
Her brow is bright with Autumn leaves.

O favors old—yet ever new!
O blessings with the sunshine sent!
The bounty overruns our due,
The fullness shames our discontent.

We shut our eyes, the flowers bloom on;
We murmur, yet the corn-ears fill;
We choose the shadow, but the sun
That casts it shines behind us still.

God gives us, with our rugged soil,
The power to make it Eden fair,
And richer fruit to crown our toil
Than Summer-wedded islands bear.

Who murmurs at his lot to-day?
Who scorns his native fruit and bloom,
Or sighs for dainties far away,
Beside the bounteous board of home?

Thank heaven, instead, that freedom's arm
Can change a rocky soil to gold;
That brave and generous lives can warm
A clime with Northern ices cold.

And by these altars wreathed with flowers,
And fields of fruits, awake again
Thanksgiving for the golden hours,
The early and the later rain.

THE FATHERHOOD OF GOD.

BY J. A. PARKER, D. D.

By the expression, "Fatherhood of God," I understand the implied brotherhood of man. That both ideas are clearly taught by the Word, there is, to my mind, no doubt. "The sons of God" implies the Fatherhood of God. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God." "If sons, then heirs of God, and joint-heirs with our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." A "joint-heir" is an equal heir—heir to the same father, the same inheritance—"our Father which is in heaven." Revelation brings to us no more sacred and cheering truth than this, that "one is your (our) father, even God."

It is not, however, so much this aspect of the truth that I want to speak of as another equally received among men, but, to my mind, not so well supported by the Word. To prefix the great word "universal" to the Fatherhood of God, or the brotherhood of man, is, to my mind, of doubtful propriety.

True, there is a sense in which this is true of both animate and inanimate organisms. God is "the father of the rain"—"the father of the spirits of all flesh." "All things are of him, and by him all things exist."

When the Master said to the Pharisees, "Ye are of your father the devil, and his works ye do," he did not place evil-doers on the same plane of sonship with those who are "born again"—"begotten unto a lively hope." Nor did he recognize similarity of relationships between them. Those who "are born of God" are the "sons of God"—"we be brethren!" "To as many as believed on him, to them he gave power to become the sons of God." Had all men been "sons of God," it would have been impossible to give them "power to become" what they were before. Nor would it have been necessary for them to "believe on him" in order to become what they had always been.

Other and more elaborate conditions to sonship are laid down by our Lord in Matt. v, 44, 45; so in v, 9. "Ye are all the children of God by faith" (Gal. iii, 26); "by faith," not by creation, we are "children of God." "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God" (Rom. viii, 14). This passage, like many others, excludes from sonship all who follow else than the "Spirit of God." I refer also to II. Cor. vi, 17, 18; Rom. viii, 16, 17.

There are many people who do not love the Savior. To such he says, "If God were your father, ye would love me."

In Romans ix, 8, there are words which seem to me ought to settle the question of the Fatherhood of God. "They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God."

As I look over these, and many other passages of Scripture, my mind runs out on the following lines: All men are not children of God, and hence there can be no such thing as the universal Fatherhood of God, or universal brotherhood of man. All men may become "children of God by faith"—sons of God—and hence universal brotherhood is a possibility of the future.

One of the saddest thoughts that cross my mind is the complete orphanage of a poor sinning soul! No God—no Father—to pity or help. Yet, if not a complete orphanage, a sonship a thousandfold worse than orphanage. A father—a liar, a murderer, a cruel master which entices but to destroy—whose highest aspirations for his children is their utter ruin, their eternal wreck.

"In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil; whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother"—"not of God!" What, then, if "not of God?" "Ye are of your father the devil, and his works ye do" (John viii, 44).

In a creative sense there is a universal Fatherhood. Job xxxviii, 28, "Hath the rain a father, or who hath begotten the drop of dew?" Heb. xii, 9, "The Father of spirits." But in such relationships there are no stronger ties between man and man than between man and "the drops of dew." The higher sense of the brotherhood of man—the "Fatherhood of God"—is expressed by St. Peter (I. Pet. i, 3), "Who hath begotten us again unto a lively hope." This truth is fitly capped by John (I. John v, 18), "He that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not."

This is the great lesson which the Lord taught Nicodemus, "Ye must be born again. . . . That which is born of the flesh is flesh"—sustaining creative relation, but without any real "kinship of the Spirit."

"Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him." "Like him." What an infinite reach of hope is here extended to us! Like the Son of God, because we are sons of God. "All are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ's is God's." Sons of God to be like the divine Lord—possessing all things! Having all glory—"kings and priests unto God." Spiritualized, crowned, immortalized, glorified! Raised above all powers, all forces, above all worlds, borne on and on till all the sons of God "sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven," domiciled forever in "our Father's house."

THE HUMBLE ORIGIN OF SOME GREAT MEN.

Jeremy Taylor, the greatest preacher the Anglican Church ever produced, and the author of "Holy Living and Dying," was the son of a barber.

Francis Asbury, the great leader of the pioneer forces of American Methodism, was the son of a gardener, and himself served the apprenticeship of a saddler.

Kitto, the biblical scholar, was the son of a bricklayer, and in this humble sphere he began to lay the foundations of biblical learning.

George Fox, whose feet were shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, was the son of a shoemaker.

Haydn, the sweet singer, was the son of a carpenter.

Luther was the son of a poor miner, and in early life often sang from door to door for his bread.

Claudius Buchanan, whose "Star in the East" led Judson to Burmah, was a poor boy picked up by John Newton and recommended to a rich man as worthy of an education.

Socrates, the Athenian philosopher, was the son of artisans, and was himself an artisan in his youth.

Jacob Bohme, the German philosopher, was born of poor parents, and was apprenticed to a shoemaker in early youth.

Dr. R. J. Gatlin, the inventor of the famous Gatlin gun which fires two hundred shots per minute, was born a poor boy on a North Carolina plantation, and for several years labored for his own bread.

Shakespeare sprang from humble origin, his father being a butcher and grazier, and he himself in early life being a wool-comber.

Marlowe, the predecessor of Shakespeare, was the son of a Canterbury shoemaker.

Samuel Richardson, the distinguished author of Pamela, Clarissa Harlowe, and Sir Charles Grandison, dealing respectively with English life in its humble, higher, and aristocratic circles in the eighteenth century, was a London printer in early life.

Samuel Johnson, for forty years after the death of Pope the greatest personal force in English literature and criticism, and the dominant power in the literary circles of London, was the son of a poor bookseller in Lichfield.

John Keats, the moving principle of whose poetry is the worship of beauty, was the son of a London hostler.

William Cobbett, who became one of England's most powerful political writers, was the son of a common day-laborer.

Thomas Carlyle was the son of a thrifty, hard-working stone mason.

Charles Dickens was the son of a clerk in the Naval Pay-Office, and from his early struggles and privations he obtained the knowledge upon which he so largely drew in his description of the poor and outcast.

DEAR SISTER: We must keep our cause up to flood-tide mark if we can hope for extension. A river that overflows has risen above its banks. The heart that overflows in blessings upon humanity is full of the love of Christ—so full it must reach others. We are praying that our coming week of special services may result in our own spiritual uplift, in increase of memberships, in large contributions. We have the sure word of promise—the promise of power—if we are willing. We need the power. We are willing, are we not? There is, then, nothing to hinder our having it. With the spiritual power, all things else will be easy.

We have much for which to be thankful. First of all, we are not satisfied with what we have done, and, thank God! we want to do more for him in the extension of his kingdom. We are thankful for opportunity to work—for the open doors and beckoning hands so anxious to receive us. We want to enter these doors and clasp these stretched-out hands, and, with God's approbation, we will. We are so glad we have answered many calls; we are glad we have entered Korea; so glad that Mrs. Campbell writes hopefully. Our new home and school in Seoul was consecrated the first day of the recent Conference there, and the Bishop approves of our extension in the little kingdom, and appointed Miss Hinds to Song-do. We are glad that our missionaries in China are doing such noble work; that they are happy and being blessed of God. Every school is full, and many natives are coming to Christ, because they are being told of him. Our Mexico missions are making wonderful progress, and the joys of salvation are filling many hearts. Brazil is moving onward and upward. The new work in Sao Paulo is already showing signs of progress. Cuba needs us, and is inviting us to come. All these things make us glad, and more than ever before our thanksgiving comes from overflowing hearts. Let us be glad in the Lord, but let us bear in mind that we must bear the ark of the Lord. It can not move forward without us. It should be in front, and supported by willing hands. Note the disbursements and collections this year. In two quarters we have disbursed $49,829.97, and collected but $30,253.48, leaving to be collected $68,512.52 by March, if we meet our appropriations. Our Missionary Advocate is much involved, and as it is needed to nourish our societies if they flourish, we should come to its help. So of the Little Worker, which should be in every family and in the hands of every child in the family.

God grant we may meet all our obligations, may meet our dues, our pledges, our specials, and be ready for a rapid extension in all directions! We have now some scholarships in our Indian Mission, and need more in Mexico. Please, if possible, send each auxiliary a copy of this letter by Nov. 20, the beginning of our Week of Prayer and Thanksgiving. Read Num. vi, 24, 25, 26.

Sincerely, S. C. TRUEHEART.

The Christian Life.

THE MOST IMPORTANT THING ABOUT US.

Not only socially, but individually, character is the most important thing about us. It is character that makes the difference between one human being and another; a difference as real as that between an oak and a pine, a block of granite or a reach of shifting sand; and an understanding of the character of those with whom we have to do is a far more important thing than appears at first sight, for it involves all the elements of justice and happiness. For, if we rightly estimate the character of our children, and friends, and servants, we shall not ask of them what it is out of their power to render, any more than we should ask a willow tree to hold its branches upward. Moreover, we should try to make the special gifts they do possess tell to the utmost within their proper sphere and capacity. To insist upon our land bearing a certain grain, when it has not the soil for that grain, is to lose not only the crop we plan for, but also the humbler one it could have grown.

Now, the study of character is not a written science. The characters of men drawn in books have consistency, and, if we met such people, we should know just how to manage them. But people out of books are not consistent, and the same man in sickness and health, in company and alone, shows very differently. Which of us know ourselves so well as to be sure of what we should feel or do if we were suddenly taken out of our present circumstances? There is always something in all of us of which we have no consciousness, and which will be laid bare only by some unusual event.

Our estimates of character are too often full of false measurements. We see a man eager to help upward the poor and ignorant, and instantly label him a socialist, though, in reality, he is a lover of the law, and conservative in all his feelings. A woman loves color, and we decide that she is frivolous, because she prefers the tints of the rose or the gentian; or, if she is merry, we think she has a head without brains. A man is positive and sincere, and we call him a "fanatic," or he has some flashes of enthusiasm, and we say, "O, an imaginative, sentimental man;" or, if on some occasion he is solid and calculating, we label him a precise, narrow person, of possibly limited intellect. And usually there is no use in protesting against such injustice. Yet this superficial labeling of people prevents a man or woman from being judged for what they are worth; for nine-hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand, if they heard anyone called a socialist or an infidel, would be incapable of doing him justice. Even if the injustice were proved, the mere fact of having been so charged would "stick;" for the world in general insists on arranging the multitude in line and order.

The real question about character is not, then, what has a man done, or what does he do, but—what is he? Morality is the salt of character; is he morally sound, and how deeply are the distinctions between right and wrong implanted in his nature; how far can we rely on them in his conduct? Yet character can not be all salt. We ask something more from our fellow-creatures than moral conduct. The ethical standard leaves out of count many of the fine qualities which make the person lovable and delightful. To judge only by morals is like describing the form and color of a flower, and saying nothing about its perfume and virtues—the very things which give it charm and interest.

There is a quality to which we give the general name of "force or flavor of character." It is not in itself an attribute, but it colors all other attributes. Thus we say a man is industrious, but how is he industrious? Is he busy in a right or wrong way? Does he potter about trifling matters, or do great works? Above all, is he penetrated by that indescribable fineness of temper which makes the difference between an admirable industry and one that is commonplace and selfish?

This flavor and force of character is a difficult thing to explain, but it is what gives savor and individuality to a person. It made Paul quite unlike the other apostles; it gave that rare transcendence to Augustine, and that massive force to Luther, and that subtle wisdom to Erasmus, which sets them apart for all time. We respond to it in the writings of great men in all its variety, but we feel it most keenly in our intercourse with the people who come in contact with us. One person enters our presence and stirs us till all our pulses beat to swifter pace and fuller purpose; another comes in, and soothes and pleases us. Every person worth anything has an atmosphere which he pours around him, and not to be sensitive to this living force of character is to write ourselves down among those cold blocks of humanity Carlyle calls "formulas and phantasms."

The charm of this force or flavor of character is its variety and its individuality. Whoever possesses it can not be taken for another person. Lincoln was always Lincoln, Grant was always Grant, Beecher always Beecher. Charles Lamb took his quaint, frolicsome humor with him wherever he went; the presence of Coleridge in a room was indisputable, and we are surrounded by men and women who "flavor" any room into which they enter. These are the people who make the happiness of life, and who give charm and color to all its monotony and dry details.

A man's character is the outcome of his motives. This is what Coleridge means when he says, "It is the man that makes the motive, and not the motive that makes the man." Probably there are in every nature two conflicting motives, to one of which the preponderating quality will be given by years of submission to it. Thus a boy is hot-tempered, and loves to quarrel. He indulges this temper all the days of his youth, and manhood finds him aggressive and intolerant. For some years he may domineer over his acquaintances, but finally he meets his equal in temper, and the result is murder and death. The boy was not born to give this unnatural preponderance to one evil quality. We might as justly say he was born to look east, and not west; it was his own fault that his second nature had him in its fatal power.

Is it true, then, that a certain nature will only bear a certain fruit, and that, if a child is born naturally weak, he will yield to despair; or, if born quarrelsome, to passion? There is no such necessity. Every nature has its provided antidotes. There are sure to be some latent qualities that may be called forth to counterbalance the evil one, or the child may already have qualities which only need careful cultivation to act as deterrents. But when an evil character has once been formed, only the grace of God can develop the other side. Men try change of circumstances. It is always a failure. A man may go into the ministry, or marry, or go away to a strange country, but character made up of thousands of daily repeated acts won't be changed by a single outward process. In such cases, there is no conversion without a special interference of Divine Grace. Taking care, or thought, will not add a cubit to the moral nature, any more than to the physical stature.

But consider this fact—that the whole of Revelation has one grand intention, to develop in man the character of Jesus Christ. Consider also that "grace to help" in the cultivation of this character is abundantly and graciously promised. Desire and obedience are all that are required; then the weak and the unruly, by degrees, shall be taught the "wondrous things of his law," for "So is the kingdom of God, as if a man should cast seed into the ground, and should sleep and rise, night and day, and the seed should spring and grow up, he knoweth not how;" so grows in mortal, sinful men desiring it, with sure advance, the mind of Christ.

Who are able to mold their characters after this noble pattern? Each and all—through Christ strengthening and helping us.—Amelia A. Barr, in Success.

Old age is lovely as seen in a life of more than fourscore years, brightened by a Christ faith, and rich in peace and joy.—Solon W. Bush.

GOD'S PLAN FOR YOU.

Go to God himself, and ask for the calling of God, for as certainly as he has a plan or calling for you, he will somehow guide you into it. And this is the proper office and work of his Spirit. By this private teaching he can show us, and will, into the very plan that is set for us. And this is the significance of what is prescribed as our duty, namely: living and walking in the Spirit; for the Spirit of God is a kind of universal presence, or inspiration, in the world's bosom; an unfailing inner light by which, if we accept and live in it, we are guided into a consenting choice, so that what God wills for us we also will for ourselves, setting into it as the needle to the pole. By this hidden union with God, or intercourse with him, we get a wisdom or insight deeper than we know ourselves; a sympathy, a oneness with the divine will and love. We go into the very plan of God for us, and are led along in it by him, consenting, co-operating, answering to him we know not how, and working out, with nicest exactness, that good end for which his unseen counsel girded us and sent us into the world. In this manner, not neglecting other methods, but gathering in all their separate lights, to be interpreted in the higher light of the Spirit, we can never be greatly at a loss to find our way into God's counsel and plan. The duties of the present moment we shall meet as they rise, and these will open a gate into the next, and we shall thus pass on trusting and securely, almost never in doubt as to what God calls us to do.—Canadian Churchman.

FOR THE YOUNG PREACHERS.

If I were young again, I would strive to be, not in the low, vulgar, selfish sense, but in the high, self-forgetful sense, a popular preacher. I would toil for this as I would for virtue itself. If graces of speech would make me such, I would cultivate these. If youthful enthusiasm would draw men to me, I would keep my heart fresh and young for a hundred years. If simplicity of style and manner would effect it, I would practice the severest simplicity. If going among the people would help me, I would fling aside all conventionalities and reclusive habits, and go from shop to shop, and tenement to tenement, till my soul was saturated with the thoughts and feelings of lowly men. If a new baptism of power were needed, I would plead for that till I received the fresh anointing. I would exhaust all possibilities that I might win the scattered, listless multitudes to listen to the gospel I was ordained to preach.—Bishop Ninde, in New York Advocate.

A poor old widow, living in the Scottish Highlands, was called upon one day by a gentleman who had heard that she was in need. The old lady complained of her condition, and remarked that her son was in Australia, and doing well. "But does he do nothing to help you?" inquired the visitor. "No, nothing," was the reply. "He writes me regularly once a month, but only sends me a little picture with his letter." The gentleman asked to see one of the pictures that she had received, and found each of them to be a draft for £10. That is the condition of many of God's children. He has given us many "exceeding great and precious promises," which we either are ignorant of or fail to appropriate. Many of them seem to be pretty pictures of an ideal peace and rest, but are not appropriated as practical helps in daily life. And not one of these promises is more neglected than the assurance of salvation. An open Bible places them within reach of all, and we may appropriate the blessing which such a knowledge brings.—D. L. Moody.

I have long since ceased to pray, "Lord Jesus, have compassion upon a lost world." I remember the day and the hour when I seemed to hear the Lord rebuking me for making such a prayer. He seemed to say to me, "I have had compassion on a lost world, and now is it time for you to have compassion."—A. J. Gordon.

God looks upon temporal matters as subordinate to higher good. Men look upon them as if they were the highest good obtainable. God puts his service and the duties of religion above everything else, while men too frequently regard religion as a secondary consideration.—Rev. J. W. Phelps.

Health, Voice, Appetite and Strength Failed—Completely Restored by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Last year my health failed entirely. My limbs were so weak that I could scarcely walk. I had no appetite and suffered with constipation. My voice failed me in the pulpit. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and very soon I saw a great improvement. In the winter I was attacked with the grip which left me weak and prostrated. I went back to my old friend, Hood's Sarsaparilla, which seems to be the thing for me." REV. C. S. BEAULIEU, pastor Christian church, Lowellville, Ohio. Remember.

FOR THE ADVOCATE.

WE THANK THEE, GOD.

BY JULIET DOWR HARMON.

We thank Thee, God, for brave, bright land,
Our fair Columbia, newly crowned;
For vict'ries won on tropic seas,
And on the sun-scorched battle-ground.
We thank Thee for the starry fleg,
O'er trodden islands, high unfurled;
That strife has ceased, and, lo! the dawn
Of smiling Peace breaks o'er our world!
For ardent blood that bravely coursed
The veins of Dewey, Hobson, Eine—
For valor'e deeds, whose fame shall ring
The never-ending ages through.
But O, just God, we thank thee most
For heeding cries of anguished pain,
The loosing of the prisoned slave,
The breaking of the captive's chain;
And on this glad Thanksgiving Day,
With hearts erstwhile beneath the rod,
We thank Thee most that they can swell
The pæan of praise: "We thank Thee, God!"

REV. J. B. WARE.

Rev. J. B. Ware was born Aug. 14, 1814, in Wilkes county, Ga.; joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1822; was married to Margaret E. Calhoun, Sept. 27, 1838; was licensed to preach about 1853, and ordained deacon in 1857 by Bishop Paine, at Washington, Wilkes county, Ga. He died Sept. 28, 1898. His dear companion departed this life April 29, 1892. Seven children, six sons and one daughter, were the result of their union. All survive them to mourn their loss, except one son, who died in early childhood.

We have lost a good, kind father, and faithful friend; and not only was he kind and true to us, but so loving and faithful to our little ones. Our dear old father has laid his tattered and dust-laden garments down for beautiful robes of immortality. A few days before he died, he said that he had told the Lord if there was anything more He wanted him to do, he was willing to do it; but if not, he would be glad that He would take him away. He was always ready to give good counsel, and work for Jesus any and everywhere.

IN MEMORIAM.

Jesse Lewis, eldest son of Rev. Thomas W. Brown, of the Mississippi Conference, was born near Woodville, Miss., July 18, 1855, and died at the parsonage home of his father in Ocean Springs, Miss., Oct. 18, 1898. His mother's full maiden name was Mary Parmelia Smith—a woman of rare intellect and culture, refined by grace.

It is not wonderful that from a home thus blest with mental and spiritual influence, so many genuine Christian men and women should have gone forth to bless the church. Of the three sons two are efficient itinerant preachers. Jesse would also have been one but for overweening modesty concerning his abilities. When yet a boy, and while reading the life of Hester Ann Rogers, he was converted. He early felt the movings of the Spirit calling him to preach. But conferring, perhaps, too much with flesh and blood, he went into secular work and pursued it diligently for years—mostly in Louisiana. As so often happens in such cases, he did not prosper as he might have expected. In his last days, when lack of health forbade his yielding to the early "call," he deeply deplored his failure to respond: "Here am I." This haunted him even on his dying pillow. He said to loved ones near him, "If God spares me, I will take a Bible and hymn book and start out to do all I can."

His natural disposition and this Jonah spirit made him quite reticent about his religious experience. Few were aware of the real religious life hidden beneath this reserve. A genial companion to those who met him at the home, he took special delight in communing with nature and tending the wants of the inferior animals. The brute creation found in him a considerate friend. His love of farmyard denizens was strong and constant.

His last years were spent delightfully with father and "Sister Nettie"—a narrowed circle of genuine and intense family affection. It is pleasing to know that many friends in that kind community ministered at his couch in the last days and comforted the stricken hearts left behind. To these he was supremely grateful. He repaid their kindness in the best way possible by urging them not to make the mistake which brought him so much regret in the dying hour; disregarding the call to highest service. May all who read this learn the lesson he would teach. So our dear "Brother Jess," though leaving us for the brighter world, may speak to us and call to full obedience.

We rejoice that his dying testimony was full of consolation to his bereaved family. May we all meet him

"Where the night dissolves away
Into pure and perfect day."

J. P. DRAKE.

MRS. E. R. M. TERRY.

Mrs. Eva Roberta Middleton Terry died at Thomastown, Leake county, Miss., Oct. 6, 1898. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Middleton, of Yazoo county, Miss., and was born Sept. 20, 1870. On April 27, 1898, she was happily married to Rev. W. A. Terry, of the Mississippi Conference.

Her girlhood was spent near Midway Church, and her education was acquired in the Midway High School under the instruction of Mrs. McCormack and Prof. and Mrs. R. Gildart. Being of a docile nature and possessing a bright mind, she learned well and progressed rapidly. While quite young she manifested an aptness to teach, and, choosing teaching as her work, she soon became a first-grade teacher, and until her death she was regarded as one of the best teachers in the county. So well did she do her work that she was re-elected to the same school five years in succession. She often said: "I shall teach until I find something better to do," meaning something more useful to her fellowmen. So when she was asked to become the wife of a Methodist preacher, she accepted, believing that in the itinerancy she would have a wider field of usefulness for God and man. For five short months she labored side by side with her husband, and she was so hopeful of their success for the Master. But, alas! how often it is that:

"Hopes perish, which have hung like wreaths
Around youth's buoyant brow,
And joys fade like withered Autumn leaves
Dropped from the shaken bough."

In early life she professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South, and lived a consistent member until death. The same faith that sustained her in life was an anchor to her while crossing the river of death. She was ready to go, willing to stay, but resigned to the will of Him "who doeth all things well." So, then, she is not dead. God's children never die.

"There is no death! What seems so is transition.
This life of mortal breath
Is but the suburb of life elysian,
Whose portal we call death."

No, dear Eva,

"Thy pure spirit went not to the tomb
To mingle its brightness with its dust and its gloom;
But onward and upward thy soul took its flight

To her bereaved husband I would say: Preach the Word, look to the same Christ you preach to others, in whom your loved one died and with whom she lives. To her aged parents and brothers and sisters: "Let not your hearts be troubled;" be patient, be faithful, that we may meet and be an unbroken family in that realm where the rainbow never fades,

"Where beauty never dies,
Where love becomes immortal."

W. B. MIDDLETON.

Satartia, Miss., Oct. 25, 1898.

FROM THE WORK.

Mrs. M. A., Canton, Nov. 14, 1898: "While refugeeing from yellow fever, I visited the inmates of the Sharon parsonage. It is occupied now by that saintly man of God, Rev. F. M. Williams, and his sweet, loving, trustful wife, who so willingly abides 'by the stuff' while he goes out to give out the 'Bread of Life' to his people. I was in that pastorate all my life until the last decade, and the parsonage still feels dear to me; and to make it still dearer, it is built from the lumber of my 'alma mater.' Bro. Williams not only administers to his flock spiritually, but some of God's poor can testify that he administers materially. Before I left he asked me to walk around and look at things (as he knew I was interested in the parsonage). He had set out quite a nice young orchard—the first fruit trees I have ever known to be set out there, although many much younger than he is have lived there. If those younger brothers had been as provident as he, he might have eaten the luscious fruit that some of them will eat at some future day, the work of his hands. I admired his beautiful poultry. He began to call, and fowls came from every direction, and as fine a flock as I ever saw. He then showed me his stable, planned and mostly built by his own hands. He says that is 'multum in parvo'—three stalls, buggy shed, and a place for forage. I sincerely hope he may be sent back to enjoy the fruits of his industry. If not, I hope some younger preacher has done the same to improve the parsonage they live in, so that Bro. Williams will not have so much to do when he is again moved. He is honored by his people as a faithful, fearless man of God, and I hope every young preacher will follow his example in improving the parsonage grounds and making it more attractive to the incoming preacher. May God abundantly bless Bro. Williams and his sweet, confiding wife, and may they each wear a crown of rejoicing, is the wish of their visitor!"

NOTES FROM COMO STATION, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

I am finishing my second year in this delightful and prosperous charge, and this is the best of the two. An advance has been made along all the line. Will report "Everything in full, Bishop," and quite an increase in membership. A hundred-dollars advance in pastor's salary over last year. Have all the collections in cash, at this date, and am ready for Conference. The good ladies of the Home Mission Society have made some improvements in the parsonage in the way of linolenm for the hall floor and new shades for the windows, etc. If I am not returned, the preacher who does come will find a pleasant home, loyal people, a royal welcome, and have less trouble in meeting all financial claims than in any place it is my privilege to know anything about. May we have a spiritual feast at Conference, and have the pleasure of meeting the editor of our ADVOCATE! Bishop Duncan is here (visiting relatives) on his way home from his Conferences in Mexico, and preached for us Sunday, to the delight and edification of us all. We enjoy very much his visits, which occur about twice a year.

R. O. BROWN, P. C.

There was a time, years ago, when the ministerial tone was thought to be an added attraction in the delivery of a sermon. In the backwoods, and elsewhere, a lugubrious groan, a sing-song whine, and a sanctimonious oracular style, once had a certain sort of power to impress people. These tones, used in prayer and in preaching then, seemed to the congregation to be extraordinarily religious, and even trite stuff, or mere bombast, spoken with a pious, falling inflection, appeared to many people almost prophetic, if not apostolic, in its authority and power. To-day the ministerial tone is with difficulty tolerated anywhere; if a preacher succeeds who is afflicted with it, and who chronically inflicts it upon his congregation, he achieves success in spite of his infirmity. He ought to be admonished, instructed, and, if need be, ridiculed, until he learns to be simple, manly and straightforward in his habits of speech.—Central Advocate.

Many a Christian destroys his peace and usefulness because he is not willing to do little things. He wants to speak and pray well, eloquently, edifyingly, or not at all. Because he can not do some great thing he won't do anything. He must sit in the highest seat or nowhere. Now, no one is fit to do great things unless he is willing to do little things. He must be faithful in the least, or he will never be useful in the greatest. If all were willing to add a little to the interest of a meeting, a Sabbath-school, or to the strength and influence of the church, there would not be so many praying to be excused. Happy is the man who is willing to do a little, the servant of all, a door-keeper, bell-ringer, fire-builder, lamp-lighter—anything that will serve Christ in the house of God.—Exchange.

To merely have eternal life is not enough. With the reception of this life there at once comes the obligation to make the life larger in volume within us and larger in its outgoing from us. By no means is it to be allowed to remain in the heart in the same measure as at first received. The anxiety of far too many Christians is to make certain of retaining just what of eternal life they received in conversion; but the anxiety to be continually emphasized is that of giving larger room in their hearts for the life to occupy, and also especially larger liberty in its working out in all fullness and fruitfulness.—Epworth Herald.

The out-and-out Christian is a joyful Christian. The half-and-half Christian is the kind of Christian that a great many of you are—little acquainted with the joy of the Lord. Why should we live half way up the hill, and swathed in mists, when we might have an unclouded sky and a visible sun over our heads, if we would climb higher and walk in the light of his face?

During the visit of Li Hung Chang, the "Grand Old Man of China," to this country, the New York Sun said of him: "He is a large, strong, impressive specimen of manhood. He has a massive frame, a shapely head, a commanding face and well posed features. He is a keen observant of mankind, of life and of things. He is seventy-four years of age and still in the hey-day of his power."

If a Chinaman, usually regarded by us as a barbarian, can live to a healthy, hale old age, why cannot Americans, with their more advanced civilization, do the same? The reporters discovered during Li Hung Chang's stay in this country, that he took every thought for his health. He lived upon the simplest of diets and never passed a day without consulting his physician. He limited his toil to a reasonable number of hours, and would not deviate from his rule in this matter. American men follow just the opposite practice. They work to the limit of endurance, will not even take the proper time for eating, resting and sleeping, and never think of their health until it is gone. There is a wonderful medicine for hard-working men. It is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It takes the place of a physician. It keeps away ill-health and restores health when it is lost. It is the great appetite sharpener, blood-maker and flesh-builder. It makes the digestion perfect, the liver active and the blood pure and rich. Medicine dealers sell it.

"My husband had been a robust young man," writes Mrs. M. J. Tedder, of Ellington, Reynolds Co., Mo. "When he was 31 years old he began to cough very hard. He had pains through his chest and lungs. His mother and the rest of his family had died with consumption. He continued to cough every winter, until in 1883 he had an attack of pneumonia. His cough grew worse and worse. He would vomit immediately after his meals. In 1888 he coughed night and day. He was getting very weak and had no appetite. He commenced Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets.' He improved. His appetite got better. When he had taken seven bottles he looked like a new man and felt like a new person. He weighs more than he ever weighed before. He gained twenty-eight pounds and is cured."

Best Edition of the World's Best Book,

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers. New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to December, '99. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

SELF-PRONOUNCING

S. S. Teachers' Reference Bible

Text Conforms Exactly to the Oxford Teachers' Edition.

The self-pronouncing text enables the reader to pronounce all proper names at a glance.

This Bible is printed from Large, Beautiful and Clear New Type. All Proper Names are Divided into Syllables and Every Vowel is Marked and the Syllables Inflected, showing the Sounds and Accents as they are given in a Dictionary, thus enabling the reader to properly pronounce every word. This feature is a great improvement and a strong recommendation for this Bible over others.

This Bible contains the celebrated Oxford Teachers' Helps together with a complete series of New Maps illustrating the geography of Palestine and the surrounding countries from the earliest times, and embodying the most recent discoveries renders this Bible especially desirable to teachers and students of the Holy Scriptures.

Imperial Seal Binding, Tuck Edges, known as "Divinity Circuit," Linen Lined, Round Corners, Red under Gold Edges, Price, $4.00.

This book in Bourgeois type will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price ($4) to any address; but to that select class who read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, we furnish it on the following terms: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, viz., to December, '99, and we will send it to you, postpaid, for $1.75. (A little later you will have to pay to January, 1900.)

The same Bible in Minion type will be sent for $1.55; in Emerald type, for $1.15, to those who pay a full year in advance.

For fifty cents additional we will send Bible with index. For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved on the outside in gilt letters.

In God's own might
We gird us for the coming fight,
And strong in him whose cause is ours,
In conflict with unholy powers,
We grasp the weapons he has given—
The Light, and Truth, and Love of Heaven.
—John G. Whittier.

Tribulation is the price we pay for the robe and the crown at the palm.—Bishop Hurst.

Sunday is the golden clasp that binds together the volume of the week.—Longfellow.

We ought to be ten times as hungry for knowledge as for food for the body.—H. W. Beecher.

Don't wait for extraordinary opportunities; seize common occasions and make them great.—Selected.

There is no happiness in having and getting, but only in giving; half the world is on the wrong scent in the pursuit of happiness.—Henry Drummond.

Every honest occupation to which a man sets his hand would raise him into a philosopher, if he mastered all the knowledge that belonged to his craft.—Selected.

Life is short, and we have never too much time for gladdening the hearts of those who are traveling the same dark journey with us. Oh, be swift to love, make haste to be kind!—Amiel.

I have seen a man managing a prosperous business house from which a well-trodden path led to a saloon. A little while and I have seen another managing in his stead.—Selected.

There is a Sunday conscience as well as a Sunday coat; and those who make religion a secondary concern put the coat and conscience carefully by to put on only once a week.—Dickens.

Keep the soil of life soft, its sympathy tender, its imagination free, or else you lose the elementary quality of receptiveness, and all the influences of God may be scattered over you in vain.—F. G. Peabody.

What is the world? To the scientist it is a great machine to be examined and explained; to the pleasure-seeker it is a banquet to be enjoyed; to the Christian it is a multitude to be saved.—Presbyterian Banner.

To character and success, two things, contradictory as they may seem, must go together—humble dependence and manly independence; humble dependence on God and manly reliance on self.—Wordsworth.

On the roaring billows of Time thou art not engulfed, but borne aloft into the azure of Eternity. Love not Pleasure, love God. This is the Everlasting Yea, wherein all contradiction is solved; wherein whoso walks and works, it is well with him.—Carlyle.

If we look down, then our shoulders stoop. If our thoughts look down, our character bends. It is only when we hold our heads up that the body becomes erect. It is only when our thoughts go up that our life becomes erect.—Alexander McKenzie.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE MEETING.

The three patronizing Conferences—the North Mississippi, the Mississippi, and the Louisiana—conduct the affairs of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE through a committee composed of three representatives from each Conference. The entire committee was present at the annual session, held Nov. 9, and investigated and discussed in a very thorough manner the management of the paper, in both its business and editorial departments.

The paper was found to be in excellent financial condition. Notwithstanding business depression and the quarantine, Dr. Black has steadily reduced a debt which has long been hanging over its destinies, and in another year will liquidate it entirely, paying off every cent of both principal and interest. No new debts have been incurred, or are apt to be incurred. It will be glad news to its friends when the announcement is made that the paper is permanently out of debt.

Encouraging were also passed on the editorial conduct of the ADVOCATE. A few suggestions were made to Dr. Black as means whereby a larger paper easily might, in the committee's opinion, be secured, but they covered minor points of detail, and not the larger questions of general policy. It is, perhaps, needless to say that Dr. Black was continued as editor and publisher, in harmony with the action of last year's session.

The remarkable financial success of the publisher is accentuated by the dereliction of duty on the part of one hundred thousand Methodists who are the immediate clientele of the paper. Its patronage is far too small, and many of its subscribers are slow to pay their subscriptions. Until there is very substantial assurance of a greatly increased subscription list, it is manifestly impossible to reduce the subscription price. There should be certainly not less than twelve or fifteen thousand Methodists on its lists out of the one hundred thousand who acknowledge the ADVOCATE as officially entitled to their support.

Through the generosity of the Louisiana Conference, which originally established the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, the paper is well housed near the business center of the city, and pays no rent. This gift of the Louisiana Conference represents, perhaps, $600, or more, per annum to the paper. Under the articles of incorporation, the Publishing Committee is "domiciled" in New Orleans, and there is no power vested in them to modify the charter. It was recommended by the Publishing Committee that this fact be noted in the annual report, to prevent or remove any possible misapprehension on the subject of the powers of the committee.

The session was very pleasant and harmonious, and all felt that there was much reason to congratulate the patronizing Conferences on the condition and prospects of their official organ.

R. W. BAILEY.

THE SEASON OF THANKSGIVING.

Our great Republic has her Independence Day, her Washington's Birthday and other national holidays, commemorating great events in our history, but worthier far than any of these is the day appointed for national thanksgiving. As some one has wisely said, "Not that our thanks are to be uttered only on special occasions, but the special occasions help us to be grateful all the time, to fill the whole life with grateful love: just as religious Sabbaths help to fill all days with the religious life: and just as set hours of prayer help to pervade the life with the spirit of prayer." The observance of a special day of thanksgiving serves to impress upon the whole nation, as nothing else would, our dependence upon God as the Father of mercies and the Giver of all good, causing men of all classes and conditions to thoughtfully consider at least once a year the goodness of God and the honor that is due to his name. Celebrated late in Autumn, it corresponds in a measure with the Jewish feast of thanksgiving.

Not until men pause and reflect upon what God has done for them can they rightly appreciate his infinite love or experience that gratitude which seeks expression in hymns of praise and in acts of love and kindness. Multitudes lack the spirit of thankfulness because they do not take time to meditate upon God's mercies: like the brutes, accepting them unthinkingly as their due. "The forgetful and insensible man takes all as a matter of course. He builds a pyramid to his own self-conceit, and inters God's mercies therein."

How appropriate and beneficial, then, it is to have one day annually set apart for the giving of thanks during which the onward rush of commerce is stayed, ordinary occupations are forgotten, and rich and poor, young and old, unite in a mighty anthem of praise to one common Lord, who presides over the destinies of nations, and "who gives us richly all things to enjoy."

As citizens of the most enlightened and prosperous nation on the globe, we have cause for the profoundest rejoicing. The civil and religious liberty which we enjoy constitute a possession of priceless value. Our noble civilization, based as it is upon Christianity, exhibiting the most wonderful educational and industrial advantages, the most marvelous inventions and the most far-reaching humanitarianism the world ever saw, should inspire the loftiest feelings of gratitude.

We would be ungrateful indeed were we not to give thanks to God for the return of peace to our country, and for the success of our arms in the late war for the deliverance of the Cubans from Spanish oppression. Short and decisive, it was a war almost unprecedented in the annals of the world. On our side not a battle was lost, not a ship sunk; not a soldier was captured, not a cannon or a stand of arms was taken by the enemy. God seemed to fight for us.

While some evils have overtaken our people, especially those who live in the South, let us not imagine that the sky is wholly dark, and that we have nothing to be thankful for. Though the staple production, cotton, is discouragingly low in price, it should be remembered that most of the necessaries of life are low in proportion, costing only about half what they did a few years ago. Food crops have been abundant, and there is no lack of the necessaries of life. Hard as the times may seem to some, these are days of luxury in comparison with the period of the Civil War. While the yellow fever and the quarantines have caused much distress in this section, we ought to rejoice because of the unparalleled mildness of the disease and the very early appearance of frost.

If our hearts are right with God, we can find even in misfortune abundant cause for thanksgiving. Paul said: "We glory in tribulations also, knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience, experience, and experience, hope." Oliver Goldsmith says that one of the happiest persons he ever saw was a slave in the fortifications at Flanders—a man with one leg, deformed and chained. Though he was serving a life sentence, and had to labor from dawn till dark, he laughed and sang and appeared to be perfectly contented and happy.

Every true Christian ought to cultivate a habit of thankfulness; yet scarcely any duty is more neglected. Instead of "giving thanks in everything," many complain at everything. The temptation comes to us all to pray for additional blessings rather than to thank God for those he has already bestowed. Yet who can declare all the mercies of God? Who can measure the priceless blessings that come to us through the mediation of Christ?

Our observance of thanksgiving will be deficient if we spend it in selfish feasting and merry-making, with little or no concern for the poor and the afflicted. "We ought not to feast within drawn blinds, and forget the shivering and starving, who grope helpless in the dark outside." We should remember the widow and the orphan, and "send a portion to those for whom nothing is prepared."

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT IN BRITISH METHODISM.

The home mission work now being carried on by our brother Methodists across the sea in London and other large cities of England is a striking illustration of the adaptability of Methodism, and a signal demonstration of the saving, civilizing power of the gospel. Begun about twelve years ago, partly as the result of an awakening produced by a stirring article by Mr. Stead in the Pall Mall Gazette, headed "The Bitter Cry of Outcast London," "the forward movement," as it is called, is an attempt by the church to reach, regenerate and uplift the depraved multitudes who live in the slums and neglected districts of the cities, amid squalor, poverty, and vice of almost inconceivable extent. For a time, it seems, British Methodism had forgotten her grand mission to the poor and the outcast classes, work among which in Wesley's day was the chief glory of the church; but the sympathetic, self-sacrificing spirit that imbued Wesley and his co-workers has again revived, and under the leadership of Dr. Hugh Price Hughes has developed into a movement of extraordinary power.

Such missionary effort has become more and more imperative on account of the very remarkable growth of cities both in Great Britain and in the United States during the last fifty years. London alone now contains upwards of five million souls. Many of our American cities are increasing their population at a rate that is truly marvelous. It has been noted in all the cities that as the population becomes congested in the "down-town" districts, the more well-to-do people move to the suburbs, and there build houses of worship, while the churches and chapels left behind decline in attendance, and in resources and influence. In consequence, the lower classes, crowded together like cattle, and no longer feeling the power of the gospel or the sympathetic hand of the church, have fallen victims to low amusements, intemperance, vice and godlessness to such a degree as to become practically heathen. In London especially has this state of things come to pass. As Dr. J. C. C. Newton, in speaking of "The Forward Movement," points out in The Review of Missions, for November, "along with other dire conditions, the large majority of this population has become thoroughly unfriendly to the churches and ministers, having been taught by their leaders that the church is their enemy."

In London three large missions have been enterprised in the very centers of destitution and degradation, exhibiting in their sphere of operation almost every phase of philanthropic endeavor, such as the care of the sick, the relief of the poor, temperance reform, rescue work, reading clubs, industrial bureaus, savings banks, dispensaries, and "creches."

The mission of each mission is a large hall, into which hundreds may be gathered, located near the population it is desired to reach. Several of these halls now being erected in London and Edinburgh will cost upwards of $125,000 each, and are adapted, so far as modern skill can make them, to the physical, social and spiritual needs of the lower classes. From the beginning music of the best character has been employed to gain the attention and attendance of the unsaved multitudes. Saturday nights, as a counter-attraction to the saloons and low theatres, first-class musical concerts are given, which are attended by thousands of eager listeners. In the great parks open-air services are held on Sunday and also on week-days.

Of the results of this work Dr. Newton says: "The three great branches of the London Mission in twelve years have secured twenty-two buildings, in which twenty thousand sit under the preaching of the missionaries on the Sabbath; fifteen ministers have been set apart to this work, and twenty lay assistants; seven thousand are in class meeting, and they contribute $5 per head, or more than $30,000 every year, for the work. So much on paper; the rest is written in the Lamb's book."

The same kind of work that is being done by our kinsmen across the sea is needed in our own cities.

On account of the general drift of population to the cities, and the combination of evil influences there met with, the evangelization of these centers of population is a duty of tremendous importance. So grave are the problems presented by municipal corruption, by intemperance and social impurity, that the church can no longer afford to pass by the slums, and shun the haunts of poverty and infamy. As Washington Gladden pertinently says in a strong article on "The City and Home Missions" (also in this month's Review of Missions): "You are not going to control these populations by liquor laws, or Sunday laws, or any other kind of laws enacted by rural influence and imposed upon them from without. The people themselves have got to be changed in their ideas and central purposes."

The problem here presented is one of the gravest with which the Christianity of the present day has to deal. It is one which should touch the heart, and stir the conscience, and enlist the energies of the church universal.

EDUCATION IN THE UNITED STATES.

The annual report of the United States Commissioner of Education for the year ending June 30, 1898, is highly gratifying to those who regard education as the best method of advancing Christianity and all moral reforms. The report says: "One cause for congratulation on the part of those who hold the doctrine that popular education is the safeguard of our American institutions is the continued prosperity of the elementary schools. The increase during the year 1896-97 amounted to 257,896 pupils over the previous year; the total enrolled in the elementary schools amounted to 15,452,426 pupils. Adding to it those in colleges, universities, high schools and academies, the total number reached 16,255,896." The report shows that the amount of schooling received per individual, averaging the whole United States, is about five years of two hundred days each; in a few of the States it reaches seven years. More than one-fifth of our entire population attended school at some time during the year specified. The increase of students in colleges and universities has been steady and rapid during the last quarter-century. In 1872 only 500 persons in each million of our population were enrolled; in 1897, 1,216 in each million were enrolled, and this great increase has occurred during a period in which the standard for admission to college has been raised to an extent requiring an average of at least a year's more work in preparation. To be the best educated nation on earth is an ambition worthy of Americans, and one that is being rapidly attained.—Christian Intelligencer.

BISHOP CANDLER IN CUBA.

Bishop Candler started to Cuba last Thursday night, and will spend some time in examining the condition and needs of that field. You may expect to hear from him and to hear the true state of the situation. There has been much ado about the war we had with Spain in behalf of the suffering Cubans, and there is much to be grateful for in that connection. Our President is commended for his fidelity in the matter, and our soldiers for their bravery and skill, and they deserve it all. But here is a call upon the army of the Lord that is even more important and imperative, and will require as much or more heroism. Will the army of the Captain of our salvation prove itself as valiant as did that of the United States? Will this demand for men and means, where so much more is involved, be responded to with less promptness and fidelity? Can the church of God afford to be less self-denying than the rule of Cæsar? The appeal is extraordinary, let the response be prompt and free.—Wesleyan Advocate.

MR. EDITOR: Rev. C. R. Godfrey—one of our superannuates—died Friday morning at four o'clock, the eleventh instant. Bro. Godfrey had passed his seventy-fourth year. His last days were days of much sorrow and affliction, but through all he maintained his integrity, believing that God does all things well. Bro. Godfrey was sick for about three weeks before his death, and expressed himself as being ready for the change. He anticipated his death about two weeks. He was buried at the Olla Cemetery this morning (twelfth day) at eleven o'clock, with the services of the church and Masonic honors. We ask the prayers of the church and brethren in behalf of the bereaved family. May God sanctify their loss to his glory and to their salvation!

S. S. BOGAN.

Olla, La., Nov. 12, 1898.

NOTES.

Rev. F. G. Hoentt, of the Louisiana Conference, was in the city a few days.

***

Our readers will be pleased to read the article of Prof. Sullivan concerning the revival now in progress at Centenary College.

We invite special attention to the notice of Rev. J. A. Bowen anent the Mississippi Orphans' Home.

***

In a previous issue our types made Bro. D. P. Bradford say "three" good ladies when he intended to say "the."

***

A thanksgiving service will be held at Parker Memorial Church on Thursday night. This will not interfere with the union thanksgiving service at Felicity at 11 A. M.

***

At the recent National Convention of the W. C. T. U., Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, of Maine, was elected to the presidency. Miss Anna Gordon, who was for many years Miss Willard's private secretary, was elected vice-president at large.

***

A reopening service will be held in our church at Algiers on Sunday, Dec. 11, at 3 P. M. The sermon will be preached by the presiding elder, Rev. S. S. Keener. The church has been thoroughly renovated and very much improved in appearance.

***

Rev. S. B. Beall, of the Louisiana Conference, let the light of his genial face shine into our sanctum on Tuesday last. He has had a decidedly prosperous year at Morgan City and Berwick. More than fifty persons have been added to the church. The finances are up in full. A beautiful church has been erected at Berwick and paid for.

***

Rev. J. S. Hutchinson has been elected editor of the Baltimore Advocate in place of Rev. G. H. Zimmerman, deceased. As it has been only a few months since Bro. Hutchinson resigned this position, his election is quite complimentary. He wields a strong and sprightly pen. We extend him a cordial welcome into the hard-working fraternity.

***

Rev. R. N. Price having resigned the editorship of the Midland Methodist, the vacancy has been filled by the election of Rev. J. A. Lyons. Bro. Lyons is a man of admirable character, and a vigorous writer. Having filled the position of Assistant Sunday-school Editor for a number of years, he is well and favorably known throughout the church. Dr. W. M. Green is assistant editor. Dr. Green is a man of large resources, and wields a forceful pen.

***

"Rev. Peter Plodder did not stir up much dust at the beginning of the Conference year, nor did he say much about what he was going to do. But he attended strictly to business, gained every week, and ended gloriously. We were at Conference when his report was given. The Bishop smiled, the presiding elder rubbed his hands, and two or three of the other brethren shouted, 'Hallelujah!'"—Epworth Herald.

Our observation has led us to believe that the best work in the church has been done by the Peter Plodders.—Baltimore Advocate.

Rev. H. W. Knickerbocker preached his farewell sermon at Louisiana Avenue last Sunday night. Every seat was occupied, and quite a number stood during the entire service, while others were turned away. His Conference assessments have been paid in full, and some of them overpaid. He has received forty-three persons into the church during the year. Concerning his pastorate for the last two years, we quote as follows from a recent issue of the Picayune:

Under his earnest, intelligent direction, the prestige of Louisiana Avenue Church rapidly increased, and the results were manifest in the large number of accessions to the congregation, the membership augmenting fully fifty per cent. in two years. The church is now in a flourishing condition, every department being in smooth running order, and the attendance has been greater than ever was known in the history of the church. Dr. Knickerbocker laid special stress on the Sunday night services, preaching on some theme of popular interest, and in that way he succeeded in bringing out prominently the Sunday night service, and attracting a larger congregation, on those occasions, than in any other Methodist Church in the city.

A reception was given to him by the ladies of the church on Tuesday night, at which he and his family received a number of substantial tokens of the high appreciation in which they are held.

KRAKAUER. WEBER. PIANOS. JUNIUS HART, MUSIC AND MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS. EMERSON. HARDMAN.

A REPLY TO DRS. JONES, BALLARD, AND REV. T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Dr. Robt. E. Jones, of Crystal Springs, in an article in the ADVOCATE, of Nov. 3, in speaking of the State Board of Health and the experts, said, "As I am not one of the physicians thus engaged, I feel it a duty to say a few words in their defense."

By such language the doctor admits that they needed a defense. Right is a defense itself, and, therefore, if their proceedings had been right, that would have been defense enough.

But the doctor, in speaking of me, said, "Asserting that Boards of Health, and the physicians employed by them, are not men of skill in the medical profession."

Such language as this of the doctor does not occur at all in my article, and I challenge him to show it. Why, therefore, did the doctor use it as mine? He seems to deplore harsh criticisms much, but makes an exception of himself in criticising me harshly, and intensifies the harshness of his criticism by misrepresenting me. Let the doctor consider his own harsh criticism, and see how he will look to himself.

Dr. J. C. Ballard, of Natchez, in an article in the ADVOCATE, of Nov. 17, said: "In reply to the strictures of Dr. Peebles, I will say that all of our trouble this year is directly traceable to the false statements and silence of the Louisiana health authorities. Had they dealt with us fairly, there would have been no spread of the disease or epidemic in Mississippi. We would have excluded people from the State, and no fever would have entered here."

Now, I wish to say to the doctor that my knowledge of the fever leads me to say that I do not believe that it came from Louisiana at all, and, too, that I do not believe that it can be proven that it did. At any rate, I challenge any man to prove that the Hattiesburg fever came from New Orleans. I believe that the fever was the product of the filth of the locality where it existed. I am satisfied that such was the case with Hattiesburg, and Dr. Ballard's own words convince me that the same was true of Natchez, for he said, "When we first found the fever here, on South Canal street, it was quickly cleaned up, and there have been no other cases in that neighborhood." Why did the doctor, as a health officer, not see that that street was cleaned up before and kept cleaned? It was his duty to see that it was done, and can he not see from his own philosophy, too, that if this had been done, there would not have been a single case of fever, and he would not have afforded himself an opportunity to censure the Health Board of Louisiana? Let the doctor think a little before he attempts replies hereafter.

Again, just to argue a little with the doctor, suppose we admit that it was contagious, and, too, that it entered our State from Louisiana. He claims that if the health authorities of Louisiana had been fair, "we would have excluded people from the State, and no fever would have entered here."

Now, we should like to know of the doctor that after it did get into our State, since he is so certain that our health authorities would have controlled it if the same authorities of Louisiana had been fair, why it was allowed, as our health authorities published, to go from place to place. Why did they not stamp it out when they had a fair chance? The doctor says again: "The reason we had so few cases was owing to our 'expert' report. The people stopped visiting, kept their children at home, and stayed out of the night air, all churches were closed at night, and everything done to prevent people gathering in crowds."

Now, we should like to know of the doctor where is the common sense of such things when a good cleaning up, as he has already admitted, ended the fever at once? Was it done to show off and try to make a big thing out of nothing? Why did you not have Natchez cleaned up and let the experts alone and let the people be free and easy? Say, doctor, do you not think Dr. Jones will have to defend you?

Bro. T. B. Holloman gets into a sentimental float and tumbles over a cataract, heels and all. In speaking of a quarantine system, he says: "I am of the impression that the whole matter should be better relegated to the medical journals and to those who have some knowledge of what they write. No class of men receive more kindness from any other class than does the ministry from the medical fraternity; then why this sharp criticism?" Now, just listen at him. He says: "The experts called the disease yellow fever. As such, it spreads in every case, and yet the experts are ridiculed, and the disease is called yellowoid (a patent subterfuge behind which to seek shelter)."

In the first place, we notice that Bro. Holloman claims the whole matter should be discussed in the medical journals, and that, too, by those who know what they write, and yet he discusses it himself, and that, too, in the ADVOCATE; and, in the second place, he speaks of the kindness of doctors to ministers, and asks the question, "Then why this sharp criticism?" and then utters the most scathing criticism of doctors, and especially Dr. Sonchon, president of the Health Board of Louisiana, when he says, "The disease is called yellowoid (a patent subterfuge behind which to seek shelter)." He seems to have forgotten that Dr. Sonchon, who gave the name "yellowoid" to the fever, is a doctor, and too, very likely he is as good to preachers as any other doctor. Why now after all does Bro. Holloman pat one doctor on the back tenderly and then slap another in the face furiously?

In conclusion, I wish to say that I have at heart the welfare of all and, therefore, feel free to speak out what I think is needed, always ready to controvert a disputed point whether in theology or medicine.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

I am sure the friends of our college have been gratified to know that the current session opened so satisfactorily. Despite adverse conditions confronting us at the start, everything is now auspicious.

We note with great pleasure the larger number of preachers' sons among our students. The proportion is greater than during any previous session. This is significant. As long as our preachers stand by the college, its future is safe. Of course, we can not hope that the attendance this session will be as large as it would have been but for the interruption. This will affect our income from tuition fees. I hope, therefore, that special effort will be made to collect in full the amount assessed for education in our two Mississippi Conferences. W. B MURRAH.

MISSISSIPPI ORPHANS' HOME.

The Orphans' Home has been open for nine months. During that time 35 children have been received into the Home and well cared for. Others will soon be admitted, because they have been accepted. This will remind all the friends of the Home that it takes money to support these orphans. Owing to needed improvements being carried on during the year, the treasury was low when yellow fever appeared in the State. Since that time the income has been largely specials. Remembering that it takes five dollars a month to feed and clothe each child, it will appear that we should help this institution either on Thanksgiving Day or at our regular services. I appeal to pastors and all other friends to respond at once. Send contributions to Rev. M. L. Burton, Water Valley, Miss. The Lord does remember those who remember his helpless ones.

REV. H. W. KNICKERBOCKER.

Resolved, By the Preachers' Meeting of New Orleans that our social and ministerial associations with the Rev. H. W. Knickerbocker for the past two years have been most pleasant, and that we regret his transfer to the Los Angeles Conference, and that we part with him reluctantly.

MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We hereby say to the brethren that it is our purpose to put the Bishop and presiding elders as near together as possible, and also to home the feeble, crippled, visiting and elderly brethren as near the Conference as possible.

Brethren coming by private conveyances will have to be homed in the extremes of the town, in order to accommodate their horses, but this should not alarm any brother, for the farthest home will be within a mile, except one which is not more than one mile.

After this announcement it will be too late to arrange for the wives of our brethren who may have purposed to come. We requested the brethren to let us know early if their wives were coming, so we could make the necessary arrangements.

RETURNS ABOUT ALL IN.

MR. EDITOR: Some time since I concluded to sound the minds of the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference on the district question, and forthwith sent out 154 return postal cards with the following questions:

Do you recommend any change in the number of presiding elders' districts of our Conference? If so, how many do you think best? Do you think it necessary for presiding elders to attend four Quarterly Conferences in each pastoral charge?

Of the 154 inquiries sent out, 126 have been returned up to date, with the following results: For larger districts, 59; for no change in districts, 45; for smaller districts, 13; of no opinion, 7.

'Tis to be hoped that the proper authorities will give us seven good, strong districts at our next Annual Conference. W. S. SHIPMAN.

Dr. Beverly Carradine came to us on the twelfth, and since that time has been preaching for us twice a day. Such preaching I have never heard in my life! Oh, how he helps one to see Jesus as a perfect Savior! Myself and wife have swept into the blessing of entire sanctification. My best men and women are professing the blessing. We feel sure that God is going to give us a sanctified Board of Stewards, and in a large degree a sanctified church. I now wonder that I ever fought the doctrine of entire sanctification as taught by Dr. Carradine. I wonder now how any Methodist can fight such a precious divine truth. CHRISTIANITY BY RAIL.

Some months ago the Illinois Central inaugurated the idea of allowing operatives to become stockholders in the road by depositing a percentage of their salaries every week for stock. This move was followed by many other roads. Now the Illinois Central has adopted another new feature, which will doubtless prove as beneficial to the operatives. That is the doing away with barrooms in the company's offices throughout the country, and the establishment of branch organizations of the Young Men's Christian Association all over the system. This move is in line with the other, and shows that the Illinois Central is interested alike in the moral as well as the financial success of its operatives. Indeed the operatives of a railroad to-day are very different sort of men from those who took care of trains twenty-five years ago. Now a conductor must be a gentleman in every sense of the word, and even a brakeman must have a good reputation. In the olden days the tougher a conductor was the more his services were appreciated. But the character of the traveling public, too, has changed, which probably accounts for the change in the character of the operatives.

These innovations on the Illinois Central are all instigated by President Fish, who is impressed with the idea that the best way to control the men operating his road is to show that the management is interested in their welfare.—Picayune.

A MALARIA POISONED LIVER will also cause as great a change in physical life. Sunshine will leave the face. The eye loses its sparkle; while the skin assumes a dull copper tint. These are least of the evils and merely bespeak the external cry that Nature gives when battling with Malaria germs. Headache, Nausea, dullness of thought, pain in the back and side, a coated tongue, a horrible taste, are among the danger signals which if unheeded portend CONGESTION, CONVULSIONS, SUPPRESSION OF SECRETIONS AND TERMINATION OF LIFE.

Far easier than the solution of the social problem is the remedy for Malaria—DICKS' CHILLIFUGE absolutely exterminates it. A Few Doses, and health spreads her wings over the grateful system, and the sun shines once more, while life is worth the living.

Home Circle.

LOVE.

BY ALLISON O. DERRING.

"To sweeten life as we meet and part,
We need but remember this:
To carry always a tender heart
For the tiniest thing that is.

"The wider the circle of love we make,
The happier life we live,
And the more we give for another's sake,
The more we shall have to give.

"So let us widen it day by day
By loving a little more,
Till nothing living be shut away
From a share in the heavenly store."

CULTIVATE A SWEET VOICE.

There is no power of love so hard to keep as a kind voice. A kind hand is deaf and dumb. It may be rough in flesh and blood, yet do the work of a soft heart, and do it with a soft touch. But there is no one thing it so much needs as a sweet voice to tell what it means and feels, and it is hard to get it and keep it in the right tone. One must start in youth, and be on the watch night and day, while at work and while at play, to get and keep a voice which shall speak at all times the thought of a kind heart.

But this is the time when a sharp voice is more apt to be gotten. You often hear boys and girls say words at play, with a quick, sharp tone, as if it were the snap of a whip. If any of them gets vexed, you will hear a voice which sounds as if it were made up of a snarl, a whine and a bark. Such a voice often speaks worse than the heart feels. It shows more ill-will in tone than in words. It is often in mirth that one gets a voice or a tone which is sharp, and which sticks to him through life, and stirs up ill-will and grief, and falls like a drop of gall on the sweet joys at home. Such as these get a sharp home voice for use, and keep their best voice for those they meet elsewhere; just as they would save their best cakes and pies for guests, and all their sour food for their own board. I would say to all girls and boys, "Use your best voice at home." Watch it by day as a pearl of great price, for it will be worth more to you in the days to come than the best pearl hid in the sea. A kind voice is a lark's song to heart and home. It is to the heart what light is to the eye.—Epworth Herald.

GLADSTONE AS A RELIGIOUS FORCE.

Gladstone dwelt "in the secret place of the Most High," and abode "under the shadow of the Almighty." His outward reach to humanity was heartfelt and wide. None the less, he lived in the presence of the Unseen. Like the Puritans of old, he saw the hand of God in all the events of life. To him earthly distinctions were of no account.

Here, at last, is a man who stands, like the great pyramid, four-square to the world—a man greater than his occupation or profession, larger than his country. No one thinks of asking how much money Gladstone left. In him appeared something larger than money—a Crœsus in character, a millionaire in manhood.

A leading English journalist declares that Gladstone's voice carried more weight on any moral question than those of the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, and all the Episcopate combined.

John Bright once asked, in a speech: "Who is there in the House of Commons who equals him in knowledge of all political questions? Who equals him in earnestness? Who equals him in eloquence? Who equals him in courage and fidelity to his convictions? . . . If they (his adversaries) can add dignity and grandeur to the statue of Gladstone, let them prodnee him." What a legacy is this of example, of simplicity, of earnestness, of character, of devotion, and of nobility! For more than half a century his mighty personal force has throbbed vigorously, not only in his nation's history, but in the history of the world.—Success.

The following from an exchange teaches a good lesson, and is worthy of very thonghtful reading: "Two ladies, both well dressed and evidently belonging to the higher walks of life, were going along a city street, when one of them stopped and spoke a word or two to a dull, tired-looking woman who had a fretful-looking baby on one arm and a basket on the other, in which she had a few bananas and apples and cheap candy for sale. 'Why, Helen,' said the other lady, 'what made you stop and speak to that woman? What did you say to her?' 'Oh, nothing much. It was jnst a word or two by the way; that was all. She looked so tired and discouraged, and I stopped to give her a few pennies and say a word or two to her.' A few minutes later the two ladies were in one of the great stores of the city, where they made some purchases, and while they waited for their change the lady who had spoken to the apple woman entered into conversation with a sales-girl, and gave her half a bunch of violets. When the two ladies were on the street, one of them said: 'Why, Helen, how could you be so familiar with that shop girl? What were you saying to her?' 'O, not much of anything. It was jnst a word by the way. I thonght that she looked tired and a little ill, and she said that she did have a severe headache. Did you notice how she brightened up when I gave her the violets?' A word by the way! A kindly deed by the way! How many burdens would be lightened, how many heavy hearts would be gladdened, how much weariness would be forgotten, how smiles would take the place of frowns, how much more beautiful and how infinitely better the world would be if every man and woman, every boy and girl, lost no opportunity of speaking a kindly word or doing a good deed by the way! Try it for a single day, and see if it is not one of the happiest days of your lives. It mnst be so, because it will have the mark of God's approval upon it. He takes heed of every good thing said or done in his name. It is all recorded in the book of his remembrance.—Gospel Advocate.

GRACEFULNESS AT HOME.

There is a nice art in being able to pay a compliment gracefully, and it is one that ought to be cultivated in the home as well as the onter circles of society. There is no reason why the home circle should not be as polished and attractive in its behavior as the pnblic assembly. It is a great error for fathers and mothers to permit such a relaxation of politeness among their children as we too often find under the family roof-tree.

Company behavior and company manners may necessarily be more formal and precise than those of the fireside and sitting-room, but it is fatal to good breeding to deliberately lay polish and compliment aside when our dear ones compose the company exclusively. Teach the children to say graceful things—yet truthful things, of course—to brothers and sisters, as well as to strangers; to be as careful of wounding their feelings and their self-respect as they would be of the feelings of a guest, and at the breakfast or dinner table to take just as much pains to entertain and enlighten each other as though the entertainment of a party of invited friends depended upon the effort.—Forward.

READ THE GREAT POETS.

Every young person should have a poets' corner on his bookshelf. If you have only six books, let two of them be books of poetry. You can not find more elevating companionship. Have care in selecting your poet friends. Do not read poetry for the beauty of the verse, but for the nobility of the sentiment. Everything that is not definitely uplifting should be avoided. Let Longfellow and Lowell and Whittier and Bryant, as kingly a quartet as the world has ever produced, be your poetical companions. Read them eagerly. Read them thoughtfully. Soon you will find yourselves growing heavenward in aspiration and outward in sympathy, loving more and more all that is good and true. Then add Tennyson and Shakespeare for culture and a comprehensive knowledge of the infinite variety of character in our race. Then get Wordsworth to help Bryant bring you close to the charms of nature. Burns and Byron and Scott and Holmes and many other singers will follow. Let the solid structure of knowledge be ornamented with the grace of verse, and illuminated by the inspiration of the seers.—Epworth Herald.

POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE.

"My aunt was always saying to me: 'Don't talk so loud; your voice gets shriller every day!'" said a pleasant-voiced friend. "I became so nervous and irritated under this chronic rebuke that my voice was more uneven and harsh than ever, and I hardly dared speak at home. At last I visited my cousins in L.—— (they are noted for their sweet voices, you know), and then snddenly I noticed the wide difference, which I had never understood before, between a rough voice and a well-modulated one, and set myself, so to speak, to catch the trick of their intonations and their tones. In a month's time, really, I talked like a different girl. And when I came home my aunt said: 'Well, I am glad to see that at last my reproofs have made an impression upon you, Clara?' But they hadn't, you know—the only impression she made was to make me unhappy and nervous. I have never forgotten the lesson."—Harper's Bazar.

A dear mother lay dying, and her oldest son, as he knelt by her bedside, cried: "You have been a good mother to us." The dying woman opened her eyes, and, with a feeble smile, whispered, "You never said so before, John," and she was gone. If we have kind words to speak, let us speak them now, while our loved ones are yet with us. If we have loving deeds to do, let them be done to-day. Flowers on coffin-lids and epitaphs on tombstones bring no cheer to the living. And how often they but contrast the more strongly with the absence of the gifts and the kind words while onr dear ones lived!—New York Evangelist.

We ought never to be willing to live any year just as we lived the last one. No one is striving after the best things who is not intent on an npward and a forward movement continually. The circular movement is essential, too—the going around and around in the old grooves—routine work, daily tasks; yet, even in this treadmill round, there should be constant progress. We ought to do the same things better each day. Then in the midst of the outward routine our inner life ought to be growing in earnestness, in force, in strength, in depth.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

"You write of the broken family circle, and my heart weeps with you. But are we not one family yet? Do we not part every night? One retires to rest before another; the separation gives us no pain, because we believe we shall meet again refreshed in the morning. And shall we not meet again bright and glorious in heaven's fair morning? Shall we not reunite the broken fragments of our loved family in a better world, in a truer, safer home than this? We are going as fast as possible to rejoin them."

Many a good housewife turns her parlor into a sort of Paradise, which only a select few are permitted to enter. This is one extreme. Many another turns her whole house into either kitchen, bed-room or sewing-room, and makes home very commonplace indeed. This is the other extreme. The former should be taught that a Paradise without inhabitants is useless; the latter that a home without beauty, order, or arrangement, loses its attraction for the immates.—Ex.

It would be well for all wrongdoers to remember a remark once made by a little boy to his father who was meditating a theft of potatoes out of a field. The father looked east, west, north and south, and seeing no one, began to pull up the roots. "Father," said the lad, "there is one way you forgot to look!" "Where?" asked the alarmed man. "Up, father."—Anon.

Hygiene.

ALCOHOL IN TYPHOID FEVER.

To those who recommend the use of brandy in fever cases we present the record of some of the most eminent English physicians. The time was not so long ago when the treatment was about as fatal as the disease.

In 1864 Prof. W. T. Gairdner, of Glasgow, writing to the Lancet, gave his experience as follows:

Fever cases treated.	Average of wine and spirits to each.	Mortality per cent.
1,829	34 oz.	17.69
595	2½ oz.	11.93
212	none	1 death only

These were mostly typhus cases, but the rationale, so far as alcohol is concerned, is the same as in typhoid.

At the British Medical Association, in 1879, Prof. H. McNaughton Jones gave particulars of 340 cases of typhns, typhoid, and simple fever.

	Cases.	Deaths.	Mortality per cent.
Given brandy	58	19	32.7
Given claret	51	2	3.8
Given no alcohol	231	4	1.7

Dr. Knox Bond writes to the Lancet (Nov. 25, 1893), giving his experience of typhoid at the Liverpool Fever Hospital. He says: "As a resident for some years in the fever hospitals, my views of the value of alcohol in fever underwent, solely as a result of the experience there gained, entire modification. The conviction became forced upon my mind that in no case in which it was used did benefit to the patient ensue; that in a proportion of cases its use was distinctly hurtful, and that in a small, but appreciable number of cases the resultant harm was sufficient to tilt the balance as against the recovery of the patient."

In plain terms, alcohol tended to the destruction of the patients. Dr. Bond's figures are:

	No. of cases.	No. of deaths.
Given alcohol	71	18
Given no alcohol	309	15
	380	33

CROWSON—The wife of Rev. F. L. Crowson, formerly Miss Annie Hubbard, was born at Platteville, Ala., Sept. 3, 1877. In early childhood her parents moved to Meridian, Miss., where the most of her life was spent. At the age of sixteen, in October, 1897, she was thoroughly converted to the cause of Christ. Shortly after she realized a carnal nature, that warred against the Spirit, still remaining within, and that it was assisting the Tempter in endeavoring to bring her into subjection to sin. She also, through the light of the Spirit and the Word, was enabled to realize that there was a fountain open in the house of David for all uncleanness. Thus realizing, she repaired a second time to this fount, and came forth cleansed from all sin. Henceforth she constantly remained under the blood, and was enabled to sing:

"The blood, the blood, 'tis all my plea;
Hallelulla, now, it cleanseth me."

At conversion she united with the M. E. Church, South, in which she remained a consistent, obedient member and a useful Christian until death. She was loved by all who knew her, for truly "to know her was to love her." Her humble, meek, every-day Christian life enabled her to wield an excellent influence over her associates, especially over her young lady friends. She was ever ready to reprove sin, and to offer Christ as the only remedy for sin. In her home, where every phase of life is exhibited, she was regarded by all as a deeply pious Christian. When her trials and troubles came she would carry them to Christ and leave them, and in the midst of the worst she wore a smiling face. This was not the sunshine of home only, but she helped to lighten many a troubled breast or downcast soul by her bright, simple, implicit and unyielding faith in Jesus. She was always cheerful, and delighted to sing the songs of Zion. Her favorite themes were the love and mercies found in Jesus. In private or public she was ever ready to bear testimony for Jesus. Regardless of circumstances she always performed those duties that lay in her path.

On July 7, 1897, she and I were united in this life by the sacred ties that bind wife and husband. I found all that I expected to find in a noble Christian woman. No one could have proven a more devoted wife, for perfect kindness to me marked the whole of our married life. She understood how to bear and forbear, and endeavored to possess the mind of Christ fully in this respect. Indeed, her desire was to be guided by the Spirit and the Word in all things. I never heard her say anything harsh about anyone. She used as a motto, "He that keepeth his tongue is a perfect man, wanting nothing." She was ever ready to do or sacrifice anything that would advance the cause of Christ's church. Finding such a Christian in health, is it surprising that she should prove true in affliction? Even though the latter and most of her suffering was of a nature to influence her nervous system immensely, yet she, through it all, kept composed. Often, when her suffering was so great that nature would force an expression of misery to play over her face, she would clinch her teeth in silence. At times a groan would give expression of her suffering, but even in the worst she was never heard to murmur or complain, but meekly bent underneath his chastening rod. The one idea that controlled her and made her humble was that Jesus suffered incomparably more than she, and that the servant wasn't above his Lord. She retained an unflinching faith amidst it all. She expressed a desire to live, but repeatedly said she was ready to meet her Savior, and would not be contrary to his will, for his will was hers.

On Oct. 9, 1898, at the age of twenty-one, leaving an infant eighteen days old and a husband, with many a loved one, to lament her loss, she passed to glory. We meekly say, "Thy will be done."
HER HUSBAND.
Rosser, Ala.

SMITH—PEARL LOUISE, daughter of Albert and Olivia Smith, was born in Winchester, Miss., Nov. 29, 1874; was born again in early girlhood, and died June 25, 1898. In 1897, while I was her pastor, she became an earnest seeker for the pearl of perfect love. The lovely traits of her sweet young womanhood became more beautiful and attractive under the blessed influences of grace. One of her choicest gifts—her talent for music—was called out to be laid at the Master's feet. Earthly ambition for a musical career was subordinated to the purpose to play and sing for Jesus, and grace finally won the victory over self. In the session of 1897-8 she entered the E. M. Female College at Meridian to carry on her studies in music. Under the care of its consecrated president, J. W. Beeson, and in the atmosphere of this truly religious school, she developed rapidly in her religious experience, and to be holy became her chief desire. She readily won a place in the esteem and confidence of teachers and schoolmates as she had in those of her former life. Their tender tributes to her worth tell how well she lived. During a meeting held by Evangelist Chas. Crittenton in the Spring of 1898, she received the Spirit's inward witness that she was sanctified. Nor was this a matter in doubt to others around her. The light shone in her face and through her life. She became a soul-winner, and many of her young friends were led by her to know the Lord. Just before the school closed its session she became sick and went home. A brief illness followed, filled with sweet peace and abiding trust in God. Before the commencement exercises of the college had taken place, in which she had been assigned a prominent part, she was summoned to join in the rapturous music of the skies. "Forever with the Lord."
HENRY EDW. PARTRIDGE.

TOOKE—EDNA WILBUR TOOKE was born May 15, 1894, and died Oct. 6, 1898, at Arcadia, La.

Edna was truly a perfect child. She was the most obedient and affectionate child I ever saw. Everyone acquainted with her said they never saw a child like her. Though so young, she never slept without saying her little prayer; she was so submissive and yielding. Whatever her parents thought best, though opposed to her expressed wishes, she submitted to with such sweetness it would almost make one weep, and her acquiescence would be a "Well!" with a far-away look, and immediately after a bright smile, and "I love you, mama and papa." She never failed to express her affection. In passing through a room she would raise her little hand and say, "I love you," or some of her family passing her at play, she would say, "I love you." She was so patient. Even to the doctor's last greeting she said, "I feel very well." Her favorite song was, "Standing on the promises of God." Whether the words or music appealed to her we know not, but that song should be a source of consolation to her bereaved parents. Her last request was, "Mama, make them all go out, so I can take my little nap," and she fell asleep in Jesus. She was verily a sunbeam; now a bright angel waiting, with beckoning hands, for those she loved to come up higher.
ONE WHO LOVED HER.

RAPP—Miss JENNIE RAPP was born Jan. 31, 1844, and died Oct 8, 1898, aged fifty-four years and eight months. She was raised in Vicksburg, Miss.; moved to Franklin parish in her youth, where she has remained until death. She commenced teaching school at the age of sixteen, which she followed as an avocation for thirty-eight years. She was rocked in the cradle of Methodism, accepted Christ in her early womanhood, and lived a consistent follower of him throughout her life. She was a member of our flock at Gilbert Station, where she built a nice little home, and was giving her life to that community as a school teacher. She never married; lived alone in her little cottage. We visited her in her little workshop, and always found her cheerful and happy. She spent her idle moments in reading and writing; was the author of one book, "The Blacksmith's Daughter." It is gratifying to meet such a character; so modest, gentle, and kind. She controlled her children in the school by that motive power that Christ recommends to the world—love. Her death was a most beautiful one. Perfectly resigned to her Lord's will and homesick to go to her final home, how sweet such a death amid this crooked and perverse generation!

We extend our prayers and sympathies to the school children and relatives who mourn their lost.
E. E. HIGGS.

RANDLE—Resolutions of respect by West Monroe Union Sunday-school:

Whereas, it has pleased our heavenly Father, in his infinite wisdom, to call unto himself our loved member, SALLIE JACKSON RANDLE, to dwell in the light of his presence evermore, where there is no night, no sorrow, no suffering, but peace everlasting; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we mourn the loss of one so dear to us, we bow in humble submission to the will of Him whose love is above all others, and that we tender to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy. Though He has left unto them a house desolate, yet, as through her dying eyes they caught a glimpse of the beautiful beyond, so may they look past these days of darkness and sorrow to that glad day she will welcome them home, where parting and grief will be no more, where she walks and worships ever all the happy golden days. As they would so gladly have given her the brightest and best this life can offer, so we believe her Savior felt when he lifted her tenderly upward to joys more lasting, and we pray they may pass gently under the rod, trusting and leaning on the promises that can not fail.

Resolved, That our Sunday-school has lost an earnest and devout worker; one who was ever ready to yield her own pleasures to answer the call of others; one whose duty was ever nobly and well done; one for whom no sacrifice was too small or too great. May the seed sown by the example of her kindness and self-sacrifice blossom and bear fruit in our own lives, so that we shall gladly, and as fearlessly as she, follow the path that first her willing feet have trod, where she will welcome us home to God, for we mourn not as those without hope!

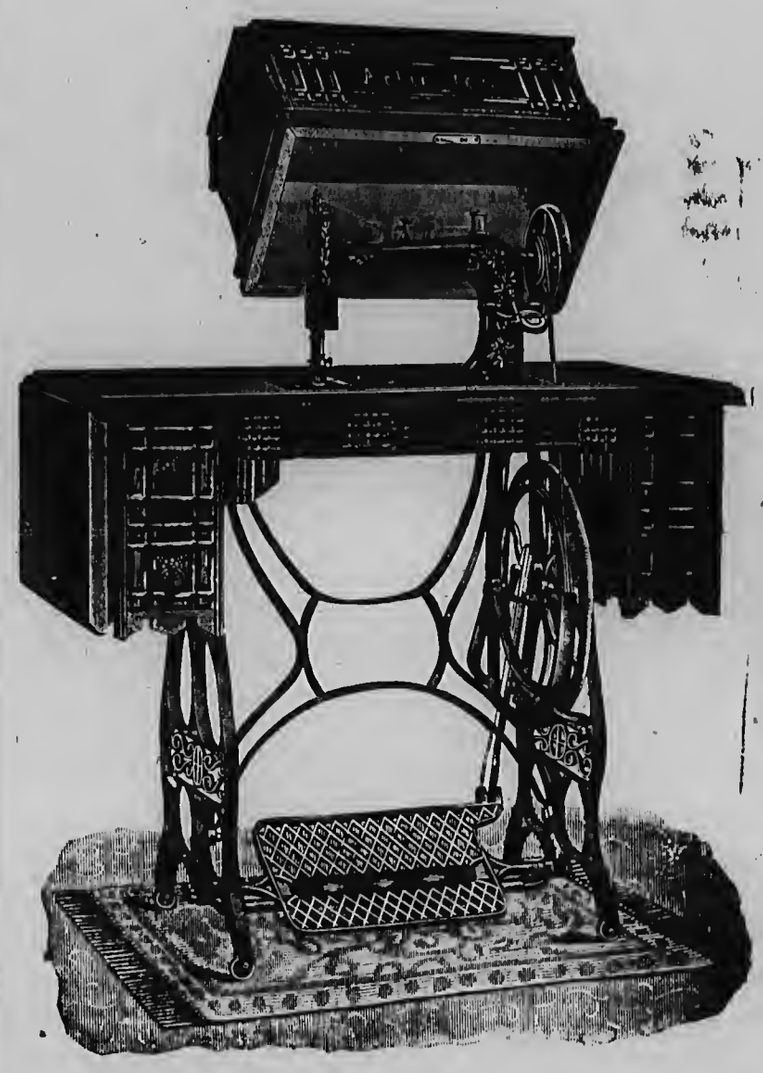
Machine Offer.
New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.
A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.
THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.
NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.
IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.
SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.
THE NEEDLE is the same as used on . . New Home machine, and is self setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great length; finely polished.
SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.
LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.
PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The United States have fifty-five war vessels now under construction.

The cost of a governorship of New York does not seem to be so great after all. A return by Colonel Roosevelt of expenses of election show that he only paid $2000 for the place.

Only 1925 women voted in Chicago this year, as compared with 30,000 four years ago. An explanation offered by the Chicago advocates of woman suffrage is the little importance of the officers for whom the women are permitted to vote.

The Royal Agricultural Society of England has decided not to admit to competition at any of its shows any horses with docked tails. The decision is likely to put a stop to the senseless practice, at least on the other side of the Atlantic.

At the annual convention in Washington last week of the Association of American Agricultural Colleges and Experimental Stations, President Ellis, of Colorado College, condemned the system of athletics in colleges and characterized football as on a par with prize-fighting.

Emperor William of Germany is the greatest globe-trotter in Europe. During 1897 he traveled 21,100 miles and visited ninety different cities. Daring 1898 he will exceed this record. The emperor has a secretary, who keeps a log-book of his peregrinations, and also a record of his sports.

At the request of President McKinley, who will be a guest at the peace jubilee to be held in Atlanta, Ga., on the fourteenth of next month, the word "peace" will be stricken ont of the title, and instead the festivities will simply be known as a celebration of the victory of American arms.

The Quarantine Convention, which met in Memphis last week, adjourned after a two days' session. The convention was divided on the question of absolnte control of quarantine by the National Government, its opponents suggesting co-operation with the State health authorities. The resolutions passed proposed co-operation between the Federal and State health anthorities.

On the last day of the present month bids are to be opened for the constrnction of an immense steel dock at Algiers. This dock is to cost $750,000, and is to be capable of docking the largest battleship. This improvement is already provided for by legislation; but other improvements are contemplated, such as a repair station to be erected here in connection with the dock, the construction of a dry dock at Pensacola Navy Yard, and possibly also a dock at Key West.

The testimony of General Breckinridge before the special commission engaged in investigating the conduct of the war, regarding the inefficiency of the tranport service, serves to further emphasize the necessity for a radical reform in the management of the transports. Dnring the recent war and up to the present time the transport service has been under the direct control of the War Department. It is true that the ships are commanded by shipmasters, hut the control is generally exercised by army officers, who can not be expected in the ordinary course of things to be well posted on maritime matters.

Emperor William's sudden abandonment of his intention to visit Spanish ports on his return to Germany and his determination to go home by way of the Adriatic sea, landing at Pola and taking the train there for Potsdam, has given rise to considerable specnlation as to the real motive for his change of programme. The official explanation giving the health of the Empress as the sole reason for his majesty's rapid return is only partially accepted. The impression among leading politicians, however, is that the state of home politics and the inappropriateness of his proposed visit to Spain at the present jncture mainly influenced the Emperor's decision.

The Spanish and American Peace Commissioners met in joint session on Monday. The Americans declared the United States must have the entire Philippine Archipelago; and for a treaty cession of the islands, the Americans tendered to Spain $20,000,000. It is further declared that it is the purpose of the United States to maintain the Philippine Islands as an "open door" to the world's commerce. On the terms named the United States proposes a mutual relinquishment of all claims for indemnity, national or personal, subsequent to the last ontbreak of the Cuban insurrection. Nov. 28 is fixed as the date on which the United States Commission desires a definite reply to these propositions and all other subjects in issue there. It is also declared that the United States desire to treat on the religious freedom of the Caroline Islands, as agreed upon between the United States and Spain in 1886, and also of the acquisition of one of the Caroline Islands for an American station and for cable landing rights at other places in Spanish jurisdiction and the revival of certain Spanish-American treaties as heretefore in force. The meeting was then adjourned until Wednesday.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Booneville, Miss., EDITOR.

God will forgive our sins if with hearty repentance and true faith we turn to him, but nature will never forgive.

There are Christians who suffer and will suffer to the end of time for some sin committed in their youth. Inseparably joined together are sin and its consequences.

"Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life," and remember that the conclusion of the whole matter is to "fear God and keep his commandments."

Sunday, Nov. 13, it was our privilege to meet with and address the League at Mansfield. This was the first opportunity we have had of looking into the faces of the Leaguers of Louisiana.

If this League is a type and fair sample of the other chapters in this State by the Gulf, we will be delighted whenever an opportunity presents itself whereby we may attend a Louisiana League meeting.

Rev. J. D. Harper is the pastor of the Mansfield League, and, though having served as an itinerant for 25 years, he is in hearty sympathy with this important branch of church work, and delights to co-operate with the young people in their works of faith and labors of love.

Of course, the young ladies of the Mansfield Female College add materially to the success of the League. Miss Ruth Sligh is the president, and upon the Sunday of our visit Miss Birdie Edwards conducted the service.

It is an inspiration to see cultivated, consecrated young women devoting their time and energy to the work of the church and the salvation of the world. May the blessings of heaven rest upon them!

We heard not long since of a young man (an Epworth Leaguer) who spent part of the afternoon each Sunday in reading the Scriptures, praying and singing with an old woman in the community, who is poor and destitute of many of the comforts of this world. Could anything be more commendable?

A brother of the young man above referred to is a promising preacher in a Southern Conference. He has had good educational advantages; those, however, were secured through self-sacrifice and hard work. He literally worked his way. We want more boys like this.

During the past year a certain young lady member of a flourishing League pledged $100 for missionary specials. She did not, however, pledge it for the League to which she belonged, but proposed to give it as an individual subscription. She had worked hard to make the money, but gave it with a willing heart.

We happen to know the parents of the young lady and can easily understand the cause of her Christian liberality. She had been properly taught and trained in this as well as in every other particular.

Our religion does not ascend high enough, neither does it descend deep enough, until it has been imbued with the spirit of giving. There is enough money in the hands of so-called Christian men and women to endow our colleges, crowd vessels with missionaries, ballast them with Bibles, and send a sweet gospel message to all the sons of earth.

Referring to the evangelization of the world, we quote the following from Bishop Duncan used in conducting for Bishop Galloway the opening service of the West Texas Conference, recently held at Seguin: "If Bishop Galloway were to say to you, Gather up your traps and go at once to the Philippines and organize a Southern Methodist Church among those people without any help from the Board of Missions, I suspect that the most of you would ask to have your cases referred to the Committee on Conference Relations. But Paul went to these Corinthians and others with no Mission Board back of him. The church still needs such men."

5 DROPS (TRADE MARK.)

Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co., Chicago, July 25, '98.

I think "5 DROPS" is the best medicine in the world; it has done me so much good. Before using "5 DROPS" I could hardly lie in bed long enough to go to sleep. I would have to get up and walk around, or sit up in bed. I don't know what was the matter with me, but I was suffering all through me, and my body was so tender that part of the time I could hardly lie on the softest bed. As it has benefited me so much, I have recommended it to my neighbors. Three of my daughters have sent to you for "5 DROPS" also two of my lady friends. One of my daughters was suffering terribly with her stomach, and was all bloated up until she weighed 136 pounds, but after she took "5 DROPS" her weight came down to 146 pounds—her normal weight—and she is all right again. She thinks there never was such medicine made, I myself think it is splendid.
MRS. M. A. MATTINGLY, Coilbran, Col.

Mr. Ira Sargent, Dunbar, (Neb.) also writes under date of July 25, 98 that he is cured of Rheumatism, Stomach Trouble, and Catarrh. "I want to write you in regard to my case of STOMACH TROUBLE and RHEUMATISM. I commenced one year ago to take '5 DROPS,' and I can tell you today that though I am 75 YEARS OLD and past I feel like a new person. I don't want to be without '5 DROPS.' '5 DROPS' has the praise of being the best medicine on the market. It has cured a bad case of CATARRH here and has another almost cured. Please accept my thanks for the favors I have received at your hands.
IRA SARGENT."

If you have not sufficient confidence, after reading these letters, to send for three large bottles for $2.50, which will surely cure you, then send for a $1.00 bottle, which contains enough medicine to more than satisfy you of its wonderful curative properties. Prepaid by mail or express. This wonderful curative gives almost instant relief and is a permanent cure for Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Backache, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Sleeplessness, Nervousness, Nervous and Neuralgic Headaches, Heart Weakness, Toothache, Earache, Croup, La Grippe, Malaria, Creeping Numbness, Bronchitis, and kindred diseases.

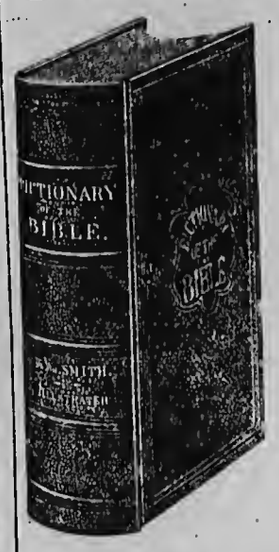
Smith's Dictionary
—OF THE—
BIBLE,



Comprising Its Antiquities. Biography, Geography, and NATURAL HISTORY.

EDITED BY WM SMITH, LL. D.,
Classical Examiner of the University of London.

This great work prepared under the direction and superintendence of Dr. Smith himself contains every name in the Bible and Apocrypha of which anything can be said; gives an account of each of the books of the Bible; explains the civil and religious institutions, the manners and customs, while many of the longer articles, being the results of the most finished scholarship, are complete treatises in themselves; embraces the results of the most successful and approved biblical labors and researches, constituting an indispensable aid to ministers, teachers, families, Sunday-school superintendents, and Bible readers generally.

The simple explanations of this work, unlike the expositions of a commentary, admit of no denominational or sectarian coloring and it is therefore equally valuable to Bible readers of every diversity of belief.

This is, undoubtedly, the best work of its kind in the English language, and has no rival in importance for the elucidation of the scenes and facts of Scripture.

The work contains 1024 large octavo pages, over 150 illustrations and maps engraved especially for this work and is handsomely and strongly bound in cloth. Publishers' price, $4.50.

To any person who will pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: To December, '99, we will sell this magnificent book postpaid for $2. Send in your order at once, as this offer may soon be withdrawn. Address

CHARITY.

Breathe thoughts of pity e'er a brother's fall,
But dwell not with stern anger on his fault;
The grace of God alone holds thee, holds all;
Were that withdrawn, thou, too, wouldst swerve and halt.

Send back the wanderer to the Savior's fold—
That were an action worthy of a saint;
But not in malice let the crime be told,
Nor publish to the world the evil taint.

The Savior suffers when his children slide;
Then is his holy name by men blasphemed,
As he afresh is mocked and crucified,
Even by those his bitter death redeemed.

Rebuke the sin, and yet in love rebuke;
Feel on one member in another's pain;
Win back the soul that his fair path forsook,
And mighty and eternal is thy gain.

—Edmeston.

SCHOOL OR BUSINESS?

Some parents, whose eyes will run over this article, have been debating most seriously whether to continue their boy in school or put him into business. It is a serious question, and worthy a careful and thoughtful debate, such as you are giving it. Let me help you in this article. Your boy, we will say, is fifteen years old. You are working hard and long, and the family is large and expenses are many. Now, if you put him into store or shop, he will at once, or nearly so, earn his living—possibly more. If you send him away to school, it will be expensive. If he attends the public school at home, his board and clothing and books will cost considerable, and he will be earning almost nothing. So the debate goes on, and the arguments pro and con stare you in the face, and you are sorely puzzled.

If he goes to school for a year or more, of what particular benefit will his learning be to him? He can't use Latin or Greek in shop or store, on engine, or boat, or farm. And what is the use of so much algebra, or literature, or science, or history? These will not help him to sell goods any better or at a higher figure, nor by these will he be able to make the ground yield more bushels to the acre. He can read and write and speak good English, and cipher a little, and is generally apt and ready and accurate; and why should I send him to school any longer? Why not put him into business at once? With the start he has already, he will be practically learning more and more, and business will be to him as good, if not better, than a school.

Then, too, many business men of to-day have little or no education, and they are, some of them, keen and ready, able and successful. Some can hardly write their own names, much less conduct ordinary business correspondence, and yet they succeed and get rich. They rarely or never read a book, and yet hold some quite responsible public positions. What shall I do with my boy—school or business? He is not eager nor even desirous to continue in school. Other boys are dropping out, and entering stores and shops, and my boy wants to do the same. But his mother is anxious to have him keep at school. She is ready to sacrifice still more and work still harder, for she wants her son to have an education, and she usually carries her point. But I don't see how a year or two more of schooling is going to help him in the ordinary business of life any better than what he has now. Besides, it is pretty hard to meet all the family expenses with only my small income. Which shall it be—school or business?

KEEP HIM IN SCHOOL!

If one apprentices his boy, he chooses his career for him, and no man knows enough about either his boy's nature or his possible future to make the wisest and best choice. Often it has to be made, and may be made wisely or most unwisely. One can rarely tell at fourteen what his boy will be at thirty. The boy is a bundle of possibilities. How shall he unfold? Where shall he plant? What will he become? These are no casual questions; they are vital and far-reaching, and none may answer. But your boy needs the opportunity for self-development. There is nothing, other things being equal, that will shape and quicken and qualify his best development like education. There is nothing that will enable him to take advantage of his surroundings and enter into realms of larger life through the opened doors of opportunity. There is nothing that will open his mind to the future and the future to his mind like education. It will bring self-knowledge, and such knowledge is power. Education does not merely fit men for their station; it shows them what station they are fitted for. It designates by development. The education of a man is like clearing and fertilizing the soil; it reveals the embedded possibilities. It is the opportunity that we are always seeking; the boy needs it, must have it. Yes, the mother is right; he ought to have an education. The time of his "teens" is the divinely-appointed time for gathering it. This is the period of preparation for handling life at the greatest possible advantage. Plenty of time for learning a trade or profession, and for the hard work of life after that. It is a gross and great mistake to suppose that a fine education unfits one for the common walks of life, or that a splendid education necessarily demands a professional life.

A BROAD, LIBERAL EDUCATION.

A purely business education is necessarily always a narrow education. It develops along particular lines. It limits to a single sphere of action. It narrows horizons. This is true of all particular or special educational work. Your boy needs a "broad" education such as the common schools start and the high school and academy carry on. These let him have by all means, if possible! Then if he can not go to college and is planning an immediate business career, give him at least a full year in the "business college," that he may gain a practical mastery of the great underlying principles and methods of the business world that he must perpetually use.

We make our plea for broad minded and large-hearted men and women. A simple business education equips one for a single chance. If he misses that, he has no reserve. A liberal education equips for a hundred chances, and failing to open one door, he has the keys to ninety-nine others! The money spent in giving your son or daughter a good education is money well spent; it is your best financial investment. A well-educated man is a man of many resources. He is, therefore, ready for many exigencies. There is safety and success both in breadth.

A thousand dollars given to your boy is soon spent. A thousand dollars' worth of thorough education given to him can never be expended; it is a permanent fund yielding large interest. The gilt-edge interest of the thousand dollars is sixty dollars, but the difference in position which two or three years of schooling will give to a boy in anywhere from four hundred dollars to a thousand dollars a year. Investments which pay from forty to one hundred per cent. are not common. Education is such an investment! Your boy will thank you all his life long for giving him the opportunity of putting himself at his best in the years to come. Many a man is sadly crippled to-day because father decided for business at fourteen.

KEEP HIM AT SCHOOL!

Yes, keep him at school, always provided he is eager for knowledge, and makes good use of his time and opportunity. It is useless, and sometimes worse than useless, to send a boy to school and college just for the honor of graduation, not knowing what else to do with him. If he has no love and longing for an education, and is unwilling to study for it, then turn him into business, and by-and-by he will wake up and curse his folly that spurned the best of advantages that will never come again. Schools and books and education do not impart brains or create genius. Genius, as it is called, sometimes serves in place of education. Yet it is often erratic and always rare. The true genius in this progressive age is the genius that has been long at school, and been taught and disciplined for service. It is the well-educated men, as a rule, that are a-top and directing affairs. Many unlettered men are rich and in political office, but it signifies little. It is the trained and disciplined intellect that clambers to the height and claims the prizes. There is always room everywhere, in all callings and trades and professions, higher up. And it is the plucky and persistent and trained who step in and occupy and enjoy the spacious and sunny apartments.

Just here is one of the great and positive needs of American society: better educated boys and girls, and we shall do better work, and create better society, and build up stronger character; better educated men and women, and life will mean more—it will be prolonged and enriched and crowned. It is universally conceded that teachers and lawyers and doctors and editors and engineers and ministers and generals and commodores, and all professional men and women, should be liberally educated; but why not as well merchants and mechanics and farmers and gardeners and, indeed, all others who toil for a livelihood in the various occupations? We are not educated merely for business, but for life. Business is not an end, but only a means to an end, which end is a larger life. We are not trained merely for the store or shop or office or home, but for society, for this world and all worlds!

Character-building needs foundations deep and solid. Hence, at the very opening of responsible life, one needs a wide and wise outlook, such an outlook as the true spirit of knowledge will give. One needs, also, the truest inspiration; true education will furnish it. The successful merchant is more than a seller of goods; he is a master among men. As such, then, he must know the laws of trade, and this is political economy. He must know from whence his different products come, and this is physical geography; he must know the management of men, and this is in part mental and moral philosophy; he must know the art of letter-writing (to write an able business letter requires the same kind of skill as to write editorials or orations), and this is literature. The training and discipline of a wide education is the positive need of every business man and woman.

THE OBJECT OF EDUCATION.

Do not forget, father, that the object of education is not learning, but ability. True, the educated boy has learned something. He has gained a knowledge of language and science and art and history and mathematics, but he has learned how to study and how to think and how to acquire knowledge, which is far more important. He has learned how to gain new and important knowledge, and how to turn it quickly to practical account. He has gained from teacher and books and study and schools and scholars that mental training and moral discipline which is life's best power—we call it character!

There must always be hewers of wood and drawers of water. The supply will equal the demand. As the merchant is more than a salesman, the mechanic more than a carpenter or plumber, the engineer more than a surveyor, the agriculturist more than a digger in the soil, so, father, if you want your boy to be that something more, keep him, if possible, a little longer at school—as long as he is hungry for knowledge, and making good use of time and means. It means sacrifice for you, but it is growth and power for him, and he will repay you for it all an hundredfold!

Yes, keep him in school!—F. C. Hubbard, in Self-Culture.

THE POLICY OF EXPANSION.

BY BISHOP JOHN F. HURST.

There are no reliable plans for national procedure when a war commences. The first shot may break the whole slate of long and labored calculations. Men may decree and put their methods on record, and order armies and navies at the touch of a bell. But there are other bells of which they know nothing. No sooner are the dogs of war let loose than some subtle force takes possession of congresses and nations, and in one time all the participants are swept away by the unexpected omnipotence. A conqueror rises to a height which gives him a survey of a wider horizon. If a severe sense of duty sent him out to fight, his victories may now teach him lessons which even adversity never gave him. The amazing thing is that these mighty secondary impulses are not wild wanderings, but are often the wisest decisions, which will become all the clearer in the light of the far future.

Where do we stand at this hour? With convictions and conclusions entirely different from those with which we began the war with Spain. The instruction has been drastic in the extreme. The war has taught us lessons which we never knew before, and has led us to learn slowly, but intensely, that there are duties we owe to the human family which we had never anticipated. We have heretofore been thinking solely of ourselves. But this latest history makes us touch elbows with the world.

True, we have been a long time learning the great lesson of expansion. But reason enough—we never had occasion to learn it before. We gave much vehement advice to dear old England when the Armenian history was being enacted. We complained that English interference was an absolute necessity, and that the powers should permit such inhumanity was our sharp and chronic criticism. But that was across mountain and sea and strange tongues. Meanwhile the Cuban cry became so loud as to stifle all sounds of far-away woes. Here was a fair island bleeding and starving at our feet and before our eyes. Our people not only thought, but felt. The ultimatum to Spain ended in the declaration of war, and the basis of the war was humanity to Cuba. The insurrection had been going on for three years. It was the old intermittent fever of Cuban revolution, and might go on and reappear indefinitely. The sending of the Asiatic squadron to Manila was a happy thought. Spain could be struck with great effect in her farthest possessions. The sinking of the Spanish fleet on May 1 tells the rest of the story. The fall of Manila, with the practical possession of the 1,400 islands and of the ten millions of people, was henceforth only a question of time.

What now shall become of the Philippines? Can the United States withdraw from its own record? The duty which seemed strong and clear at the outset would be only half discharged were the liberated peoples handed back to their former rulers. Suppose it should happen that the United States should claim only Manila and its island of Luzon—what would become of the other islands and their inhabitants? One of two things would result—Spain would either make contracts for the sale of her islands to the highest bidder (Russia, Germany, or France), or she would send an army not less than 150,000 strong to open her new dominion in the Philippines. Either course would do violence to the American sense of justice. Our clear-eyed President put the ground of the war on the sole basis of humanity. Some had been claiming the continuance of the insurrection was a damage to our commercial interests; others, on all grounds, that Cuba must be annexed; and still others, that Cuba must be an independent government. But the President placed the claim of justice to humanity as the only one on which we could go to war, and resisted strongly the pretext of intervention. He resisted obedience to even that imperial call to the last moment. But on that basis we began, and there we stand to-day.

To permit the possible transfer of Cuban wrongs to Philippine territory would be a violation of the very claim we made at the outset. Should the United States allow the Philippines to go back again to Spanish sovereignty, either our country or some other might in due time find it necessary to repeat for the Philippines what our arms have done for Cuba, namely: to stop injustice. Has the day not passed when great stretches of territory and men by the million can be bartered as so many cattle? Political control is a sacred right. Who has given us the authority to sanction the sale of the smallest islands of the Philippine archipelago? Those far-off islands were in revolt at the same time with the Cubans, and by our attack on them the United States, for the time being, practically took the side of the insurgent and fought against the same enemy. The nation's duties are not exhausted when it protects, both at home and abroad, the rights of its citizens. It has a high duty among the family of nations to protect the sufferer under every sky.

This is, indeed, a new departure. But may it not be a high moral necessity which arises from a wider intelligence and a warmer sympathy with the welfare of the world? Our training thus far has been largely juvenile. We have been hedged in at every period of our history by the fear that other nations might be offended, and we have been taking affronts from them, and have withheld response because of the fear of threat or defeat. We have been children playing in the back yard. At one time we had a quadrennium of domestic conflict. It was a long and hard fisticuff, away from the world's interference. Thanks to a good fortune, we fought it without a foreign power coming in to fire a single shot. We were in knickerbockers then, and our attachments were to the old homestead. But all at once a demand was made upon us by a cry in the great world for help. We were the first and nearest to hear. We came out upon the street ourselves; we saw that there was suffering going on, and that the plea for help was honest and strong; we were averse to leaving the weak ones to suffer, and entered on the task of rescue. Success came—much larger than we had even hoped. Are we not large enough now, and has the time not come for us to put off the knickerbockers and pass beyond the juvenile period, and take a share in the world's demands?

We will admit that this is unexpected. But does not the unexpected abound on every page of our national history? In every serious crisis of our history, when our policy was clearly defined, and to which we had slowly vowed fidelity, we have been suddenly compelled to turn about and take another course. We thought only of Texas when we sent Taylor to Mexico. But in the end, with Fremont as prophet, we stood on the Pacific coast and took our first look across the western sea. We thought only of the preservation of the Union when we began the war of 1861-5. But a larger end was reached—the last shackle of the slave was broken. We may call it an incident, but history calls it a moral revolution. We achieved freedom by the very momentum of destiny. We went into war with Spain with the thought only of righteous rule in a neighboring island. But may it not be a providential purpose that peoples of whom we never dreamed should feel the touch of liberty from the American hand? To withhold such help would be to convert Dewey into a myth. To prevent possible injustice in the Philippines—which are ours by the fortunes of war—is as much a duty as it was to suppress actual injustice in Cuba, which we had to reach by invasion.

Let us keep all the Philippines until we have taught them how to govern themselves. Let us learn how to build up far-away peoples by learning how England has made this great achievement over and over again, and understands it as her finest art by her three glowing centuries of justice and education.—Harper's Weekly.

THE MAN WHO WHIPPED DEWEY.

Major Z. K Pangborn was a candidate for Congress at the recent election in New Jersey. On the occasion of his nomination a delegate shouted, "Hurrah for Pangborn, the only man who ever whipped Dewey!" It now appears that when Major Pangborn was fresh from college, more than forty years ago, he undertook to manage a district school in Montpelier, Vt. The school had long been in revolt, and young Dewey had been the leader of a crowd which made it very unpleasant for several young teachers. Pangborn took the school, and Dewey, then young and small, led the first revolt against his authority, whereupon he whipped the future rear admiral with a rawhide until he begged for mercy. Our authority states that Dewey and Pangborn became fast friends, and years afterward, when the major was an editor in Boston and Dewey a lieutenant in the navy, the lieutenant called upon the editor, and said: "I shall never cease to be grateful to you. You made a man of me. But for that thrashing you gave me, I might now be in State prison."

There are not thousands of Deweys in the United States, but there are thousands of respectable men in the ministry, in law, in business, in journalism, in the teaching force of the country, and on farms, who can testify to the same result from the same cause.

When an untamed boy sets himself against legitimate authority, will not submit to right for right's sake, and his will is broken by might, however exercised, a great service is done him. The parents who will not make their children mind and the teachers who will not keep order in their schools are enemies of the rising race. Not that the teacher or the parent should be a thrashing machine, not that an unjust punishment or an unduly severe punishment is not most pernicious, not that it is not immeasurably better to control the will by convincing the judgment and drawing the heart, but when these efforts do not succeed the best thing that can happen is to compel obedience. If the punishment was just and the boy knew it, or if it was just and he would not believe it was, in ninety-nine times in a hundred when he ripens to an understanding of the situation he will call on the man that thrashed him and thank him for doing it; and as the years pass he will more and more love and honor the parents or teacher who made him discover that though might does not make right, when might and right are allied there is nothing to do but submit.

Most cases of insanity that do not spring primarily from physical disease, result from the subjects' never having had their wills subdued, never having learned to deny themselves or submit to others; and the first advantage which they derive from being placed under restraint is the discovery that they must now obey if they would be happy. Sometimes this alone works a cure and reforms the patient, who acquires a habit of submission, and goes out into the world with improved self-control.

Had Dewey succeeded in that revolt, in all probability his whole career would have been changed; and to-day, instead of his receiving the plaudits of the world, we might be pointing a moral in this paper, with the account of the arrest of a notorious desperado by the name of Dewey, who "when a boy was the terror of the town and the leader of a revolt against authority."—New York Advocate.

WHY DO WE WAIT?

Why do we wait till ears are deaf
Before we speak our kindly word,
And only utter loving praise
When not a whisper can be heard?

Why do we wait till hands are laid
Close-folded, pulseless, ere we place
Within them roses sweet and rare,
And lilies in their flawless grace?

Why do we wait till eyes are sealed
To light and love in death's deep trance—
Dear wistful eyes—before we bend

Why do we wait till hearts are still
To tell them all the love in ours,
And give them such late meed of praise,
And lay above them fragrant flowers?

How oft we, careless, wait till life's
Sweet opportunities are past,
And break our "alabaster box
Of ointment" at the very last!

Oh, let us heed the living friend
Who walks with us life's common ways,
Watching our eyes for look of love,
And hungering for a word of praise!

THE MISSISSIPPI DELTA.

BY S. C. STONE, A. M.

MR. EDITOR: The Greenville district is entirely in the Mississippi Valley, or that section of country known as the Mississippi Delta. It consists, in the main, of Tunica, Coahoma, Quitman, Bolivar, Sunflower, and Washington counties, with portions of Tallahatchie and Leflore; bound on the west by the Mississippi river, with a front of about 275 miles; on the southeast and northeast by the Yazoo, Tallahatchie, and Coldwater rivers, and has an area of about 500 square miles, with a population of some 95,000 souls. A few years since there were great obstacles in the way of supplying this section of the country with the gospel. To appoint a man to a "Bottom charge" without first having consulted him was regarded as a grievous affliction, if not an unjustified sacrifice of the "poor fellow." Many of the above-named difficulties have been removed; the want of facility for travel has been met; the want of healthfulness does not now exist as was the case a few years since. Health statistics show a smaller death-rate in the above-named counties than is shown per capita by a corresponding population of the hill country. Fifteen years ago the means of public conveyance was confined almost exclusively to boats, with about nine miles of railway in the entire district, while the roads for private travel were, in the main, by paths almost exclusively through the blue cane that lapped above the traveler's head, while the bayous, rivers, creeks, etc., were to be forded or swam if crossed, as the frequent waters did not permit bridges, while at this writing, instead of there being but nine miles of railroad, there are several through lines, with many local roads and switches, while some estimate that not less than 550 miles of railroad furnish rapid and convenient means of conveyance, and the dirt roads are excellent—superior, in certain seasons of the year, to the turnpikes of Middle Tennessee and the blue-grass regions of Kentucky. The accommodations were of the poorest—cabins poorly built, or the miserable hut, outside of villages and towns. Now cottages of modern build and elegant dwellings grace the Delta, and not the exception, either. Then you met but few whites, renters, trappers, "lumber men," with swarms of negroes. Now as intelligent people as you will preach to anywhere greet you. Men of families brimful of energy, land-owners and land-buyers, are here, and here to stay.

Bro. Dorman, the present presiding elder of the district, will give you the church statistics, which, considering the outlay, inspire with a holy ambition and thrilling encouragement. The social, numerical, financial and spiritual strength of the Methodist Church furnish a wonderful argument to the skeptic. The richest land known to history—land in comparison with which the richest soil of the world-famed valley of the Nile would suffer. They produce in most magnificent perfection almost all kinds of small grain—corn in great abundance. It is the kingdom where imperial cotton is enthroned, crowned and sceptered, in the dominion of which statistics (of 1894) show the common, unlettered laborer receives for his wages 57½ per centum per diem—more than is paid elsewhere in the wide world. Not even the gold digger, that is fed on the dust he washes, furnishes an exception. Added to her 550 miles of railroad, the Mississippi river and tributaries secure to the Delta an inestimable resource, over 16,674 miles of navigation bringing this section, already God-favored, into direct touch, communication and sympathy with the 1,287,311 square miles of her drained soil. The faithful promise to the wide-awake money-maker is being proclaimed, heard and heeded. Men of almost every land, tongue and tribe are coming with a rush, zeal and energy that should open all but the eyes of the blind. The Chinaman, Irishman, Italian, Swede, Prussian, Russian, and many, many others are here as fixtures, jingling in discordant jargon their respective lingo in almost Babylonian confusion. The world has caught the scent, and her children jar against each other in the mad rush for the millions of wealth for the man of energy, frugality, temperance, and enterprise. Manufacturing establishments are now running day and night. The floating clouds from the smoke-stacks blend, and throughout this section the sound of numerous whistles join in the proclamation of the race of progress as the fleecy staple is fitted for market. Thousands of spindles are rapidly joining the flying, busy thousands already in the buzzing factories, while the powerful compress, deep-toned, joins its rumbling thunder to chorus. Cotton-buying agents from Liverpool find the Delta the best cotton-buying center in the world, the boasting Bluff and Crescent Cities not excepted. The influx of land-owners to stay needs no comment. The living stream of wealth, money-loving, money-making men of life, snap and pluck, mental and physical forces, all march abreast.

But the facts and figures grow upon us, and force us to abandon farther arraying of facts. While what we have named is but a drop of the bucket, we must question as to the facilities for the salvation of these live men so worth saving. We need not mention the fact that the thousands starving for the Bread of Life in this beautiful land, "where every prospect pleases," must be as many of them have been—must be supplied through the itinerant system. Then, if they are to be supplied, let us draw one or two comparisons for outside information. What will it cost? is a sordid question in a spiritual sense, but a business one. A domestic mission in the hills, organized forty years ago with an appropriation, is to-day a forty-year-old babe, still dependent upon the Conference appropriation. Many hill missions are so. Mind you, I would not spank the child; it has nothing to spank. I only desire to show the contrast. A mission formed within the Delta—almost any part, as it is much the same—within one or two years it becomes a full-fledged charge, self-sustaining, willing and prond to bear its part of the Conference obligations, having met all the quarterage assessments. We hold in our mind's eye three such charges. Indeed, much might be, and should be, said along this line, but we fear the length of this article. We do not deny existing "drawbacks" to this country. Prominent among them is, that many land-owners do not live here, nor pay to our churches in this section. Poor laborers rent and work their lands, many of whom are true church members, willing, but unable to pay. High rents and low cotton make poor pay to the preachers. Land-owners, members of city churches, come, collect rents, go back to the city, and carry with them the surplus of their plantations. They pay their money, a fat sum to a fat church, swelling a fat salary for a fat preacher. Must sustain their reputation for liberality? We hold that a land-owner is due tribute to that portion of God's vineyard whence he gathers in. But we are truly glad to say that the above, with many other difficulties, are rapidly being overcome. Query: To whom is the preacher to preach that you appoint to a Delta charge? The want of the answer to this question has crippled and mortified the illiterate young pastor, crippled the church, and mortified the members more than their pastor was capable of feeling. Should the preacher fail to get his salary and collections, it is because he has failed himself—failed to exhibit the elements of success. Hard, you say? Well, I am writing for God, if I know myself. The preacher may not always be paid by loyal church members who pay from a sense of duty, but by men of the world as well, who contribute to the man. They like the man, enjoy his society and his preaching, because he is an educated, refined gentleman, that compares favorably, socially, and in the pulpit, with pastors of other denominations, if there are those. And we undertake to affirm right here that it is nonsense to talk of the above last-described man, or preacher, not being handsomely supported in this country.

That the Methodist Church in the Delta has suffered much, having been used as a field to "break in young preachers," is a truth that ought not to be ignored, and can not be denied.

Nor are our educators giving proper consideration to the youths of this section. Many of our children are being trained under Roman Catholicism. A school man, without the proper reputation, came right to a community and carried away seven promising girls. The attention of a college president had been called to the outlook, "Send them a catalogue," whereas, you had just about as well send the "cat" without the "logue" as to results.

And then what—oh! what—of God's church? Are we keeping pace in our plans, schemes, and system, in the rush, the wide-awake push and movement of the age and place? Who will answer for God? Where is the church? Echo—made harsh and cutting with the wail of the unsaved dying—answers, Where? Is the command, "Go ye into the healthy regions of the country and preach my gospel to those who, by chance, live in that healthy section?" or is it, "Go ye into all the world and preach my gospel to every creature?" Sweeping charge of a grand commission. Strange that the ungodly, brainy man, loving life and family, will go work, succeed, live and die for money, when God's minister, who has vowed to go, will cringe like a hired coward, while the purchased of Jesus Christ dies without hope. Oh, for the spirit of the Master, to go, labor and die for God! All honor to those who have said, "Send me," and meant it.

TO PARENTS.

We come to you in behalf of the physical, mental and moral interest of your sons and daughters, and correlate the interest you feel in them with the interest you ought to have in the prosperity of your own colleges. The name "Centenary" and "Mansfield" should have a fond place in our hearts, and a sweet association with the home's dearest interest. We would impress upon you the importance of education, but most especially Christian education, which we would define as the acme of high accorded privileges, as well as the performance of the highest duty made obligatory upon parents. We conceive Christian education to be that alone which is capable of developing all that is noblest, truest and best in our sons and daughters, and thus put true manhood and womanhood at a premium. We can not afford to leave the issues here involved to mere chance, nor suffer ourselves influenced to patronize a non-Christian college or institution just because it offers us cheap tuition, which gives a seeming advantage in saving a few dollars. Covetousness at this point is the altar upon which not a few parents sacrifice to the god of gold the physical and moral natures of their children, and then complain of the loss of time and money, and question most seriously as to whether it pays to educate or not, when their sons and daughters have returned from college physical wrecks, with cancered morals and dwarfed intellects.

Nature may have endowed your son with a magnificent physique, and added every form of endurance, so that, physically, he may stand as a man among men, with an intellect that would vie with his physical powers; yet with all, he is a moral leper, and this leprosy feeds upon every fibre of his being until it has consumed every nerve and deadened every sense, and soon the strong is made weak, the beautiful hideous, and his intellect, though as brilliant as the sun in the zenith of his glory, wanes into a lurid glare, and goes out in obscurity, and the poor man, with fevered brow and maddened brain, is driven to the very gates of death, but they will not open to him, and for long years linger in the very throes of agony and the pangs of a living death!

But is the mistake of those who do not educate at all less grievous? Do they in anywise merit the approbation of God or the praise of men? No! They deserve the curses of their posterity, who give them, as a legacy, the bane of ignorance, and insure for them, if possible, a life of toil and drudgery.

We conceive it to be no small offense against God and society to turn out upon the world a generation of men and women both ignorant and crude, having no knowledge of books and letters, and no conception of those little marks of true refinement which form the integral part of good manners and gentle breeding.

The greatest gift and boon in life possible for parents to bestow on their children is to educate them properly, and to accomplish this we must call into prominence and activity those special virtues of our natures that are commensurate with the gift, which are patience to forbear, gentleness to reprove and rebuke, discretion to choose, wisdom to teach and direct, prudence to indulge, and love to do all for their good, that God may be glorified in them.

For many reasons we do not regard the present public-school system, as a rule, capable of imparting to our sons and daughters those moral principles that are inseparable from Christian character. Hence the necessity for Christian colleges, and, with that necessity, the obligation to maintain them, both by patronizing and supporting by way of means and influence.

I would suggest at this juncture, however, that not the least part of a Christian education is supplementary, and consists in home influences and the child's general reading; hence it is laid upon parents to be able to select proper books, papers and periodicals to meet this demand. Our Conference organ should never be omitted, for such literature should be moral, instructive, and readable; always productive of our influences for good and an incentive to higher, nobler, and greater things, adding strength and beauty to character, and thus lift the life above the sensual things of earth and time. We should desire and demand that the moral development of our sons and daughters be in proportion to their intellectual attainment.

Where is that father or mother who is so unnatural a parent as not to covet for their children greater excellences than they themselves have ever be able to attain? So, if we are among those whose opportunities have been few, and our educational advantages limited, let us prophesy greater things for our children, and obligate ourselves for their fulfillment, though it takes an untiring zeal and many acts of self-denial. A true education is worth thousands of dollars to any man. Educate young children properly, and they will bless you for it. Is the child's threefold nature proportionately developed to a maximum standard?

The true progress of a nation must stand upon a moral basis; its strength, in noble manhood; its wisdom, in the intellectual excellency of its denizens, and its crown of glory and mark of pre-eminence, in the fear of the Lord. If this marked the status of the nations even in this, our day, would we deserve the breaking away of the clouds of sixty centuries, with the signs of the near approach of that morn of light that shall cover the earth with the knowledge and glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea?

The love of Christ, the love of humanity, and the love of home constrain us to plead with you—as parents—in behalf of the physical, mental and moral training of your sons and daughters. And as parents, we are not mere figure-heads in this great work, but the prime movers in it. We are standard-bearers, we are character-shapers, we are God's workmen, we are God's agents in leading souls to Christ, and we are specially charged with the safe keeping and right training of those who are flesh of our flesh and bone of our bone.

The time to meet this obligation is limited; it will not admit of procrastination. We must meet each opportunity promptly, or it will be lost. We must sow seed, we must cultivate, we must prune, we must train, for childhood is the propitious time. The climax of our life's work is reached when we have prepared our children, not for childhood, but for noble manhood and womanhood. Such is God's own plan; hence, while in the tender formative stage in life, God puts their little lives, crowned with sweetness, innocence and purity, in our hands for nurture and training, for molding and shaping, as clay in the hands of the potter, which, of the same lump, has power to make a vessel of honor or to dishonor. God would have us make no dishonored vessels, but vessels of honor, sanctified and meet for the Master's use, and prepared unto every good work.

In this great work we are designers, we are engravers. Let us, therefore, impress upon our children the image of Christ, and engrave upon their hearts holiness unto the Lord. We should remember that God demands not less of our boys than he does of our girls, nor more of women than he does of men, and has set but one standard of moral rectitude, and demands of all alike to measure up to it. Therefore we must require the same degree of virtue, truth and purity to characterize the life of our sons as that of our daughters.

WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH OUR LIVES?

BY MRS. E. FIELDER, IN W. F. M. ADVOCATE.

Some time in the life of every thoughtful human being there comes a realization of the value of time. Like a revelation comes the thought: We have but one time to live. Often it comes when a goodly part of that life is gone. Happy are we if so much of strength and power have not passed behind us as to make it impossible to do much with what is left. Few lessons are of more value than this. Money may be squandered and regained, houses and lands may be taken away, and even friendship's tender tie may be broken and renewed; but the day which has passed no power can restore. Regret, remorse, penitence, good resolutions—none of these can recall it. We may do better to-morrow, but to-day, with its slighted opportunities, is forever beyond our reach. If we are wise, when this knowledge of the value of time is brought home to us, we ask ourselves honestly, earnestly, the question, "What shall we do with our lives?" The fact that we are alive is proof sufficient that God has work for us to do. What shall it be?

The possibilities of life are great. In the hundreds and thousands of avenues open to us to-day, offering usefulness, happiness, and self-development, we are apt to grow confused and bewildered. It is impossible that one human being should compass them all. The best thing we can do is to honestly ask the question, "Which of all these things is worthy to receive this precious gift of time which has been placed in our hands, this jewel from eternity?" The question has been answered for us in one short sentence, "We may let go all things which we can not carry into the eternal life." The trivial and unworthy things of to-day may be passed by; the vanities, shams, and love of power, which satisfy for a while, must be put behind us, if we would possess the real treasures of life, which we may carry with us into eternity. To a large extent, what we are going to be depends upon individual temperament and environment. Just so surely as a person is born into the world with features, figure, disposition, and tastes peculiarly his own, so surely an individual work is prepared for that person—a work which, if he fails to do, will be forever undone, and in all the years to come there will be that much incomplete in God's ordering of the universe.

While it is true that each soul has its own peculiar work, to be determined by its own conscience and God, there are some lines of work so unmistakably appointed for our doing that we can not ignore them without violence to conscience. It seems that the special seal of God's approval has been set on some things, the divine hand has opened the way and led us to it, lest, in our bewilderment, we should fail to see his meaning.

Can any doubt that in woman's work for woman an avenue of usefulness has been opened to us worthy of our precious time, our profoundest thought, and our sincerest prayers? We wonder and wonder that any should doubt, that any should fail to respond to the invitation to share in this work. Everywhere that there is a Woman's Missionary Society the question is constantly asked, "Why are not more women interested in the cause?" The few who are absorbed, heart and soul, in the work, contrive and endeavor by all possible means to bring the indifferent ones into sympathy and co-operation, often with meager results. We hold our public meetings, and they come, listen to speeches, and are convinced and say it is a worthy cause, and sometimes give their names for membership; but to-morrow the practical, every-day things of life crowd in upon them, the little things with which our narrow lives are filled, and the impressions of the hour are forgotten. How are we to help this? What can we do to fasten the matter upon their hearts so that there will be no getting away from it until their whole duty is done? (MRS. J. L. L.)

The Christian Life.

ALONE WITH GOD.

In these days of hurry and bustle we find ourselves face to face with a terrible danger, and it is this: no time to be alone with God. The world, in these last days, is running fast; we live in what is called "the age of progress," and "you know we must keep pace with the times." So the world says. But this spirit of the world has not confined itself to the world. It is, alas! to be found among the saints of God. And what is the result? The result is no time to be alone with God, and this is immediately followed by no inclination to be alone with God. . . . This "desert life," as many call it, is of an importance that can not be overvalued. Let us turn to the pages of God's Book. On scanning its precious pages we find that the men of God—God's mighty men—were those who had been in "the school of God," as it has been well said; and his school was simply this—"in the desert alone with himself." It was there they got their teaching. Far removed from the din and bustle of the haunts of men—distant alike from human eye and ear—there they met alone with God; there they were equipped for the battle. And when the time came that they stood forth in public service for God their faces were not ashamed—nay, they had faces as lions; they were bold and fearless, yea, and victorious for God; for the battle had been won already in the desert alone with him.—London Christian.

The life of the Crucified was lived by one who delighted to do God's will. He did not exclude pleasure or morbidly delight in pain; it was just that he did not think about pleasing himself at all. He took the bitter and sweet as they were sent, and delighted in them because he knew the sender who sought only the good of all men. This is the life of the Crucified. You think happiness is to please yourself; it is not that at all, it is to delight in doing his will.—Edna Lyall.

Purity is power. The rose, among the sweetest and most beautiful of God's creations, is armed with thorns, nature's sharp bayonets for warding off attack. Purity is the defense of beauty; modesty is the safeguard of innocence. "Keep thyself pure." The severe chastity which repels familiarity is as absolutely essential for the safety of the soul as genial attractiveness is for its beauty.—A. J. Gordon.

I seldom hear the bell toll for one that is dead but conscience asks me: "What hast thou done for the saving of that soul before it left the body? There is one more gone into eternity! What didst thou do to prepare him for it? And what testimony must be given to the Judge concerning thee?"—Richard Baxter.

Let every youth aim, first of all and most of all, at self-mastery. Without it he must be base and miserable. With it he can not but be happy. Without it other things are but "gifts of the evil genii, which are curses in disguise."—F. W. Farrar.

A MINISTER'S STATEMENT

Rev. C. H. Smith of Plymouth, Conn., Gives the Experience of Himself and Little Girl in a Trying Season—What He Depends Upon.

The testimonials in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla come from a class of people whose words are worth considering. Many clergymen testify to the value of this medicine. Read this:

"By a severe attack of diphtheria I lost two of my children. I used Hood's Sarsaparilla as a tonic both for myself and little girl and found it most excellent as a means to restore the impoverished blood to its natural state and as a help to appetite and digestion. I depend upon it when I need a tonic and I find it at once efficacious." REV. C. H. SMITH, Congregational parsonage, Plymouth, Conn.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mary Elizaheth Mayo was born in Calcasieu parish, La., Dec. 2, 1860; joined the M. E. Church, South, at Lake Charles, La., June 17, 1882; converted Nov. 9, 1883, under the pastorate of Rev. M. C. Manly; was married to Rev. R. P. Howell, Oct. 2, 1888; was sanctified by faith at our meeting in Lake Arthur, in July, 1895.

The last time we met the subject of this notice was at Lake Arthur Holiness Camp Meeting, where she labored with great zeal and commendable diligence for the conversion of sinners and the sanctification of believers. Little did we think, when we parted with her, that she would so soon be called to heaven. How true is it "that in the midst of life we are in death!" Having obeyed the injunction of the Son of God, "Therefore be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh," she was fully prepared to answer the summons, and hie away to the many-mansion house of her Father. Our loss is her eternal gain. Therefore we do not sorrow as those who have no hope, since "they who sleep in Jesus, God has promised to bring with him."

Sister Howell was indeed a helpmate to her husband in the broadest signification of the term. She was always ready to second the ministerial movements of her husband in making needed arrangements and necessary preparation for leaving home, thus relieving him of care and embarrassment in the prosecution of his work, and meeting his obligations as preacher in charge of the work to him assigned. During his absence, while filling his appointments, attending protracted meetings, and performing other labors for the promotion of the cause and kingdom of Christ, he could rest content, being fully assured that home interests received prompt attention by the most rigid economy and frugality in the use of means placed at her disposal. He knew that the family altar did not suffer decadence, but holy incense of devotion ascended night and morning, burdened with earnest obsecration for the preservation of his health and protection of his person. Nor was the religious interest of the precious children despised, but grouped often as occasion required about the altar of prayer to hear the reading of Scripture, and then on bended knees dedicate them to God, and implored divine illumination in the spiritual training and Christian development. As often as occasion indicated and her judgment suggested, she would call upon each one of them to ask the blessings of God upon father, mother, and upon one another.

As a mother, she guarded with scrupulous care and punctilious solicitude the morals of her children by personal admonition, hortatory injunction to speak the truth, to obey their parents, love one another, and to be kind to their playmates, and avoid appropriating anything that belonged to others, or claiming that to which they could not establish a personal and legitimate right. She never hesitated to condemn in those professing to be the disciples of Christ that which she deemed inconsistent and out of harmony with the morality of the Bible, or incongruous with the experience taught in the Word of God. What she condemned in others she strove with commendable diligence and fortitude to eliminate from her own life.

But she has gone from us, and leaves her husband and four precious children to mourn their irreparable loss. She was ready, thank God! when the messenger came to answer his summons without dread or reluctation concerning her future destiny, felicity, and environment.

To her husband we say: Let this thought console and comfort you, that though she can not come to you, you can go to her, and carry all your precious children with you. Yes, your dear Mollie has anticipated you, and will wait at the gates of pearl your coming to welcome you home, and introduce you to the companionship of the blest and solidarity of the sainted saved.

The writer of this memoir confidently expects to join the wife, husband and children where parting is unknown and separation becomes an impossibility.

Rest on, dear one; when our pilgrimage shall terminate below, will take the chariot and, mounting above the earth, Sun, Sirius, Arcturus, and Aldebaran, will hie away on flying wheels to the city of gold, the home of God, and the saints' everlasting rest.

JOHN BENJAMIN PICKEL, SR.

BY REV. J. A. PARKER, D. D.

Few laymen of the M. E. Church, South, are better known to the members of the Louisiana Conference, nor more highly esteemed, than John B. Pickel.

Bro. Pickel was born in King and Queen county, Va., May 6, 1835, and died at Sunny Side Plantation, in Rapides parish, La., Oct. 30, 1898. In 1853 he settled in Avoyelles parish, where he engaged in farming, which avocation he pursued to the end of his life. On Feb. 19, 1857, he married Margarette M. Keller, whom he left behind, with twelve children, all of whom were about him in his last hours.

He was a man of great energy, and of unusually robust constitution. His early life was spent in dissipation, which sapped his vitality, and brought about an early decadence in one of the strongest, best built of men. In 1872 he determined to reform his life. His religious predilections had been with the Baptist Church, but circumstances suggested the Methodist Church as a stronger probable help. He would not join the church till he could so break away from his former habits as to conform his outer life to the exterior demands of the church. In the course of a few months, when he realized that, by grace, he could overcome, he united himself to the church under the ministry of the late Christian Keener in 1872. He ever regarded Bro. Keener as an instrument in God's hands of his conversion.

For a number of years Bro. Pickel has been in declining health. Hoping to obtain relief by a change of climate and environments, last Spring he went to Virginia, where he spent several months, but received little benefit. Returning home, he continued to decline. I visited him about 10 o'clock Sunday morning, Oct. 30. His condition was largely comatose, but, on being aroused, he recognized me, and said, "I love you; I want to kiss you." Looking up as I held his hand, he continued as strength would permit, "I love the Lord; I love the Lord." When asked if he was trusting in the Lord, he replied, "Trusting in the Lord! I'm trusting in the Lord." About 3 o'clock P. M. he began to call for his family, beginning with the eldest of the children, looking upon each, and receiving the farewell kiss from each. He had not seen his son George (professor in the State Normal School) for quite a time, and was not previously cognizant of him. When called, Prof. Pickel approached his father, who looked up in his face, saying, "George, my boy George." He at once began to sink, and at 5:15 P. M., Sunday, Oct. 30, 1898, he quietly and sweetly "fell on sleep."

I have never known a man more loyal and obedient to the church's order and discipline than J. B. Pickel. Almost from the introduction of the lay element into our Conference he has been a delegate, working efficiently on the various Boards and committees to which he was assigned at the Conference sessions, and in the interim of the Conferences doing his work in his home church, helping the pastor on in all the departments of his labor. Nor was his usefulness confined to the church. He was a member of the Parish School Board for Rapides parish, and no member of the Board was more efficient. Intensely practical, large-hearted, full of charity and deep sympathy, his hand was ever open to the needy, and his treasures at the command of the oppressed.

A truly good man is gone, leaving a good example for life, and bright assurances of his future bliss. The brethren will pray for the bereaved family.

IN MEMORIAM.

In memory of Julius A. Johnston, only son of Rev. J. M. Johnston and wife.

Dr. Johnston was born Jan. 23, 1878, in the State of Alabama, and died in Alexandria, La., Oct. 19, 1898.

He literally laid down his life for his friends. He was devoted to his profession, for which he was eminently fitted. He went at the sacrifice of his own health at the call of his friends, dying at the post of duty in the very zenith of young manhood, while a large circle of admiring and devoted friends are left to deplore his death. He was educated in his native State, except while under the tutorship of S. S. Melton at Peirce's Springs, in the State of Mississippi. He was for some time under the instruction of John Massey, now president of Tuskegee Female College, after which he spent two terms at the University at Greensborough, Ala. He received his diploma from the Medical College at Mobile, Ala., in the year 1880. He began the practice of his profession in Rapides parish, La., finally locating in Alexandria, La.

He seemed specially endowed by nature for the practice of medicine. It was often said of him that he was a born doctor. For twenty years he filled his place among the world's workers, striving, with God's help, to heal the sick and minister to the comfort of the suffering of earth. He easily won a place in the confidence and affections of the people of Alexandria and vicinity, which he held to the day of his death, which was indeed a sad day in the little city of Alexandria. Evidences of deep grief were manifest among his large circle of acquaintances.

The doctor was a Christian gentleman and held in high esteem by the medical fraternity of Alexandria. The poor and suffering will sadly miss his ministering hand and brotherly advice.

He was converted and joined the church at Hills Camp Ground, in Montgomery county, Ala. He remained true and faithful to the end, and died triumphantly, devoting his last conscious moments to a tender and affectionate farewell to his loved ones and friends. He leaves a wife, two sons, a daughter and aged father and mother to mourn his loss. But, thank God! their's is not the sorrow of hope.

It pains the writer to pen these lines, for to him he was a friend in need.

"Servant of God, well done;
Rest from thy loved employ—
The battle's fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy!"

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. C. Parrott, P. C., Blue Springs circuit, North Mississippi Conference, Nov. 14, 1898: "We have had a very pleasant and, trust, profitable year—one of the best in some respects we have ever had. Have not had a great ingathering, but a deep and satisfactory revival in the church; 77 conversions and the most of them received into the church. The people subscribed more liberally to collections than usual for this charge, but I find it more difficult to collect this Fall on account mainly of the low price of cotton. The pastors and people of the Corinth district were very much shocked and distressed in the early part of the year over the death of our very efficient and popular presiding elder, Bro. H. R. Tucker, who was so remarkably faithful in looking so minutely after all the work of the district. I, with many others, felt that I had lost a special friend who had often proved his friendship all along from the time when in early years in the old church at Corinth, in the same year, we were converted, joined the church, and began our life-work together. I shall, by the help of God, follow on, and some sweet day be with him again and forever. In the providence of God, we are blessed with another good presiding elder, Bro. J. W. Honnoll, who received Bro. Tucker and I into the church and was our first pastor for two years. We are often advised by the wise and good not to reserve all our good words for our friends till they are taken from us, and I want to say that Bro. Honnoll is the right man in the right place, and we all love him, and I but voice the sentiment of the pastors and people of this district in saying that we will be delighted and thankful to have him another year as our presiding elder. In conclusion, let me say that we all look with pleasant anticipations to the coming session of Conference, when we shall again look upon the kind face of our editor."

Rev. W. T. Griffin, Meyersville, Miss., Nov. 17, 1898: "Meyersville circuit seems to have not only held her own, but moved up some this year. While our membership is small, eighteen have been added to the number. Several have been converted, some reclaimed, and others brought to a closer walk with God and a better knowledge of the truth. Precious revivals have been experienced. The church and parsonage property have been very much improved, the poor helped, and other collections pretty well up. The people, though few, are liberal, if not all pious. The Lord will save this Delta country, but it takes time, denial, and hard licks. Prohibition has been very much strengthened, and will, ere long, triumph. Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies are doing good work."

Children are not so much to be taught as to be trained. To teach a child is to give him ideas; to train him is to enable him to reduce those ideas to practice.—H. W. Beecher.

A woman's health is her best and most precious endowment. Her good looks, her enjoyment of life, her happiness, and love and its continuance all depend upon her health. Call it vanity if you will, it is a woman's duty to worship at the shrine of her mirror. It is her duty to preserve her good looks and youthful spirits as long as possible.

The woman who suffers from some weakness or derangement of the organs distinctly feminine, can note the daily encroachments of general ill-health, by looking in her mirror. The sallow or blotched complexion, heavy eyes and dark circles under them, the little wrinkles that gradually creep around the corners of her eyes and mouth and the general look of listlessness and despondency will tell the story. Special troubles of this kind are too frequently neglected because the natural and proper modesty of women keeps them from consulting the average run of physicians. These men, because they are without inherent delicacy themselves, imagine that women are the same. They insist upon obnoxious examinations and local treatment from which any sensitive woman shrinks. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will do more for a woman who suffers in this way than all the doctors of this description together. During the past thirty years it has been used by over ninety thousand women with marvelous results. It is an unfailing cure for all weakness and disease peculiar to women. All good medicine dealers sell it.

"For a number of years I suffered with a complication of female troubles," writes Mrs. J. B. Ferguson, of Edgmoor, Chester Co., S. C. "I tried various remedies from physicians, but nothing seemed to do me any good. It seemed that my back would kill me. I had smothering spells at night so bad I could not rest. Also had constipation. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Pleasant Pellets' and was entirely cured."

Best Edition of the World's Best Book,

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers. New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to December, '99. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

SELF-PRONOUNCING

S. S. Teachers' Reference Bible

Text Conforms Exactly to the Oxford Teachers' Edition.

This Bible is printed from Large, Beautiful and Clear New Type. All Proper Names are Divided into Syllables and Every Vowel is Marked and the Syllables Inflected, showing the Sounds and Accents as they are given in a Dictionary, thus enabling the reader to properly pronounce every word. This feature is a great improvement and a strong recommendation for this Bible over others.

This Bible contains the celebrated Oxford Teachers' Helps together with a complete series of New Maps illustrating the geography of Palestine and the surrounding countries from the earliest times, and embodying the most recent discoveries renders this Bible especially desirable to teachers and students of the Holy Scriptures.

Imperial Seal Binding, Tuck Edges, known as "Divinity Circuit," Linen Lined, Round Corners, Red under Gold Edges, Price, $4.00.

This book in Bourgeois type will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price ($4) to any address; but to that select class who read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, we furnish it on the following terms: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, viz., to December, '99, and we will send it to you, postpaid, for $1.75. (A little later you will have to pay to January, 1900.)

The same Bible in Minion type will be sent for $1.55; in Emerald type, for $1.15, to those who pay a full year in advance.

For fifty cents additional we will send Bible with index. For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved on the outside in gilt letters.

Deep below, as high above,
Sweeps the circle of God's love.
One is our faith, and one our longing
To make the world within our reach
Somewhat the better for our living
And gladder for our human speech.

Man-like is it to fall into sin,
Fiend-like is it to dwell therein,
Christ-like is it for sin to grieve,
God-like is it all sin to leave.

MORAL SUNSHINE.

Life is never satisfactory to the man who indulges feelings of gloom. A pessimist, because of his despondency, can not work heartily, nor can he inspire others to put forth their best efforts; but the cheerful, hopeful man, who resolves to make the best of whatever comes, finds life worth living, and moves steadily on to success. As mists flee before the morning sun, so difficulties vanish before the man of cheerful spirit and resolute will.

Sir John Lubbock was right in saying: "The world would be better and brighter if people were only taught the duty of being happy as well as the happiness of duty. To be happy ourselves is a most effectual contribution to the happiness of others."

Many persons make life a burden to themselves and others by dwelling on their misfortunes and disappointments, when, if they would only count up their blessings, they would find little occasion for gloominess and grumbling. There is nearly always a bright side, and an effort should be made to find it.

The benefits of cheerfulness are manifold. Yet there is hardly any duty to which men pay so little attention as that of maintaining a joyous, hopeful spirit.

Many people succumb to diseases of various kinds, mainly because of their giving way to fretfulness and melancholy. In many cases there is truth in the old saying that "a jolly doctor is better than all his pills." Cheerfulness is recognized by the medical profession generally as an excellent tonic. Says the London Lancet, one of the leading medical journals: "This power of 'good spirits' is a matter of high moment to the sick and weakly. To the former it may mean the ability to survive; to the latter the possibility of outliving, or living in spite of, a disease. It is, therefore, of the greatest importance to cultivate the highest and most buoyant frame of mind which the conditions will admit." "Laugh and grow fat" is a maxim that has sound philosophy in it.

As a promoter of success cheerfulness has an inestimable value. When Napoleon was making his famous ascent of the Alps with his army, noticing that the soldiers were becoming faint and dejected, he sent word to the band-masters to play a lively air. This was done, and at once the spirits of the men revived. They began to move upward with a quicker, firmer step; soon the summit was reached, and victory was within their grasp. It is wonderful what power stirring music has to inspire courage and revive flagging energy. The deck hands on our river steamers seem never to work so well as when they have started up a song. Says Carlyle: "Give us, O give us, the man who sings at his work. Be his occupation what it may, he is equal to any of those who follow the same pursuit in sullen silence. He will do more in the same time; he will do it better; he will persevere longer. Wonderful is the strength of cheerfulness. Altogether past calculation is its power of endurance."

When the machinery of daily occupation is oiled with cheerfulness, things go on smoothly and successfully. A man of joyous spirit makes light of hindrances that would bar the progress of a despondent toiler. To quote from Lubbock again: "Most of us can, as we choose, make of this world either a palace or a prison."

A habit of cheerfulness also enlarges our usefulness. Nobody likes to company with a grumbler, or a man of cloudy disposition; but joy-makers, sunshine-bringers, are always in demand. Who does not join with Sir Walter Scott in saying?—"Give me an honest laugher." He was himself a man of sunny temper, and had a kind word and a pleasant smile for everybody.

Oliver Wendell Holmes states that, many years ago, while walking among the graves at Mt. Auburn, he came upon a plain marble slab which bore an epitaph of only four words, but to his mind they meant more than any of the labored inscriptions on the surrounding monuments—"She was so pleasant." "That was all, and it was enough. That one note revealed the music of a life of which I knew and asked nothing more."

Christian faith and a Christian life are essential to cheerfulness of the highest order. There can be but little sunshine in the soul of him who has an accusing conscience; but it is easy to be cheerful when one walks in the pathway of duty and has an assurance of acceptance with God. "Light is sown for the righteous and gladness for the upright in heart."

Of all men the Christian ought to be the happiest. In every fibre of its being Christianity is the uncompromising foe of petulance and pessimism. It is the inspirer of all our best songs and poems and works of art, the source of all that is brightest and noblest in our literature and our civilization. And it means most to us when we need it most. Infidelity has no songs, no comfort for aching hearts, no message of hope for the unfortunate and the despairing. Human philosophy sees no silver lining to the clouds of sorrow that sooner or later overspread all earthly skies. How different with the gospel of Christ! It has comfort for every sorrow, balm for every wound, joy for every trial, light for every hour of darkness. It declares that even the greatest sorrows and ills of life are under divine control, and that they shall "work together for good to them that love God." In tones of triumph it shouts, "Earth has no sorrow that God can not heal." It fills our hearts with a hope that nothing can destroy, puts a new song into our mouths and bids us "rejoice evermore."

Let us never forget that cheerfulness is a Christian duty. A gloomy, complaining Christian dishonors God and misrepresents Christianity. The Christian is commissioned to be a light-bearer, an evangel of tidings of great joy. If we Christians are no more joyful or patient amid the trials of life than others are, then who will receive our message? Every regenerate heart ought to be perpetually attuned to the music of hope and joy. Well has it been said that "God is glorified, not by our groans, but by our thanksgivings."

MEN AND THE CHURCH.

It is a generally recognized and much-regretted fact that the churches of our land are poorly attended by and exercise comparatively little influence over the male members of society. While this is not so true in the rural districts, in the cities it is especially noticeable, and has become more marked during the last fifteen or twenty years. This neglect of the churches by large numbers of the men has been under discussion a good while, and various reasons have been assigned therefor. The situation is a serious one, but until we lay our finger upon the cause or causes of such lack of interest, attempts at improvement in this direction will necessarily prove unsatisfactory. Some claim that poor preaching and want of cordiality in the churches are chiefly accountable for the non-attendance of the men; but while this may be true in some instances, it is wide of the mark so far as the whole country is concerned. While we admit that dull sermons do not attract outsiders, we believe that the average minister is better informed than the average layman, and that the average sermon, though it may be neither brilliant nor profound, furnishes good mental pabulum for the average occupant of the pew. Says the Rev. Howard Allen Bridgman, of Boston, in an article in the New York Independent: "We are frequently told that the quality of the preaching is not sufficiently high to attract men whose minds are vigorous and who keep fully abreast of the times. Its sufficient disproof is the fact that every great city has at least a few preachers who are certainly strong enough to satisfy the most masculine mind, and brilliant enough to attract men who care anything whatever for a fine piece of platform address. I admit that the average minister may not always be interesting in his sermon work. This is because the ministry, like every other calling, draws to itself a great many average men who, on the whole, preach Sabbath after Sabbath quite as well as we could expect. Better preaching we would all like to have, but better preaching will never solve the problem."

The bad effects of the lack of church cordiality have been so frequently pointed out of late that in many churches there has been a wonderful improvement in this respect. The unwisdom and unchristianity of slighting strangers and newcomers is becoming more and more apparent. No church can expect to make substantial gains among the unconverted and churchless without an earnest and constant manifestation of friendliness. There are multitudes of men, however, who can not be brought to church even by a hearty welcome.

Far more operative than either of the reasons mentioned, Mr. Bridgman thinks, is the change in Sunday observance, which has occurred within the last twenty-five years. The picture he draws is sadly true:

"Where once the church bell and groups of reverent families wending their way toward the house of God, and careful instruction at the family fireside, and books, papers and magazines of a distinctively religious cast, were the things most in evidence on the Sabbath day, we behold now the Sunday newspaper of from forty to one hundred pages; we hear the whir of the bicycle; we see parks crowded with people making holiday; we note the visiting back and forth among even Christian families. Now all this does affect church attendance; and the push of modern life is so strenuous and so constant that the average man welcomes the freedom and the physical refreshment of Sunday as never before."

We believe Mr. Bridgman hits the nail squarely on the head when he asserts that the chief reason why for the non-attendance of men upon the churches is indifference to, or "real lack of interest in the things for which the church stands." To quote from him further: "When the mind is full of other things—business, society, clubs, yachting, wheeling, scientific pursuits—when all these things command one's largest devotion, the things of the spiritual life vanish into the background. Here is the clubman, for instance. When the duties of his profession or business are discharged, a good dinner, a cigar, a row on the river, or a pleasant hour or two of social chat fills up the measure of his ambition."

To overcome this extensive and dangerous indifference is one of the most difficult problems the church has before it. It is a task requiring patience, zeal, love and wisdom in no small degree. But a small per cent. of the men are hostile to the church; they simply wish to be let alone, to follow their own sweet will. Numbers belong to that class who have no special objection to religion; but, Gallio-like, they simply care nothing for it.

It is folly to rely upon any one means to reach these non-church goers. Attractive preaching, popular music and more cordiality will help; but nothing is likely to prove so effective as personal solicitation and influence. Laymen and ministers, filled with the Holy Ghost, should go out into the highways and hedges, and by personal contact and personal pleading with the careless and godless, compel them, as it were, to come to the house of God.

PRESIDENT M'KINLEY'S POLICY.

Since it has been practically settled that the United States is to take possession of the Philippine Islands as well as Porto Rico, there is much speculation as to President McKinley's policy concerning them. The President himself has given no public expression of his intentions, but it is stated on the authority of one who has been correct in his forecasts that the programme has been definitely settled, and that it is as follows:

1. There will be no extra session of Congress next Spring, barring grave emergencies.

2. The conquered islands will be continued under a strong military government.

3. All fiduciary positions will be administered by army officers.

4. The islands will be kept out of politics as much as possible until the American people have had an opportunity to study them and the national sentiment can crystallize as to the relation they should hold to the United States.

5. The islands will probably retain their present currency systems, but these may be bolstered by decrees which will insure stability.

6. Being in effect military colonies, the conquered islands will have tariffs of their own, which will be levied on imports from the United States as well as those from other countries.

7. The United States will collect duties on imports from the islands the same as though they still belonged to a foreign sovereignty.

In providing a temporary military form of government the President adopts the policy pursued by other nations. He also avoids the necessity of appointing a host of office-holders who may embarrass the administration in deciding upon the permanent form of government.—Northwestern Advocate.

WHAT KIND WORDS WILL DO.

One Sunday night years ago a young man and his wife strayed out into a church service. They were a lonely couple in a great city. They were neither of them Christians—rather, both of them, carelessly, even blatantly, unchristian. With the services they were not especially impressed. But after the service, as they were standing about looking at the church, the pastor approached them and welcomed them in a way so genuinely cordial that the hard edge of their strangeness was at once smoothed away, and the young couple were sure somebody had real interest in them. "We'll go to that church again," they said together after the warm welcome. They did. It was not long before both husband and wife accepted Christ as their Savior and Lord and united with that church. It was a great trophy that pastor began to win that night, not by his sermon, but by his welcome. Almost penniless and obscure and quite disheartened that young man was on that night when so warmly welcomed. To-day he is a member of a firm which flings the meshes of its business far and wide, and he is now one of the best and most winning of Sunday-school workers and superintendents.—Rev. Wayland Hoyt.

"MACHINERY NOT POWER."

It matters not how complete and perfect a piece of machinery may be, or how well adapted to its purpose, it will accomplish nothing without sufficient propelling power to put it in motion. A locomotive engine may be perfect in all its parts and combinations, and of large capacity, but it requires steam to propel it, so that it may accomplish the end for which it was designed. The same is true of the church. Its ecclesiastical machinery may be as perfect as human wisdom can make it, and it may be complete and harmonious in all its parts, and well adapted to the purpose intended; but, after all, it is but an instrument of power, and possesses no efficiency in itself. It is effective only so far as it is used by the living, active force of the church behind it. A church may boast, and that truly, of its ecclesiastical economy, but if it does not perform the work of a church, that will be to its discredit rather than to its praise. It is not what a church is adapted to do, or what it is capable of doing, but what it does, that fixes its status and determines its worth. Talk is cheap; it is deeds that tell.—Methodist Recorder.

"A CONTRARY MAN."

There are queer people who admire everything distant from their own home. They are Methodists, yet rail against our Discipline and Church. They humiliate their wives (who strive in season and out of season to please them) by praising the wives of other men. They never hear a good sermon in the pulpit of their own church. If their dinner were prepared by a French chef, they would vow that the meal was inferior to the cooking of the ignorant scullion in a neighbor's kitchen.

Such mortals are a "misery" to themselves and a plague to everybody else. Their presence chills every enterprise. At their fireside their eyes peep here and there in search of subjects for snarling. In public they predict evil. The crops will fail, or, if the season is good, there will be too much raised "to bring anything."

We once heard of a stick "too crooked to lie still on the ground." Every community is pestered with a "contrary man." He is worse than the "seven-year itch."—Richmond Christian Advocate.

EARLY THANKSGIVING DAYS.

The first great American Thanksgiving Day was in 1784, for the declaration of peace. There was one more national Thanksgiving in 1789, and no other till 1863, when President Lincoln issued a national proclamation for a day of thanksgiving. Since that time the President has issued an annual proclamation.—Journal of Education.

ATTACK THE HEART.

Men are seldom won to God by the force of argument. They are not hooked into the kingdom of heaven on the horns of a dilemma. Argument is the front door of the skeptic, where he has all his troops of defense drawn up. Tell him, "God is love," and he will ask, "Who is God?" "What is love?" But let the forces be drawn up and assault at the door of the heart's affections, where he is not expecting attack—love him, and he will open both to you and to God.—Methodist Recorder.

Dr. Henry K. Carroll, formerly of the editorial staff of The Independent, returned last week after an absence of nearly two months in Porto Rico, whither he was sent as a special commissioner by President McKinley to investigate the political, social and material condition of the island, and make report in regard to the form of governmental administration which needs to be put into operation there. Dr. Carroll, as an editor of unusual ability, as a government commissioner in charge of the religious and denominational data of the census of 1890, and, as a high-minded patriot, was peculiarly fitted for this special work, which will doubtless help the President and his advisers to understand thoroughly the situation and needs in our new province.—Central Advocate.

It is sometimes said that there are no instances of conversion from Mohammedanism. Yet in the Punjab, India, the Church Missionary Society has nine ministers and twenty catechists who are converts from Islam. And in North India there are over a hundred Moslem converts, many of whom are persons of distinction in native society. The Church Missionary Society has on its roll over a thousand who have renounced Mohammedanism, and the Rhenish Missionary Society has over two thousand. And in the island of Java the converts are numbered by thousands. True, all these are in regions where there is religious liberty. But the fact shows that if the same liberty were allowed in Turkey and Persia, the same results would follow.—Exchange.

John Locke's essay "On the Conduct of the Understanding" still ranks, justly, as an English classic. An edition in paper covers, at 10 cents, comes to us from John B. Alden, publisher, New York, who has done so much to popularize high-class literature.

There are two freedoms—the false, where the man is free to do what he likes; the true, where a man is free to do what he ought.—Charles Kingsley.

NOTES.

Rev. J. E. Denson is taking a needed rest in Central Louisiana.

***

Dr. I. W. Cooper will preach at Louisiana Avenue next Sabbath.

***

***

***

***

We had the pleasure of a brief interview a few days since with Dr. I. W. Cooper as he passed through the city en route to Lafayette to assist the pastor, Rev. I. T. Reames, in revival services. Subsequently we received a note from him, from which we quote as follows: "The elect ladies of Lafayette, La., will bear the expense of some worthy poor boy at Centenary." This is indeed cheering news. Let other places catch the spirit of these noble women. Let the Methodists all over Louisiana rally to Centenary with their money and their patronage. This they should regard as both a duty and a privilege.

MY EXPERIENCE.

It is with much pleasure that I relate my experience through the columns of our dear old ADVOCATE. To begin, I will say I am now enjoying the blessing of entire sanctification. You may ask, "How were you led into this experience?" When I was presiding elder on the Natchez district I opposed the doctrine as said to be taught by Dr. Carradine. Many who will read this will remember how earnestly and persistently I set myself to stop the spread of the so called heresy in my district.

Nearly two years ago, in the providence of God, I was sent to Yazoo City. Soon after I had entered upon the duties of my new charge I was seized with an intense hunger and thirst for righteousness. My soul panted for God. Dr. Carradine's book, "The Old Man," fell into my hands. I read it thoughtfully and prayerfully, and derived much benefit from it. My hunger continued to increase. My experience became more and more unsatisfying. I determined to get Dr. Carradine to hold a meeting for me, and resolved to sit at his feet and learn of Jesus. On the thirteenth of this month he preached his first sermon in my church. At the close of the sermon he invited all who wanted the blessing of entire sanctification to come to the altar. I was the first at the altar, but not the first to obtain the blessing. Bro. R. L. Bennett entered, and entered first into the experience of perfect love. My heart grew heavy, and I prayed more earnestly for the blessing. In a few moments the fire fell on my heart, and I shouted God's praises. I told the Doctor that I had the blessing. But I was mistaken. I waked next morning wishing I had not claimed the blessing, and that night publicly disclaimed it.

I had had many such blessings in my life. It was not different from other blessings I had enjoyed. I was blessed, but not sanctified. Nothing dismayed, I continued to press my suit, and on last Sabbath, in the quiet of my home, I received the blessing of entire sanctification. My joy was not ecstatic, but full. It came as the coming of day, until the sunshine poured in floods upon my soul. On Wednesday last, at about 12 o'clock, the windows were opened, and the fire of God poured through my nature. Under the mighty power of God, I became helpless, and fell to the floor. No tongue can tell the joy and glory that rolled in billows over my enraptured soul. Glory! glory! glory! I did not limp like Jacob, but could not walk at all.

Praise God! Thirty-six years ago, while an eight-year-old boy, God regenerated me, and on last Sabbath, at 9:30 A. M., he sanctified me soul and body. Praise God, I am at rest.

For thirty-six years I tried the growing plan, but it utterly failed to grow me into sanctification; but, glory to God! I have by faith obtained the blessing; found that second rest. Hallelujah! Amen!

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Another Conference year has almost closed. Ere this shall be read by the public we shall be in our twenty-ninth session at Aberdeen. Fourteen years will have passed since the Conference was held in that hospitable city, and thirty-eight years since this writer was admitted on trial into the Memphis Conference there. We are anticipating cordial entertainment as of yore, and praying that the occasion may be one of mutual blessing to hosts and guests.

We shall greatly miss the presence of some brethren whom we have been accustomed to meet with for years in our annual convocation. Two of our beloved comrades have been transferred to heaven. Brethren Hesley R. Tucker and Joseph B. Harris will meet with us no more in this life; but we trust that "when our work on earth is done," and "the roll is called up yonder," we shall be with them "forever with the Lord."

Several have transferred to other Conferences; two or three faithful servants of many years will retire from active service, and there will be but few transfers to us or applications for admission; so, the outlook is, that several supplies will be needed for the work.

According to Bro. Shipman (self-constituted election manager) the vote on the district question is very close. So the matter had better rest as where it is at present. Presiding elders, pastors and other workers are busy, closing up and getting ready for Conference. As usual, there will be some good reports and some otherwise. We hope that in the aggregate there will be a fair showing of prosperity for the year.

The Colporter and Sunday-school Agent is prepared to make a fairly good report of service and success; he has endeavored to do his work faithfully, and has succeeded in distributing more books and papers than during any previous year. He has been enabled to attend seven of the nine District Conferences, and to visit seventy churches in fifty-five pastoral charges, and to preach and speak times innumerable. The year has been to him one of great blessing and gratifying success, and it will be a crowning joy if he can report at Conference, "Collections in full."

The Lord be praised for the mercies of the year, and grant unto us a happy reunion and joyous Conference.

CANCER CURED BY ANOINTING WITH OIL.

[From Pentecostal Herald, Louisville, Ky.]

[The following was sent us by the writer. We gladly give it place. We believe Dr. Bye to be a Christian gentleman, and it is a pleasure to allow Sister Sneed to testify to her cure.—EDITOR.]

REV. W. E. ARNOLD,

Dear Brother:—Having seen Dr. D. M. Bye's cancer cure advertised in the Pentecostal Herald, I decided to give the same a trial. At the above stated time I was suffering with a cancer on my nose of sixteen years' standing, termed by my physician a cancer of the skin. The place was increasing both in size and inflammation rapidly and had the appearance of resulting seriously in a short time. I sent for Dr. Bye's medicine, used the same as he directed, and just one month from the time I first wrote to Dr. Bye, the cancer was gone entirely and the place perfectly well, only a slight scar left. I am the widow of Rev. George W. Sneed, who joined the Tennessee Conference in the year 1835; died holding a supernumerary relation to the same in the year 1851. I am now in my ninety-first year, and having so large an acquaintance in both Tennessee and Texas, feel anxious that my testimonial should be published so that all those afflicted as I was may read of the wonderful cure and try the same. I feel a desire to send a trumpet blast to the North, South, East and West, that the entire world might know what the blessed Lord has done for me through the instrumentality of Dr. Bye.

If you can allow me space enough in the columns of your paper for the above, I will appreciate it greatly, and am willing that my article be condensed if you think best.

I am a constant reader of the Pentecostal Herald and each copy is a treat for me. I enjoy to the fullest extent the blessing of entire sanctification, and while your paper is so great a blessing to me, I have used it in bringing others into the same blessed experience, and shall continue to work in my feeble way for the Lord as long as I live.

Hoping I have not proven worrisome to you, and that you will give this a favorable consideration, I am your sister in Christ,

MRS. MARY D. SNEED,
Waco, Texas, Box 123.

Persons afflicted with Cancer or Tumor may address DR. D. M. BYE, Lock Box 25, Indianapolis, Ind., and he will send them books and papers free, giving prices of treatment, and hundreds of letters from the afflicted in every part of the United States and Canada who have been cured; also half tone cuts from photographs showing facts that can not be questioned.

TEMPERANCE.

The report on Temperance which was unanimously adopted by the Tennessee Conference was worthy of that body, and will go to record as one of the strongest body of resolutions ever passed by a Southern Methodist Conference. The following are the resolutions:

"Resolved, That we, as a body, are unalterably opposed to the open saloon and liquor traffic and especially to selling license and legalizing the sale of intoxicating drinks; and regard the same as a crime against God and humanity.

"Second—That we pledge ourselves to aid in any genuine reform movement looking to the placing of good men in office, especially in the State Legislature, who are against the great evil and who will support all genuine temperance movements in that body.

"Third—That, while we do not presume to dictate to our voting members their political affiliations, we do express the opinion that no genuine Methodist should be controlled by any political clique or party organization that is managed in the interest of the saloon business, and we do affirm that the only proper attitude of every true Methodist toward this traffic is one of uncompromising opposition and a never-ending warfare until the whole thing is literally wiped from the face of the earth. We therefore pledge ourselves to vote for no candidate for the Legislature who is in favor of licensing the liquor traffic."—Central Methodist.

On the eighth of December the New York Independent will be fifty years old. While avoiding all noisy demonstrations, the Independent hopes to make that issue one of the best it has ever published, if not an event in the history of literary journalism. Among the notable articles already promised are two on the Founding and History of the Independent, by Dr. R. S. Storrs, D. D., LL.D., and Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.; A Pathological Study of Anarchists, by the famous Italian criminologist, Cesare Lombroso; Imperialism, by ex-Secretary of the Navy Hilary A. Herbert; The Anglo-Saxon Alliance, by Edward Dicey, C. B.; Contrasts of the Spanish-American War with the War of 1812 from a Naval Standpoint, by Commodore Higginson, who commanded the "Massachusetts" at Santiago. Edward Everett Hale, Thomas Wentworth Higginson and Justin McCarthy, M. P., will also contribute articles, while some of the Poems are by Bliss Carman and Richard Henry Stoddard, and a long Naval Story by Park Benjamin. The subscription price of the Independent has been reduced from $3 to $2 a year.

THE HOLIDAYS.

Special low rate tickets to points in the Southeastern States will be sold by the Texas & Pacific Railway Company from all points on its line, Dec. 20 and 21, the same as in former years. It should be borne in mind that passengers have the choice of three gateways via this line in going back to their old home for Christmas and New Year's, namely: New Orleans, Shreveport and Memphis. It is with a feeling of pleasure and pride that we offer you the best passenger service in the South.

If you contemplate making the trip and want to know the cheapest and best way, write to nearest ticket agent or E. P. Turner, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Texas & Pacific Railway, Dallas, Texas, or to H. P. Hughes, Trav. Pass. Agt., Fort Worth, Texas.

RATES TO LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

I have just in hand a letter from Mr. E. P. Turner, G. P. and T. A. of the Texas and Pacific railroad, in which he states as follows:

"Replying to your letter of Nov. 16 relative to reduced rates to Mansfield, La., account Conference beginning Dec. 15: We have had this matter up with terminal lines at Mansfield, endeavoring to secure a one-fare rate; but as there seems to be a decided aversion to such reduction, we have agreed with them to announce rate of fare and a third for the round trip; tickets to be sold Dec. 13-14-15, final limit for return Dec. 23. Tickets to be sold from all points on our line in the State of Louisiana." JOHN T. SAWYER.

EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE.

This college is fuller than it ever was in the history of the institution. There are more boarders than were ever in the college at any one time; more than it was thought could be gotten in the building. This is done by utilizing another room or two as bed-rooms that were intended as recitation-rooms. There are now vacancies for only six or eight more boarders. In order to fill the building to its utmost capacity, Pres. Beeson has decided to take these at reduced rates. Those who intend to go off to boarding-school this Fall apply at once to President Beeson, Meridian, Miss.

The student body is said to be the finest the college has ever had, and the faculty far excells any of past years.

A Ragged Coat and An Empty Pocket

Changes the Aspect of the World.

Walter Wycoff, a student of social problems, abandoned his station in life and assumed the garb of daily toiler, taking his place among grimy handed workers in order to test the change. A MALARIA POISONED LIVER will also cause as great a change in physical life. Sunshine will leave the face. The eye loses its sparkle; while the skin assumes a dull copper tint. These are least of the evils and merely bespeak the external cry that Nature gives when battling with Malaria germs. Headache, Nausea, dullness of thought, pain in the back and side, a coated tongue, a horrible taste, are among the danger signals which if unheeded portend CONGESTION, CONVULSIONS, SUPPRESSION OF SECRETIONS AND TERMINATION OF LIFE.

Far easier than the solution of the social problem is the remedy for Malaria—DICKS' CHILLIFUGE absolutely exterminates it. A Few Doses, and health spreads her wings over the grateful system, and the sunshines once more, while life is worth the living.

DON'T MAKE THE WRINKLES DEEPER

BY MRS. FRANK A. BEECK.

Is father's eyesight growing dim,
  His form a little lower?
Is mother's hair a little gray,
  Her step a little slower?
Is life's hill growing hard to climb?
  Make not their pathway steeper,
Smooth out the furrows on their brows,—
  O do not make them deeper!

There's nothing makes a face so young,
  As joy, youth's fairest token;
And nothing makes a face grow old
  Like hearts that have been broken.
Take heed lest deeds of thine should make
  Thy mother be a weeper;
Stamp peace upon a father's brow,—
  Don't make the wrinkles deeper.

In doubtful pathways do not go,
  Be tempted not to wander,
Grieve not the hearts that love you so,
  But make their love grow fonder.
Much have thy parents borne for thee,
  Be now their tender keeper;
And let them lean upon thy love,—
  Don't make the wrinkles deeper.

Be lavish with thy loving deeds,
  Be patient, true and tender;
And make the path that upward leads,
  Aglow with earthly splendor.
Some day thy dear ones, stricken low,
  Must yield to death, the reaper;
And you will then be glad to know
  You made no wrinkles deeper.

—Lutheran Evangelist.

HOME TRAINING.

In a course of lectures at Chautauqua on the general subject, "How the Mind Builds the World," President Hyde, of Bowdoin College, touched upon methods of home training. There are two ways of bringing up a child which, in his opinion, are almost equally bad. One parent does everything for a child—lays down rules for all his conduct and solves all his problems. The result is, that, having had no responsibility to bear, the feeble, flabby will is undeveloped and atrophied, and when the props by which he has been supported are withdrawn he falls an easy victim to the first temptation that crosses his path.

On the other hand, according to President Hyde, it is just as great a mistake to leave him entirely alone. Left to himself he is pretty sure to take the broad road to destruction. He has to meet the inherited force of animal appetite, the accumulated momentum of social temptation, single-handed and alone, without the warnings of experience or the pleadings of affection or the support of sympathy or the inspiration of high ideals.

Dr. Hyde goes on to show that these two extremes ought to be combined, and gives this sensible advice: "Give the child his liberty, but keep his confidence. Let him choose his course, but be so close a friend that he will not think of making an important choice without asking your advice. Talk much with him, but about his little interests, not your grand ideas. Undoubtedly, this union of perfect liberty with perfect confidence is rather an expensive process in the time, patience and sympathy of the parents, but the reward is great and to be had with certainty on no cheaper terms.

"The union of liberty and sympathy is the secret of happiness in all the family relations. The true family is that in which each member—father, mother, husband, wife, brother, sister, son, daughter—has interests, enthusiasms, aims, peculiar to himself, for which he assumes entire responsibility, and at the same time no one has any interest, enthusiasm or aim which is not respected, appreciated and shared by every other member. That is heaven in a home."

BEAUTY IS HEART DEEP.

"Beauty is but skin deep." That is a skin-deep saying. Beauty is heart deep. It is out of the heart we desire it. It is out of the heart it grows. This is not a mere saying like the other. It is the fact and secret that we are eager to penetrate. There is, indeed, a skin-deep beauty—a mere unearned, unlived, bodily inheritance; but out of some heart, through some life-earning, it must always have been originated and evolved. The grandest beauty may wait, its secret glory not shown forth, for a lifetime; covered in with a plain, even ungainly exterior, as a noble building is roughly boarded up while it is being carefully wrought to its perfection. Many a woman goes through the world like this. Or the true beauty may be so tender in its beginnings that it needs to be hidden, shielded—not made sign of before its time—lest it should be spoiled and perish in the exposure. So the final heritage waits, while a present outer poverty is permitted, which, like the opposite condition, may have come down through some strain of ancestry, the outer betrayal of a far-back, inner want. Of such waiting, a little further on, a wonderful loveliness may be born. A plain woman, with beauty in her soul, has often been the mother of a marvelously beautiful child. . . . Beauty is a seed in the nature. It will germinate, bud, leaf out, blossom. If the beauty is inside you, and alive, you will—some time, somewhere—be a form of beauty. How else did God make out of his own beautiful thought the beautiful world? You have only got to live, love on, and wait. You shall have your birthright. Certain of this, will you care if even it does not wholly come to you within the threescore years and ten? When you come of age you shall possess your estate. Only—never barter it away for a mess of pottage you happen to be hungry for.—Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, in Ladies' Home Journal.

DON'T BE TOO ECONOMICAL.

Don't try to be too economical in matters which are vital to your success. Don't think it is wasting money to spend it for good literature.

It is no real economy to refuse to buy books and take publications which will help you to success, and which show how others in your line have succeeded. A single new idea which you can put into practice will sometimes pay for a new book or for a subscription to a magazine or paper. Ideas are the most valuable things in the world. A great many young men are kept back because they are too stingy to buy the tools which are absolutely essential to their success. You must not only read along the line of your occupation or profession, but outside of it, or you will soon get into a rut. Read history. No matter what your occupation or profession, history and biography especially will help you. Anything which will make you a broader, deeper, more intelligent man, will further your success.

Two important purposes which are served by comprehensive reading are the recreation and relaxation which it affords, and the added ability to make oneself agreeable to patrons. Customers are far more likely to frequent a place where they not only receive polite attention, but are liable to be engaged in pleasant and profitable conversation, and a merchant who shows himself well posted on various subjects is much more highly respected than an ignorant or silent man.—Success.

A SWEET CHRISTIAN LIFE.

Unless our religion has sweetened us to a very considerable extent—given us the control of our temper, checked us in the moments of our irritation and weakness, enabled us to meet misfortune and in a measure overcome it, developed within us the virtues of patience and long-suffering, making us tender and charitable in our judgments of others, and generally diffusing about us an atmosphere which is genial and winsome—whatever else we may have gained, one thing is sure: religion is not having its perfect work in us; and, even though our Christian life is clear and positive, it is only as a gnarled and twisted apple tree which bears no fruit, only as a prickly bush which bears no roses, and the very thing which of all others we should have is the very thing in which we are most deficient. A Christian life without sweetness is a lamp without light, salt without savor.—J. W. Johnston.

VIGOROUS WITH SELF.

You can not demonstrate the superiority of your own piety by proclaiming the faults of your fellow Christians in the market-place or from the housetop; and if you find yourself inclined to adopt that policy, you should raise the inquiry whether, instead of being filled with a godly jealousy for the cause of true religion, you are not in danger of becoming a common scold. The best people are not likely to be the most censorious. They were not model believers to whom our Lord said, "Why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thy own eye?" As we have before said, it is the people who live in glass houses that are mostly given to throwing stones. If you would be perfect, you should deal very vigorously with yourself, and be very gentle and forbearing with everybody else.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

ASSOCIATIONS OF HOME.

No boy, no girl, that remembers only love and tenderness and unselfishness and sweetness as associated with father and mother in the old-time home can ever come to be utterly bad. Give them manly and womanly example, give them training, give them inspiration of devoted lives, give them these higher, deeper things. Do not care so much whether you are accumulating money, so that you can leave them a fortune; but leave them an accumulated fortune of memories and inspirations and examples and hopes, so that they are rich in brain and heart and soul and service. Then, if you happen to leave them the fortune besides, if they have all these, the fortune will be shorn of possibilities of evil, and will become an instrument of higher and nobler good.—John Watson.

All young people should cultivate a taste for reading, and should plan to own a good, if not a large selection of good books. They are good companions, and they are faithful friends, and it pays to form their acquaintance, and to cultivate the acquaintance even unto familiarity.—Guardian.

An actor once gave some advice to a friend in these words: "My Dear ——: The gallon of whisky costs about $3.00, and contains about sixty-five 15-cent drinks. Now, if you must drink, buy a gallon and make your wife be the barkeeper. When you are dry give her 15 cents for a drink, and when the whisky is gone she will have, after paying for it, $6.75 left, and every gallon thereafter will yield the same profit. This money she should put away, so that when you have become inebriate, unable to support yourself, and shunned by every respectable man, your wife may have money to keep you until your time comes to fill a drunkard's grave."

OXYGEN AS FOOD.

Breathe pure air always. In the lungs a most important physiological process occurs. It is from here that the blood laden with oxygen is sent to all parts of the body, giving off along its course its oxygen, and taking up carbonic-acid gas, which it brings at last to the lungs, when it is cast out in expiration. More oxygen is taken in by inspiration, and the same process is repeated.

So let your breathing be full and deep, going to the very bottom of the lungs in order that all of the blood in them may receive its full amount of oxygen before again starting upon its tour of distribution through the body. Can one use any more forcible argument in favor of loose clothing than this? It is absolutely impossible to secure plenty of oxygen if the clothing is worn at all tight, and oxygen is a food which the body must have always in abundance to keep well.

The air leaving the lungs is laden with that deadly poison, carbonic-acid gas, which, if given off in a close room when no provision is made for its escape and the entrance of pure air, soon renders the air unfit to breathe. Perhaps some night you will find yourself unable to sleep and tumble restlessly about in bed. When this occurs go to an open window and inhale the fresh air, breathing slowly and deeply. A few minutes of this and you can return to bed, and probably will soon be sleeping quietly. What has happened? By its restlessness the body was asserting its need of more oxygen. Now you have given it what it so emphatically asked for, and it is quiet. We get as much uneasiness and disturbance from the want of this food as when we do not eat enough, only the symptoms are not so well understood or recognized so quickly. Always keep your mouth closed and breathe through the nose. Then the air is warmed, slightly moistened, and largely freed from particles of dust, so that when it enters the lungs it does not irritate them.

A condition often met with by physicians is anæmia. In this trouble the patient is pale, lifeless-looking, tired, and generally used up, often without being able to tell distinctly how she does feel. Sometimes these patients say that they have not enough blood. It is really only an element of the blood which is wanting, but that is a very important one—viz., the red-blood corpuscle.

When you know that it is only those corpuscles which have the power to take up and carry oxygen, you see at once how important it is that the blood should not be lacking in them. Good wholesome food, plenty of it and well digested, will give you the corpuscles; furnish them with the oxygen, and the body will have an important element towards health.—Alice M. Perry, M. D., in "What to Eat."

J. B. PICKELS AND DANIEL UHEWER.

A life devoted to a sacred purpose ennobles and purifies every other life it touches. Men are only measurably perfect, but, looking through the vista of sorrow, their virtues grow larger, and the defects of character lie like forgotten waste by the wayside. To have lived for a holy cause is, not to have lived in vain. Life is more than raiment, more than wealth, more than oniture, more than any or all of these; it is the vary end and essence of being. Back of all the shortcomings in character shines a noble purpose like a star behind drifting clouds when darkness curtains the world. When the clouds drift by the star shines on, as though there had been no clouds.

These thoughts come to me as I think of these two men, who were conspicuous for their zeal, devotion, and loyalty to Methodism in Central Louisiana. There was nothing extraordinarily brilliant about either of them. They never laid claim to esthetic graces or the wisdom of this world, yet had about them elements that won the admiration and love of cultured ministers and advocates. Bro. Brewer's keen, flashing humor lent grace and attraction to many social and ecclesiastical gatherings, while Bro. Pickels' earnestness made us take heart in many trying emergencies. They were both faithful stewards in the church of God; faithful in ministering to the preacher's need, faithful in attending the Conferences and ordinary services, faithful both by precept and exemple in teaching men, as best they knew, the glory of God in Christ. They rejoiced in a full, conscious salvation through grace, and earnestly desired the whole wide world to share in the blessing.

"Savior, more than life to me," was sung at a service led by Bro. Brewer at a District Conference. The tide was rising. Its surgings touched the old man's soul. "Let's sing that again; we can't do any better," he said. Bro. Pickels' face was aglow, his heart was aflame. Arising from his seat, he shook hands all around, while the saints rejoiced and sinners wondered.

Such incidents as this, and others that might be mentioned, were revelations of character. They will ever live in the memory of those who witnessed them.

When the history of the Methodist Church in the Alexandria district, Louisiana Conference, may be written, these two names shall be numbered among its heroes. Their faults lay on virtue's side. Perhaps an overweening goodness sometimes led them astray, but there was in them the recurrent force that brought them back.

Brewer came to us from New York. His quaint Yankee genius was softened and mellowed by the soft, balmy atmosphere of the Southland, where the larger part of his life was spent. He loved his church, rejoiced in the society of his brethren, and served his generation in the fear and love of God.

Pickels was a Virginian of the old school. Hospitality to him was more than a principle; it was a grace. He loved his fellow-man with an abounding love, for his ardent soul could brook no half-way measure. Within the last year he visited his boyhood's home in search of health; returned to his abiding-place in Louisiana, when God soon called him to an eternal home.

These two servants of God merit a loftier tribute than I can bestow. Many a heart grews tender as their friends among the ministry and membership of the church think of them, and some eyes are dimmed with tears. Their memories are indeed as precious ointment poured forth. S. J. DAVIES

TAUBE—At a meeting of the officers and teachers of the Rayne Memorial M. E. Sunday-school (South), held Sunday, Oct. 30, 1898, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

A few years ago there came into our midst a stranger, and yet not a stranger, for we felt, as we greeted him, that the seal of fellowship in Christ was on him, and that he had come to his own.

It was in the Sabbath-school that we met Bro. TAUBE, and it was here that he first labored with us. Soon, however, the earnest willingness to do his Master's will led him into the broader work of the church, until he became as familiar in our midst as our pastor, and we learned to seek his wise counsel on all subjects.

He had much to live for in his own happy home circle; yet, in the close of his fatal illness, when the veil was lifted and the glory of the Savior revealed, he willingly entered into the "valley of the shadow of death," repeating almost as the light was fading, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me." He was our friend and fellow-worker, and we of the Rayne Memorial Sunday-school will miss him, but—

Whereas, It hath pleased our heavenly Father to remove from our midst our brother, Frederick Taube; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we mourn our loss we bow in submission to the will of our heavenly Father, and extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy. May his Spirit comfort them!

WALLIS—Mrs. JOSEPHINE WALLIS wee born on the twenty-second of October, 1848, near Rayville, Lafayette parish, La., and died at her home near the town of Lafayette, Sept. 23, 1898.

Truly a most excellent woman has gone from labor to reward. With such a subject before me, it is difficult to know where to begin or where to end.

Having united with the M. E. Church, South, in early womanhood, she spent a goodly number of years in the service of the same.

When I reached Lafayette as pastor, nearly three years ago, she and daughter served our first dinner taken in the parsonage at this place, she and other elect ladies of our church having provided same.

During her last illness, which was protracted, she conversed with as much composure concerning her departure as about the ordinary affairs of life. She never prayed for recovery, but for complete resignation to the divine will, and special grace for the seperation of soul and body. In this the answer was realized, her death being both peaceful and easy.

In the death of Sister Wallis the church sustains a loss of a loyal and consecrated member, the children an affectionate and faithful mother, and the community a true and tried friend. She leaves a son and daughter (both grown), and a large circle of friends to lament her death. God help us to live as she lived.

I. T. REAMES, Pastor.

DEMONY—The subject of this tribute, THEODORE NEWTON DEMONY, was born at Cottage Hill, Mobile county, Ala., Oct. 1, 1862, and died at Fort Morgan, Ala., July 12, 1898. On Sept. 12, 1887, he was married to Miss Ella L. Rohby, of Coden, Ala., with whom he lived happily till death separated them. Four sweet children are the fruits of this marriage. These, with a heart-broken wife, are left to mourn his loss, and to battle with the sad realities of lonely widowhood and orphanage. Bro. Demony was a consistent member of the Episcopal Church, although he loved and attended more than he did his own the Methodist, of which his wife is a member. He was a kind and affectionate husband, a loving father, gentle and affable to all with whom he came in contact. When the summons came, although sudden, he was ready. He said in a conversation with a Methodist minister a few days before his demise that he did not fear nor dread death; that he had but one regret in leaving the world, which was bidding farewell to his precious wife and children. A good man has gone to his reward. May God comfort the disconsolate widow and her dear little orphans!

G. R. E.

HARPER—Our hearts have been made sad at Gum Springs Church on account of the death of our beloved brother, GEORGE P. HARPER. He was born July 9, 1833, and departed this life Aug. 13, 1898. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life. He was faithful and true to God and his church to the last. I made a visit to his home just one week before his death. I found him cheerful and happy. He spoke often of the meeting we had closed a short time before; how he enjoyed it, and what a blessing it was to his soul. We had but little idea, then, that God was preparing him for the home of many mansions. He was a Christian without bigotry, a friend without flattery, and a citizen without reproach. He possessed personal graces of character and manner which endeared him to his friends as a man worthy of respect and love. He leaves a family of devoted sons and a daughter, and a host of relatives and friends, to mourn his loss. Weep not, dear friends; he is not dead, but gone on before, to reap the reward of the faithful.

J. S. PARKER.

Jackson, Miss.

BLOODWORTH—Sister ELIZABETH H. BLOODWORTH (nee Bloodworth) was born near Collarsville, Tenn., Jan. 8, 1820; professed religion and joined the Methodist Church in Collarsville when thirteen years of age; married Bro. E. W. Bloodworth, Jan. 4, 1843, and moved to Chickahoma, Miss., joining the Southern Methodist Church there by letter, where she lived until death, Oct. 11, 1898.

Sister Bloodworth was seventy-eight years old; had been a member of the church sixty-five years; had lived in Chickahoma fifty-five years. She was a great sufferer for a long time, but was cheerful to the last. She talked with her pastor about death; said she did not fear to die, and if it was the Lord's will, she was ready. She leaves an aged husband and a number of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren to mourn her loss. It will be sad and lonely without her here, but may they all meet to part no more in the happy home of the soul!

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great length; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $19, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. The Sana-Cera treatment for the cure of Catarrh, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Deafness and all diseases of the Head, Throat and Lungs.

MISS LILLIE FRUSH, Elwood, Ind., writes:—Three years ago I was a mere skeleton and thought to be a hopeless victim of Catarrhal Consumption. My entire system was saturated and diseased with the catarrhal poison. I belonged to a consumptive family and no one ever expected me to get well again; but I was placed in charge of Dr. M. Beaty who gave me his Sana-Cera treatment. Shortly, the coughing spells left me, my appetite returned, I grew stronger, increased in weight and after a 3 months' course was completely cured. I am now in perfect health and a stout hearty woman, as you will see by my photograph.

Three Months Home Treatment Free!

To introduce the Sana-Cera Cure in every community and prove that it cures when all others have failed, I will for a limited time send medicines for a 3 months treatment free. NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The Alabama House voted $500 for the purchase of a sword for Lieutenant Hobson. The Senate is expected to concur in the appropriation.

Ex-Queen Lilinokalani has arrived at San Francisco from Honolulu, on her way to Washington, to present to Congress her claim for the Hawaiian crown lands.

Miss Margaret J. Evans, of Minnesota, just elected to membership in the American Board of Foreign Missions, is the first woman to be thus honored by the Board in the ninety years of its existence.

Queen Wilhelmina, of Holland, is a firm believer in and a stout supporter of the Salvation Army. She and her mother regularly send generous checks to the organization to further the work in Holland and in its colonies.

The Italian Government has sent an ultimatum to the Sultan of Morocco on the subject of the detention and ill-treatment of Italian proteges. A week has been given in which to reply, and the Italian warship "Umbria" will fetch the answer of the Sultan.

The Commissioners who were appointed to go to Hawaii to study the conditions there, as well as to complete the transfer of the islands to the United States, are further burdened with the duty of formulating a system for their public administration and government, and are now engaged on this last task, preparatory to its presentation to Congress.

Thanksgiving was celebrated by all the Americans in Havana in real New England style. The largest congregation of English-speaking people ever gathered in this city assembled in the Jane Theatre at 3 o'clock and listened to a sermon by Rev. Dr. Carlisle. Bishop Chandler was also present. Admiral Sampson and many attaches of the commission were present.

Within a little more than a week the second session of the Fifty-fifth Congress will commence, and from all indications some very important matters will come before it for consideration. The Senate will have to consider the peace treaty with Spain, and although there will be stout opposition to ratification, the general impression is that it will be ultimately ratified before the close of the session.

The will of the late Prof. Baron, of the University of Berlin, who died last week, stipulates that his entire fortune shall be given to the city for the purpose of founding a home for children, who shall be raised on a vegetarian diet. The Berlin municipality, however, has consulted the medical authorities on the subject of vegetarianism, and has decided to refuse the legacy. The advocates of vegetarianism are enraged over the action of the municipal council.

It is known definitely that more than seventy lives have been lost in the wrecks of tugs, schooners and coal barges during the storm of Saturday night and Sunday morning on the coast of Massachusetts, and if the steamer "Portland" has also gone down, as now seems possible, the list of casualties will rise to 140, with over 100 vessels of all descriptions ashore, two score of them total wrecks and an unknown number probably beneath the waves of Massachusetts Bay.

Among the military measures that it is proposed the coming session of Congress shall pass is a reorganization of the artillery branch of the army. It is not meant that there shall be a change in the regimental organization of the corps, but a material increase in the number of men and the number of regiments is contemplated. In addition, it is proposed that the direction of the artillery shall be under a special chief, to be known as the chief of artillery, with the rank of brigadier-general.

Spain has accepted the United States offer of $20,000,000, and at a joint session of the Peace Commissions on Monday consented, without conditions, to relinquish Cuba and to cede Porto Rico, Guam and the Philippine Islands. Spain's reply, in substance, continued by the declaration that the United States has offered as a kind of compensation to Spain something very inadequate to the sacrifices the latter country makes at this moment, and she feels, therefore, that the United States' proposals can not be considered just and equitable. Spain has, however, exercised all the resources of diplomacy in an attempt to justify her attitude. Seeing that an acceptance of the proposal made to Spain is a necessary condition to a continuance of negotiations, and seeing that the resources of Spain are not such as to enable her to re-enter upon war, she is prepared, in her desire to avoid bloodshed, and from considerations of humanity and patriotism, to submit to the conditions of the conquering nation, however harsh they may be. She is, therefore, ready to accept the proposals of the American Commission as presented at the last sitting.

O, how many men would be Christians if God would make but one exception in their favor, give them one indulgence, forgive them the retention of one bosom sin.

If the preachers will inquire what their people read, they will often find the explanation of their worldliness and lukewarmness.—Arkansas Methodist.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir.

I have been a great sufferer from dyspepsia for about fifteen years, my trouble being my liver, stomach and bowels, with terrible headaches. Lemon Elixir cured me. My appetite is good, and I am well. I had taken a barrel of other medicine that done me no good.

Our editorial, of Oct. 6, on "Eternal Punishment," somewhat enlarged has been published in the form of a 16-page pamphlet. It will be sent postpaid to any address on receipt of five cents.

It has been generally forgotten by our people that Missouri is a missionary State. It was once under the complete dominion of the Roman Catholic authorities, and the first Methodist preaching done on this side the Mississippi was by ministers who crossed the river after nightfall and returned before daybreak to the Illinois shore. Missouri was once under the jurisdiction of the archbishop of Santiago, the Cuban town that was taken by our army and navy, for there exist in the archives of this State records of the appointments made by the Santiago archbishop to churches within the present limits of Missouri. This State, then, is an illustration of what can be done by missionary effort. What has been effected in Missouri in the last hundred years may be done in Cuba, in Porto Rico, in Luzon, during the next century.—St. Louis Advocate.

A Preacher's Discovery.

"IT HITS THE SPOT" Dr. BLOSSER'S CATARRH CURE CURES CATARRH BRONCHITIS ASTHMA ETC.

Samples Mailed Free.

We have given away 100,000 trial packages of Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure to persons afflicted with Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, Deafness etc., and now offer another 50,000 packages absolutely free. If the trial package does not convince you of its curative properties, you will have been at no expense; if it proves beneficial, you will gladly order a month's treatment at $1.00. We are willing to take all the risk, knowing what the medicine will do.

This remedy was discovered by Rev. J. W. Blosser, M. D., the well-known Minister of the Gospel and Catarrh Specialist. It is a harmless, pleasant, vegetable compound, inhaled by smoking in a pipe, which we furnish free. It cures the worst cases. If you wish the free package, write at once to Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 38 N. Broad St., Atlanta, Ga.

ABOUT LIGHT.

The readers of this paper are all of them interested in light. It is a very essential factor in the life of all who are born into the world. We can not live without it. Even when the day is finished and the shades of evening gather, light is in demand, and the best thought of man is concentrated on the best and cheapest method of its artificial production. The day of candle supremacy in our towns and cities has long gone by, and now illuminating gas has to take a second place, and electricity as an illuminant stands in the front rank. Given either the gas or the electric light, both are very greatly aided by the use of the reflector. The latter adjunct is a very indispensable requisite in the lighting of any large church or other public building. Write for full particulars to the maker, I. P. Frink, 551 Pearl St., New York.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Booneville, Miss., EDITOR.

Thanksgiving Day has come and gone.

"What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me?"

"I will take the cup of salvation and call upon the name of the Lord."

Our lines have fallen unto us in pleasant places, and ours has been a goodly heritage. May we appreciate the blessings so richly bestowed!

Not only should we show forth praise with our lips, but in our lives by giving up ourselves to God's service and by walking before him in holiness and righteousness all our days.

"The younger son" in the parable did not fully appreciate his privileges in his father's house, so took his journey into a far country.

Like the sinner, however, who goes away from God and from the right, he found trouble and sorrow and began to be in want.

Finally he came to himself and decided to return to his father's house and acknowledge his mistake.

"I will arise." He speaks the words in sadness,
While bitter tears bedim his youthful eyes;
Yet, as he speaks, his heart throbs with new gladness,
Peace, Home and Pardon lie in—"I will arise."

A principal of a certain high school writes his pastor to erase his name from the Methodist, Church register, stating that he is now a Unitarian. It would have been better for him to have held on to his Methodism, and especially as he is to teach the "young idea how to shoot."

Let the young people everywhere beware of the many isms that threaten to sap the foundation of character. We would urge them to hold on to the faith "once delivered."

It was our purpose to publish notes of progress from the different Leagues in North Mississippi in this issue, but only one chapter has been heard from, viz.: Grenada, Miss. Below we give report as sent by their wide-awake and efficient pastor, Rev. T. W. Lewis:

"Our League is all right. Seniors have a fine library—150 volumes. Raised about $25 for Orphans' Home. J. C. Wilson is president; W. N. DeLoach, John Carter, Miss Estelle Rollins, Miss Mary Barnes, and Miss Hattie Neblett will make anything go. The Juniors bought a memorial bed for the Orphans' Home ($15) called 'M. W. Payne bed. College is fine."

The circulation of the Epworth Era steadily increases, and Dr. DuBose is receiving letters from all parts of the church saying, "The Era is just the paper needed for our work." From now till Jan. 1, 1899, it will be sent in clubs of ten to one address for $1—that is, for ten cents a copy. Twenty thousand new subscribers are wanted in the next six months at the following rates: Single subscriptions, $1; in clubs of ten or more to individual addresses, 75 cents; in clubs of ten or more to one address, 60 cents.

Recently it was our privilege to spend a few days at Centenary College, Jackson, La., and preach before the Y. M. C. A. During the services several young men professed faith in Christ as their personal Savior. Dr. I. W. Cooper and his excellent faculty (all of whom are decidly religious) are doing a great work. Let every Leaguer in Louisiana pray and work for the success of this honored institution, which promises to do so much for the young manhood of the State.

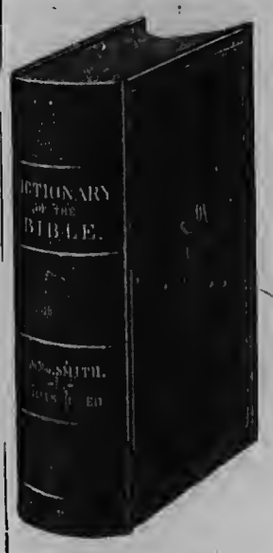
Smith's Dictionary



—OF THE—

BIBLE,

Comprising Its Antiquities, Biography, Geography, and NATURAL HISTORY.

EDITED BY WM. SMITH, LL. D.,
Classical Examiner of the University of London.

This great work prepared under the direction and superintendence of Dr. Smith himself contains every name in the Bible and Apocrypha of which anything can be said; gives an account of each of the books of the Bible; explains the civil and religious institutions, the manners and customs, while many of the longer articles, being the results of the most finished scholarship, are complete treatises in themselves; embraces the results of the most successful and approved biblical labors and researches, constituting an indispensable aid to ministers, teachers, families, Sunday-school superintendents, and Bible readers generally.

The simple explanations of this work, unlike the expositions of a commentary, admit of no denominational or sectarian coloring and it is therefore equally valuable to Bible readers of every diversity of belief.

This is, undoubtedly, the best work of its kind in the English language, and has no rival in importance for the elucidation of the scenes and facts of Scripture.

The work contains 1024 large octavo pages, over 150 illustrations and maps engraved especially for this work and is handsomely and strongly bound in cloth. Publishers' price, $4.50.

To any person who will pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: To December, '99, we will sell this magnificent book postpaid for $2. Send in your order at once, as this offer may soon be withdrawn. Address

SUNRISE NEVER FAILED US YET.

Upon the sadness of the sea
The sunset broods regretfully;
From the far, lonely spaces, slow
Withdraws the wistful afterglow.

So out of life the splendor dies;
So darken all the happy skies;
So gathers twilight, cold and stern;
But overhead the planets burn;

And up the east another day
Shall chase the bitter dark away;
What though our eyes with tears be wet!
The sunrise never failed us yet.

The blush of dawn may yet restore
Our light and hope and joy once more:
Sad soul, take comfort, nor forget
That sunrise never failed us yet!

—Celia Thaxter.

DO IT NOW!

"How do you accomplish so much, and in so short a time?" asked a man of Sir Walter Raleigh. "When I have anything to do, I go and do it," was the repiy. The man who always acts promptiy, even if he makes occasional mistakes, will succeed when a procrastinator wouid faii—even if the latter have the better judgment.

When asked how he managed to accomplish so much work, and at the same time attend to his social duties, a French statesman repiied, "I do it simply by never postponing till to-morrow what should be done to-day." It was said of an unsuccessful public man that he used to reverse this process, his favorite maxim being "never to do to-day what might be postponed till to-morrow." How many men have dawdled away their success and aiiowed companions and relatives to steal it away five minutes at a time! Amos Lawrence's motto was, "Business before friends."

"To-morrow, didst thou say?" asked Cotton. "Go to—I will not hear of it. To-morrow i 'tis a sharper who stakes his penury against thy plenty, who takes thy ready cash and pays thee naught but wishes, hopes, and promises, the currency of idiots. To-morrow i it is a period nowhere to be found in all the hoary registers of time, unless perchance in the fooi's calendar. Wisdom disclaims the word, nor holds society with those that own it. 'Tis fancy's child, and folly is its father; wrought of such stuffs as dreams are, and baseless as the fantastic visions of the evening." Oh, how many a wreck on the road to success could say, "I have spent all my iife in the pursuit of to-morrow, being assured that to-morrow has some vast benefit or other in store for me!"

The energy wasted in postponing until to-morrow a duty of to-day would often do the work. How much harder and more disagreeable, too, it is to do work which has been put off! What would have been done at the time with pleasure, or even enthusiasm, becomes drudgery after it has been delayed for days and weeks. Letters can nenaiiy be answered most easily when first received. Many large firms make it a rule never to allow a letter to lie unanswered over night. Promptness takes the drudgery out of an occupation. Putting off usually means leaving off, and going to do becomes going undone. Doing a deed is like sowing a seed. If not done at just the right time, it will be forever out of season. The summer of eternity will not be long enough to bring to maturity the fruit of a delayed action. If a star or planet were delayed one second, it might throw the whole universe out of harmony.

Cæsar's delay to read a message cost him his life when he reached the Senate House. "Delays have dangerous ends." Col. Rahl, the Hessian commander at Trenton, was playing cards when a messenger brought a letter stating that Washington was crossing the Delaware. He put the letter in his pocket without reading it until the game was finished, when he rallied his men only to die just before his troops were taken prisoners. It was only a few minutes' delay, but he lost honor, liberty, life!

"A singular mischance has happened to some of our friends," said Hamiiton. "At the instant when he ushered them into existence, God gave them a work to do, and he also gave them a competency of time; so much that if they began at the right moment, and wrought with sufficient vigor, their time and their work would end together. But a good many years ago a strange misfortune befell them. A fragment of their allotted time was lost. They can not teli what became of it; but, sure enough, it has dropped out of existence, for, just iike two measuring-lines laid alongside, the one an inch shorter than the other, their work and their time run parallel, but the work is always ten minutes in advance of the time. They are not irregular. They are never too soon. Their letters are posted the very minute after the mail is closed. They arrive at the wharf just in time to see the steamboat off; they come in sight of the terminus precisely as the station gates are closing. They do not break any engagement nor neglect any duty, but they systematically go about it too late, and usually too late by about the same fatal interval."

Punctuality is the soul of business as brevity of wit.

Every business man knows that there are moments on which hang the destiny of years. If you arrive a few minutes iate at the bank, your paper may be protested and your credit ruined. During the first seven years of his mercantile career Amos Lawrence did not permit a bill to remain unsettled over Sunday. Punctuality is said to be the politeness of kings. Some men are always running to catch up with their business; they are always in a hurry, and give you the impression that they are late for a train. They iack method, and seldom accomplish much.

Some one has said that "promptness is a contagious inspiration." Whether it be an inspiration or an acquirement, it is one of the practicai virtues of civilization.

Many a wasted life dates its ruin from a lost five minutes. "Too late" can be read between the lines on the tombstone of many a man who has failed. A few minutes often makes all the difference between victory and defeat, success and failure.

A conductor's watch is behind time, and a frightful railway collision occurs. A leading firm with enormous assets becomes bankrupt because an agent is tardy in transmitting available funds, as ordered. An innocent man is hanged because the messenger bearing a reprieve stops five minutes to hear a trivial story, and misses a train or steamer by one minute.

"Haste, post, haste! Haste for thy life!" was frequently written upon messages in the days of Henry VIII. of England, with a picture of a courier swinging from a gibbet. Post offices were unknown, and letters were carried by government messengers subject to hanging if they delayed upon the road.

Even in the old, siow days of stage-coaches, when it took a month of dangerous traveling to accomplish the distance we can now span in a few hours, unnecessary delay was a crime. One of the greatest gains civilization has made is in measuring and utiiizing time. We can do as much in an hour to-day as they could in twenty hours a hundred years ago; and if it was a hanging affair then to lose a few minutes, what should the penalty be now for a like offense?

"Better iate than never" is not half so good a maxim as "Better never late."—Success.

PAINTING IN DARK COLORS.

A curious and striking mode of proving that past ages of the world thought themselves quite as bad as the present, if not worse, is used by the author of a recent article in the Methodist Review. His mode is the quoting of gloomy retrospects and forebodings from various authors living in previous epochs. "The very fact," he shrewdiy observes, "that every age has considered itself so extremely bad is a strong proof that the trouble is iargeiy in the eyes of the observers, and that their pictures are fanity through disregard of the iaws of perspective."

Thus, beginning with the first century, Seneca writes: "Vice no ionger hides itseif; it staiks forth before ali eyes. So pubiic has abandoned wickedness become, and so openiy does it flame up in the minds of ail, that innocence is no longer rare; it has wholiy ceased to exist."

Coming down to the third century, Cyprian, Bishop of Carthage, declares: "The pubiic ways are obstructed by robbers, the seas are infested with pirates, the world is reeking with mutual bloodshed. Law has made a compact with crime, and guilt has become legal. What sense of shame, what probity, can exist where bad men have none to condemn them, and where none are found but ought to be condemned?"

Eusebius, in the fourth century, thus describes his times: "Hypocrisy and dissimulation have arisen to the greatest height of malignity. All things have gone to wreck."

And Chrysostom: "Aii things are now corrupted and iost. Ail are rampant and refractory as herds of wild horses. Everything is filled with their abounding corruptions."

Passing over several centuries, each of which has its own prophet of evil, one finds, in the sixteenth century, the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland saying: "There is a universai coidness and decay of zeai in ail men; ignorance and contempt of the Word, ministry, and sacraments; superstition and idolatry abound. There is universai negiect of justice in civii and criminal causes; the worst men are advanced to office, and bribery prevails in the court."

And crossing an ocean, both of time and space, one comes upon Jonathan Edwards, in 1735, bewailing as follows: "The world has got to such a terribie state of wickedness that it is probable that the cry of it has reached unto heaven, and it is hardly probable God will aiiow things to go on as they now are much longer. It is probable that God wiii appear ere long in awful majesty to vindicate his own cause."

Now, in a comprehensive survey of history, no fact is more conspicuous and dominating than the fact of human progress. That each generation has sometimes fancied that it was worse than those which went before, and that the morai trend of history was steadiiy downward, merely shows, as said above, that its views were faulty through iack of perspective. While progress, sociai, mental, and spiritual, may not show to a marked extent in a short retrospect—in a year, for a decade, or even a century—while it may even sometimes appear, within those limits, as retrogression, yet it shines out as an incontestable and inspiring fact when the larger survey is taken. How short-sighted, then, is the view which looks upon present times only in their depressing aspects, refusing to see as weli their bright and steadily brightening promise!—Guardian.

In looking at the stars through a great telescope, it is necessary first to put out every light until you are ieft in total darkness. Every light sets the air in motion, and disturbs the focus, and blurs the vision of the stars. How often our vision of God is blurred and dimmed by the flames of self-consciousness and sordidness that float around us! How many times we have to put out the light of seif-seeking, earthiy ambition and false pride of position in order to look upward, and in the clear still air to know whither God's lights are leading us, and what God will have us to do!—Rev. W. H. P. Faunce.

PASSION FOR SOULS.

One of the most fatai delusions that ever took possession of some ministers is the deiusion that they are called to edify the church and not to bring sinners to Christ! That notion is absolutely unscriptural, and is fatai to the highest usefuiness. Some men are undoubtediy called to be evangeiists, and have a special aptitude for bringing men to decision. While some sow, others reap; but that truth must not be perverted into the idea that some are to do nothing but sow, or that God intends any minister to be without the unspeakabie and divine joy of winning souis. No man has any right to be appointed to a Methodist circuit uniess he is definitely called of God to the office and work of the Christian ministry. But if he is called to the office and work of the Christian ministry, he is called instrumentally to save sinners. The man who brings no sinners to Christ has either sinned against divine grace or missed his calling. We do not mean to say, for one moment, that the result must come in a particular manner. Some of the most successful soul-winners Methodism has ever known never held a prayer meeting on Sunday evening, and never had public conversions. But in some way or other—either in a Bible class or in the society class, or in personal interviews—they had the happiness of seeing men, women and children truly converted to God. In the highest interests both of personal fidelity and of the church of God, we must unhesitatingiy declare that "the soul-converting power" is the very essence of the Christian minister's vocation. God never yet called any man to enter the puipit without making it possible for him to become an instrument of salvation to those who heard him.

We do not say that all have a right to expect the same quantity or quality of results; but no real ministry ever has been, or ever could be, entireiy fruitless. If any minister can not recall a single instance of conversion under his ministry during the iast twelve months, he is bound, on the perii of his soul, to open his heart to God and to entreat Christ to reveai to him why he is in that awful position. He may have allowed himself to become careless, he may have restrained prayer before God, he may have been backsliding in heart, he may have been blinded by some anti-scriptural delusion, or he may have given way to ungodly prejudices and passions. Something truly appalling must have happened if any man, called of God to the Christian ministry, enters and quits the pulpit year in and year out without being able to lay his hand upon one single man, woman or child, brought through his agency to the knowledge of salvation in Christ.

We are very sorry if our plain words cause distress to any who read them, but "faithful are the wounds of a friend;" and a fruitless ministry can no more be condoned or explained away than an immorai ministry or a lazy ministry. There is no church which exalts and emphasizes the pastoral office more than ours, and, therefore, there is no church which is more bound to remember than it is an essentiai part of the pastor's work "to seek and to save" the lost sheep. It is the pastor's duty, of course, to "feed the lambs," and to "tend" those sheep that are safe in the fold; but it is also his duty to go out into the wilderness and "seek," and not to give up seeking until he "finds" the "lost" sheep. How preposterous it would be for anyone in the position of a shepherd to say, "It is my duty to seek, but it is not my duty to find, the wandering sheep!" What is the use of seeking unless you find? It is equaiiy unreasonable and terrible for any minister to persuade himself that he can be faithful to God and to the church unless by some means, in some way, at some time, he does bring lost sheep to the Good Shepherd. Let us, then, with all our heart, pray God to clothe our ministers with "the soul-converting power." What we need above all else is that "passion for souls" which is the distinctive mark of a true and faithful Christian minister.—Methodist Times (London).

KNOW, AND YOU WILL GIVE.

He who knows nothing of the needs of an individual or of a community finds it an easy matter to maintain a tight hold upon the purse-strings, but he who sees the suffering about him, or hears of distress in other localities, has his sympathies aroused, and his benevolence takes definite shape in timely and generous relief. So he who studies the missionary question fully and ascertains the results of the church's investment in foreign missions feels within him a strong impulse to give more or less liberally toward helping them on. He who thinks them a failure will not contribute to their support, but he who realizes what they are doing does his best toward making them more and more aggressive and successful. As a matter of fact, they have a record which is both indisputable and inspiring. The century of missionary enterprise now coming to a close is most marvelous. There has never been anything like it since the first centuries of the Christian era. The gospel has been carried into every land. The open doors have been entered, and converts have been made by the thousand. Woman has been elevated by an advancing Christianity. Savagery is rapidly giving place to civilization. The seed of truth carefully sown is taking root and bearing fruit. Hope was never brighter for the redemption of China. Japan shows the quickening touch of Christian civilization. Africa is coming under the influence of gospel agencies in an increasing suppression of a horrid and inhuman slave trade, while the habitations of cruelty are gradually disappearing. The outlook on every side is most promising. What is needed is larger giving. If the church rightly estimates the value of the work which God is doing, and which he purposes to accomplish, through the forces already upon the field, his call upon her for a more consecrated purse will be heeded, and she will lay, as increasing opportunities for help are brought to her attention, adequate gifts at her Master's feet for the fullest extension of his kingdom in all lands.—The Presbyterian.

TO HELP THE POOR WITHOUT HARM.

The Tribune had an able article on how to help the poor and not to harm those in need of charity. It gives these hints: "No gift should be made without previous investigation of the recipient, and money ought never to be given to an unidentified beggar on the street. Gifts, as far as possible, should be given in the form of opportunities to work. To provide for numerous exceptions to this rule, organization is necessary. To the entirely deserving and destitute in the Winter season often the best gift is coal. Next to that rent. Where food is to be given, to be given uncooked and conveyed to the home of the recipient. Then the family can eat it together, and no one member use it for himself alone. To supplement these, it suggests a wise scheme of relief in tickets for meals and lodgings."

The Tribune then speaks wisely of the importance of a great pawnshop thoroughly organized, and cites the well-known Mont de Piete in Paris. We agree unreservedly with its declaration that no greater service can be rendered to the poor than by the establishment of an institution for loaning money to them upon the miscellaneous articles they could spare, and which they might redeem upon payment of reasonable interest hereafter. Ordinary pawnbrokers are Shylocks, and in practice take the pound of flesh, the blood in it, and all that will run from the cut veins and arteries when it is removed.—New York Advocate.

ONE-SIDED MEN.

"Never try to reason a man out of a belief he was never reasoned into," is, we think, one of Lord Bacon's aphorisms; and anyone who has undertaken a task of this character will readily concede the forcefulness of the expression. When the foundation of belief is mere prejudice it is difficult to change the opinion; yet how many men have no better ground than this for what they erroneously term an opinion. They believe, or think they believe, certain things; but for the life of them they can give neither you nor themselves any satisfactory reason for believing as they do; and it is plain that the opinion they claim to possess is not the result of any process of ratiocination, nor of a careful weighing of all the facts worthy to be taken into consideration before a conclusion is reached. Such people are always the most difficult to convert from the error of their ways, and the most likely to return to their first love.—Selected.

That we are a Christian nation is emphasized by the stamp of men who have come to the front in the recent war. From the President down, in the navy and army, the men who have controlled events and most attracted public attention have been not merely distinguished for administrative ability, but equally for a reverent faith in God and loyalty to Christ and his church. The position next in importance to the President at this time is that of the Secretary of State, and the calling to this important post of the Hon. John Hay is a promotion in line with this fact. He is a representative Christian, taking a pronounced interest in evangelical religion, in such movements as the Y. P. S. C. E and Christian missions, and it is a satisfaction to the Christian public to feel that such a man will govern our relations with other nations. His culture, literary accomplishments, knowledge of and sympathy with the people, and experience as a diplomatist, mark him as an ideal occupant of the position to which he has been called, but his crowning fitness is that he represents the best type of the American Christian citizen.—Christian Intelligencer.

The Bible rings with one long demand for obedience. The key-word of the book of Deuteronomy is, "Observe and do." The burden of our Lord's farewell discourse is, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." We must not question or reply or excuse ourselves. We must not pick and choose our way. We must not think that obedience in one direction will compensate for disobedience in some other particular. God gives one command at a time; if we obey this, he will flood our soul with blessing, and lead us forward into new paths and pastures. But if we refuse, we shall remain stagnant and waterlogged, make no progress in Christian experience, and lack both power and joy.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

Once having tasted of his grace, the soul is never willing to be parted from its Lord. Blessed is he who, from past experience, knows that if Christ be with him, even the chills of death shall never extinguish the heart flame!—G. C. Lorimer, D. D.

'Tis hard to say which is the most wonderful that a daily experience of the disappointments of the world does not loosen our hold on it, or that the hourly experience of the goodness of God does not attest our love to him.

WHAT DOES IT MATTER!

It matters little where I was born,
Or if my parents were rich or poor.
Whether they shrank at the cold world's scorn,
Or walked in the pride of wealth secure.
But whether I live an honest man,
And hold my integrity firm in my clutch,
I tell you, brother, plain as I am,
It matters much!

It matters little how long I stay
In a world of sorrow, sin and care;
Whether in youth I am called away,
Or live till my bones and pate are bare.
But whether I do the best I can
To soften the weight of adversity's touch
On the faded cheek of my fellow-man,
It matters much!

It matters little where be my grave,
Or on the land or on the sea
By purling brook or 'neath stormy wave:
It matters little or naught to me.
But whether the Angel of Death comes down
As one that shall wear the victor's crown,
It matters much!

PARENTAL RESPONSIBILITY IN THE SALVATION OF THE CHILDREN.

The grand aim of all our labors and cares with reference to our children must be their proper preparation for the kingdom of heaven. If this end be not attained, whatever else we may accomplish, we have failed in the first and grand object of all our cares and solicitude. If this end be kept steadily in view, it will exert a restraining, quickening, and hallowing influence upon temper and tongue and action. With this kept constantly in view, your plans and purposes will not fluctuate; there will be a directness of aim, a singleness of purpose, which will impart wisdom and strength to those counsels which you will find so necessary for the accomplishment of your holy, responsible, and glorious mission as parents. Many parents succeed badly because there is no unity of purpose in their management. They train their children partly for this world and partly for heaven, this world being first, and heaven second, in importance—a thing to be looked after when the body is sick or decrepit, or wrinkled with age, and when the heart is surfeited with pleasure, or mad with disappointment.

Who does not see that such a system of training will most likely issue in driving them from the altar of God to the shrine of folly, fashion, the god of this world? Pursuing the unity of object just named, you will constantly feel the importance of help from God enabling you for the proper discharge of your own duties towards your children, and will be prompted to throw yourselves constantly and unreservably upon the strength and power of the divine arm, as pledged to prayerful, earnest faith in the precious promises of the glorious gospel of God.

You will pray much, and earnestly and perseveringly, for the salvation of your children; and you will do this in secret, at the family altar, in the house of God, and as you walk by the way; nor will you cease these wrestlings, though discouraged by a thousand difficulties, and your hope be deferred by a thousand disappointments. You will endeavor to persuade them to the feet of the Redeemer; but this will require prudence as to time, place, and manner. We must bear in mind that our children are fallen creatures, with hearts proud and selfish and unbelieving, in love with the world; captivated by its present, tangible, and selfish gratifications; ready to believe its lying promises, with no eye open upon eternity, and anxious to find a plausible reason for doubt and unbelief of a message which so distinctly announces and so ungently enforces the doctrine of self-renunciation and cross-bearing. You will, therefore, have occasion to learn the doctrine of patience, as well as prudence, in your zealous working for God. It is of great consequence that we so train them as that they shall love and venerate the church of their parents, its institutions, and its ministers. I have often observed with regret the course pursued by Methodist parents, who, while they profess to be great sticklers for Methodism themselves, not only manifest no very decided anxiety for their children to be Methodist, but their children must be exceedingly dull if they have not perceived that they are to associate themselves with a class of religionists whose teachings, institutions and habits are more in accordance with the genteel and liberal views of the fashionable world.

Methodism, with its straight-laced notions, may do very well for old-fashioned old people, or it may suit well for the poor and uneducated; but for people of wealth and cultivation and refinement, and especially for the young of that class, it is quite too stern and gloomy and forbidding in its aspects. We should not speak slightingly of the ministers of Christ before our children, nor indulge ourselves in such criticisms upon their characters or their sermons as may lead our children to undervalue their ministry or cherish prejudices against them personally. Let us arise and give ourselves no rest; let us cry out in the night, and pour our hearts out like water before the face of the Lord; let us lift up our hands toward him for the life of our children. Emboldened, not by despair, but by an affection stronger than death, resolve: I will not let thee go unless thou bless me. And remember it is the last triumph of mercy yielding to the force it has itself administered to utter the animating declaration, "Thy name no more shall be called Jacob, but Israel, for as a prince hast thou power with God and man, and hast prevailed."

THE GREAT SIN OF THE NATION.

The general government provides for the manufacture of ardent spirits, and also legislates for and protects those engaged in its distribution throughout the country by sale. The commonwealth becomes a partner in this alcohol-making and drink-selling business for the consideration of an income revenue of $118,990,675. For this the citizens pay to sustain the business from which this revenue is drawn by the government $1,000,000,000 annually. There are 121,000 saloons and grog-shops, besides private or secret places where the drink is on sale. Fifty customers to each of these drink places of business is certainly a low estimate. This gives an aggregate of more than six millions of drinking patrons. It is safe to say that these will average in loss of time by drink one day each month the year round. An average of one dollar per day for each saloon patron would aggregate the sum of $72,000,000 annually. From these saloon customers themselves, and from their families, there are thrown on the country for maintenance ten million paupers. To sustain these at one hundred dollars each per annum, which aggregates $1,000,000,000, to be paid by the tax-payers of the land. For this annual revenue to the government of $118,990,675 there is drawn from the citizens the sum of $2 000,000,000 every year. This without pecuniary advantage to a single citizen, except the manufacturers and salesmen; not a healthful nor moral benefit to one of the many ten thousand who purchase and drink the liquid fire; but every patron of its sale is made a worse citizen, a worse man or woman, a worse husband or wife, a worse father or mother, a worse son or daughter, a worse brother or sister. I include both sexes, because both are alarmingly involved.

Sixty thousand of the population of our government die annually from the effects of strong drink. The Word of God teaches that no drunkard shall inherit eternal life. Taking the passage with its connection, we learn its painful and degrading association: "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived; neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God." (I. Cor. v, 9, 10.) Thus the government not only provides for the sacrifice of the respectability of its citizenship and a degradation from society, but sacrifices the souls of more than sixty thousand of its men and women. To sustain the trade as it has been going on, it costs the private citizens annually more than any war in which the United States has ever been engaged in all its history, while the number of deaths from the use of intoxicants annually outnumbers the casualties of any one year of our bloodiest war. If God is true, his curse must follow upon any such sin. War, successful or unsuccessful, is a curse. Our nation has had that in this 1898. Who are the sufferers? Every person of this government, the good as certainly as the bad, suffer under these widespread scourges. Professing Christians may not expect by that profession to escape. Drinking men, and men who legislate for the interest of the whisky trade, are voted for and elected to office by the leading members of the different churches, and as these are tolerated in our community, we may in every station bare our backs to the scourge of Jehovah's hand. We can not escape these expressions of God's wrath while the sin is so blatant in its innovations, and is so tenderly fostered by the general government and so many States in the Union.

WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH OUR LIVES?

BY MRS. E. FIELDER, IN W. F. M. ADVOCATE.

(Concluded.)

I can not think that the Christian woman, and especially the Methodist women, of to-day are thoughtless, careless, and indifferent to the gravest responsibilities, the plainest duties which confront them. These same women would not turn a beggar from their door, nor suffer a neighbor, however humble, to need the attentions and comforts which they could supply. The hungry who are fed, the naked who are clothed, the wretched and outcast at our doors who are helped, testify that they are not without heart and conscience. The work is so far away that the voice of the heathen across the seas, crying in the darkness for light, is overborne by the clamoring of nearer duties. They can not see the wretched woman in China and Japan, in her degradation and misery, as they can the poor creature within stone's throw of their doors. The beggar at their gates is a present reality, but the one across the sea is only a creature they have read (indifferently) of in books and heard of in speeches.

Sisters, surely there ought to be time in the lives of most women for both of these duties ("home and foreign work"), for we would not have one neglected for the other. Many say, "I have not time; 'tis impossible that I should give attention to so many things." If this is true—if you can conscientiously offer this answer to the Master's command, "Go work to-day in my vineyard"—then I have nothing more to say. If life is really so full that at the end of every day you can sit down and say, "I have done all in my power; not a moment has been wasted, not one has been misspent, and God knows I could not find time to do this other thing," then you have done all he requires. The question for us is, "How shall we bring the claims of these far-off women to the doors and to the hearts of those who can and ought to help?" One solution of the problem may possibly be found in ourselves; in the degree and manner in which our own interest is manifested. It is not enough that we should attend the monthly meetings, pay our dues, and even take an active part in the exercises of the hour. Some drop the subject at the church door to take it up there again next month. If it fills our minds and hearts—if the interest is real and abiding—we will carry it with us when we mingle with our friends socially. There are other ways—ways which come within the scope of individual work—which are to be entirely determined by ourselves and our opportunities. Each one has her circle of friends—some larger, some smaller; but always there are some who follow your leadings, to whom your tastes, your suggestions, your desires, mean a little more than those of anybody else. If you wish to turn that influence to account on any line, you do not need to be told the manner in which to do it. Diligence, tact, and perseverance on our part will find the way to overcome these things, and open the door of every woman's heart to the claims of the cause which means so much to us and so much more to those who sit in the shadow of heathen darkness. The work will be done. Our indifference may hinder, but can not prevent the accomplishment of God's purposes.

After years upon years of toil, self-sacrifice and suffering, brave men and noble women have left all to go at the call of duty and carry forward the work. We dare not forsake the cause which has cost so much. Year by year those far-off lands are made sacred to us by the brave ones who are laid to rest under their sod. We are linked to China by graves she holds, and pledged to other fields by ties as binding. We must not look back, but by the prayers, toils and tears of those who have given their lives to the work, we must press on until the knowledge of God shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. Just so surely as there comes once in our lives a realization of our many opportunities, there will come another time of sadder reckoning, when the knowledge will be forced upon us that the time for work is short. The years of our strength and power must go, and some day it will come to us that we have not much longer to work. The saddest, most deplorable fate that could befall a human being is to reach this point in life, and in the solemn pause which comes before the end, when things are revealed clearer to us in the dawning light of eternity, feel and know that the precious years which have gone by have not been given to the best things; that there has been toil and struggle, heartaches and tears, and, after all, it has been for trivial things which soon cease to satisfy, and the great issues of time and eternity have been overlooked. What could one do, then? Sit alone with memory. God can accomplish his purposes, but he expects us to do our part. To-day the doors of usefulness are open, the work invites us, but to-morrow the way may be closed forever. What we shall do, what we shall be, the value of our life for time and eternity depends upon our decision now.

Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide,
Some great cause, God's new Messiah, offering each the bloom or blight,
And the choice goes by forever 'twixt that darkness and that light.

Home Mission Society.

Mrs. W. H. Wall, of North Miss. Conference
Mrs. R. R. Parker, of Mississippi Conference
Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference

The Home Mission Society of the North Mississippi Conference could not meet at the time appointed, and the notice was necessarily short; however, Nov. 19 found a few of us at Cleveland, ready for work and to enjoy the occasion. Cleveland will be long remembered for her hospitality, and, we trust, was benefited by having the meeting.

Mrs. J. B. Stone conducted the consecration service Saturday evening, which was a good preparation for the services and work to follow.

The excellent sermon Sabbath morning by Rev. George Lipscomb was just what we needed, and for which we very much thank him.

Mrs. W. H. Wall conducted the interesting meeting for the children Sunday afternoon.

After the opening exercises Sunday evening Mrs. C. R. Smith, in behalf of Cleveland, extended to us a cordial welcome, to which Mrs. Wall responded. We received fitting words of greeting from Mrs. Chrisman, who represented the Baptist Church Aid Society.

The president's address was full of information well expressed, and we will do well to keep in mind her reminder that opportunity is the measure of obligation, and that the stranger within our gates represents the world. The corresponding secretary's report was instructive and entertaining, and should have many careful readers, as it will be in the fuller report of meeting.

Bro. Lipscomb called for a contribution. The congregation responded with $20.60.

When the business session opened Monday morning there were present of officers: President, Mrs. L. T. Walker; first vice-president, Mrs. J. B. Stone; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. S. Featherstone; recording secretary, Mrs. D. L. Cogdell; treasurer, Mrs. Walter Trotter; Miss Mary Sweatman, secretary of Winona district, and Mrs. George Bynum, secretary of the Corinth district. The treasurer reported $901.84; Columbus the banner district, and Macon the banner auxiliary. The parsonages helped were: Longtown, $75; Moutpelier, $30. Several applications were put in for help. We would have been glad to help all. The appropriation was: Cedar Bluff, $75; Waterford, $25.

Reports from some of the auxiliaries were very encouraging. Some remitted to Conference treasurer, but were not represented by delegate or written report at meeting, while a few had done nothing during the year. The secretary of Sardis district is teaching school; so sent written report by Mrs. Wall. Every auxiliary had been visited, and the eight auxiliaries doing good work.

There were 31 names added to the Baby Roll; Carrollton in the lead. The names are as follows: Fan Minor Saunders, Louis Gauneet Saunders (Starkville), Maria Donna Allen (Tunica), Sarah Fisher Ames, Nellie Minor Carter, Charles M. Seales, Eugene Murphy (Macon), Marie Allen (Strongs), Burdine Crow, Will Henry Guynes, Courtney Sheans (Cleveland), Mary Jane McDonald (Ehren, Ala.), Mary Hargrove Lipscomb (Winona), William James Bryant, William Oakley Bingham, William Jarvis Oury, Eulalie M. Marshall, Anne Bess Bryant, Mildred Gee Ray, Clyde Gilbert Jarman, Percy Reed Gilbert, Jack Judson Dean, Edward Lee Lehr, Katherine Boddie, Ben McLellan Stevens, Rayner Norquist, Allen Calhoun, Keener Bowen George, Thomas Lewis Woodell, Reid Bingham Harris, Addie Tillman (Carrollton).

As Miss Nina Prior's health failed, she has given up our scholarship; so there is an opportunity for some worthy Methodist young woman. The Executive Committee will receive applications.

The papers by Mrs. Geo. Bynum, "The Labor of Love," and Mrs. Nellie N. Somerville, "Another View of Home Missions," were instructive and entertaining. The recitations by Misses Annie Wilson and Ruby Pierman, also greetings from the Juvenile F. M. Society, were listened to with pleasure.

Maben was chosen as the next place of meeting. Mrs. Featherstone and Mrs. Foote will attend to publication of report.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. S. T. Walker; first vice-president, Mrs. J. B. Stone; second vice-president, Mrs. A. B. Finley; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. S. Featherstone, of Macon; recording secretary, Mrs. Nellie N. Somerville; treasurer, Mrs. Walter Trotter, of Winona; auditor, Mrs. Walter Witty; editor, Mrs. W. H. Wall, of Sardis. District secretaries: Columbus, Mrs. D. O. Saunders, of Starkville; Greenville, Mrs. Geo. Shelby, of Shelby; Winona, Miss Mary Sweatman, of Winona; Sardis, Miss Julia Jones, of Cold Water; Grenada, Mrs. M. S. Collier, of Oxford; Aberdeen, to be supplied; Corinth, Mrs. Geo. Bynum, of Corinth; Holly Springs, Miss Lucy Matthews, of Holly Springs; Durant, Mrs. Irene Thomas, of Maben.

We certainly thank the railroads for courtesies shown, and those of us who were detained at Elizabeth were comfortably cared for at the hotel, and appreciate kindness of porter and depot agent.

The Christian Life.

A GUEST AT THE DOOR.

In Holman Hunt's great picture, called "The Light of the World," we see One with patient, gentle face standing at a door which is ivy-covered, as if long closed. He is girt with the priestly breastplate. He bears in his hand the lamp of truth. He stands and knocks. There is no answer, and he still stands and knocks. His eye tells of love, his face beams with yearning. You look closely, and you perceive that there is no knob or latch on the outside of the door. It can be opened only from within. Do you not see the meaning? The Spirit of God comes to your heart's door and knocks. He stands there, while storms gather and break upon his unsheltered head, while the sun declines and night comes on with its chills and its heavy dews. He waits and knocks, but you must open the door yourself. The only latch is inside.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

There are some flowers which always turn toward the sun. There was a little potted rose-bush in a sick-room which I visited. It sat in the window. One day I noticed that the one rose on the bush was looking toward the light. I referred to it; and the sick woman said that her daughter had turned the rose around several times toward the darkness of the room, but that each time the little flower had twisted itself back, until again its face was toward the light. It would not look into the darkness. The rose taught me a lesson—never to allow myself to look toward any gloom, but instantly to turn from it. Not a moment should we permit our eyes to be inclined toward anything sinful. To yield to one moment's sinful act is to defile the soul. The Bible says in its every verse, "Turn from the wrong, the base, the low, the unworthy, to the right, the pure, the noble, the godlike." We should not allow even an unholy thought to stay a moment in our mind, but should turn from its very first suggestion, with face full toward Christ, the Holy One. But we should train ourselves to turn, also, from all shadows and discouragements. There is always a bright side, and we should find it. Discouragement is full of danger. It weakens and hurts the life.—Rev. J. R. Miller, D. D.

To all, sooner or later, Christ comes to baptize them with fire. But do not think that the baptism of fire comes once for all to a man in some terrible affliction, some one awful conviction of his own sinfulness and nothingness. No; with many—and those, perhaps, the best people—it goes on month after month, and year after year. By secret trials, chastenings which none but they and God can understand, the Lord is cleansing them from their faults and making them to understand wisdom secretly, burning out of them the chaff of self-will and self conceit and vanity, and leaving only the pure gold of righteousness. How many sweet, holy souls, who look cheerful enough before the eyes of man, yet have their secret sorrows! They carry their cross unseen all day long, and lie down to sleep on it at night, and they will carry it, perhaps, for years and years, and to their graves, and to the throne of Christ, before they lay it down; and none but they and Christ ever will know what it was, what was the secret of bitter chastisement which God sent to make that soul better, which seemed to us already too good for earth.—Charles Kingsley.

Fog in one's spiritual life need be no more lasting than that in nature. "It will burn off before long." How often weather-wise people say this when the gray mists of the seashore depress the hearts that were longing for a bright day! And so it proves. A glow of silver in the sky near the sun; a thinning out here and there of the vapory shroud; glimpses of blue, clean outlining and swift sailing away of the clouds—and the fine clear day is here long before noon. We might oftener save ourselves from heavy hearts and gloomy faces when early morning shows gray in our lives or other lives about us. Mists are left over from a storm yesterday. The day closed on a misunderstanding. The morning is foggy and depressing. Why talk about it? Let the weather alone. Fog is shallow. "It will burn off before long." There is a good warm sun of love at work, and the blue sky will soon be over us.—Sunday-School Times.

Social progress is not conditioned upon an immediate mobilization of all the forces that make for reform. It hinges on the fidelity of the prophets of God, who, having had vision of the Eternal Justice, seek the other prophets—the conscience-dominated men who have everything to gain by dying, if need be, for the truth. There were seven thousand who had not kissed the hand to the Baal-image in the days of Elijah, but when Elijah left the shadows of the juniper-tree, he did not seek them. Rather, he went to the field where Elisha plowed, and laid his mantle upon him for the prosecution of his mission.—Exchange.

What we all want is inward rest—rest of heart and brain; the calm strong, self-contained, self-dependent character which needs no stimulant for it has no fits of depression which needs no narcotics, for it has no fits of excitement; which needs no ascetic restraint, for it is strong enough to use God's gifts without abusing them; the character, in a word, which is truly temperate, not in drink and food merely, but in desires, thoughts and actions.—Kingsley.

Let us endeavor to the last hour. It is the end that determines everything.—Joseph Parker.

Clergyman's Statement

Nerve Strength Gained by Taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

BRIGHTON, IOWA.—Rev. Bernard M. Shulick of this place, owing to weakness of the nerves, was for a time unable to attend to his duties. He makes this statement: "I have suffered for a long time from weak nerves. After I had taken a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla I became quite well again. The weakness of the nerves has now wholly disappeared and I am able to attend to my duties again. I am therefore grateful to Hood's Sarsaparilla and I recommend it to everyone who suffers from weak nerves."

WAIT.

BY L. A. FLOWERS.

Whene'er my fainting heart
Would murmur at my fate,
An angel sweetly speaks,
Saying softly, "Wait."

Wait, though the heavy load
So grievous to be borne,
Demands thy utmost strength,
And may be shared by none.

Wait, though in darkness drear,
Uncheered by ray of light,
Though sorrow's withering hand
Hides blessings from thy sight.

Bide yet the Master's will,
Be patient still and wait,
For never yet hath good from Him
To sufferer come too late.

Angel, behold, I wait,
And, waiting, find surcease,
Though sorrows might be weary
The morrow bringeth peace.

FROM THE WORK.

CARROLLTON STATION, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

This week will close out our first year's labors in this charge. As we retrospect the work done, we "thank God and take courage." At our first Quarterly Conference the pastor's salary was advanced one hundred dollars over assessment of previous years. This will be paid, and our Conference collections will be in excess of assessments. The Sunday-school here has paid one hundred and twenty-five dollars for missions, and our people have contributed one hundred dollars to our mission church at Sao Paulo, Brazil. This was in response to the appeal of our Bishop Galloway, who was with us in February. We had, also, in early part of the year, Dr. Murrah, of Millsaps College, and a few weeks later Dr. Bolling, of Columbus, preached for us on Sunday night, after dedicating a church on the Carrollton circuit at 11 A. M. The initiative has been taken towards the building of a new parsonage, and more than six hundred dollars has been secured. Carrollton has several country appointments connected with it. It ought to be made an independent station, or, perhaps, better—connected with some other point on railroad, with two Sundays at each place, at our Conference next week. District Conference meets with us next year. Two of the lay delegates from Winona district are members of this charge, and will be at roll-call next Wednesday morning.

CHINA GROVE.

I am just back from Thanksgiving services. There was a good congregation present, and the decoration was expressive of the blessings which we have received this year. Some of almost everything that is grown in the farm was used in the decoration. The people did not seem to be feeling the hard times that some talk of; everybody was well dressed and unusually cheerful. I love to see people appear happy. It often removes the gloom of others, and helps them to look more constantly on the bright side of life.

The people in this country have many reasons for being cheerful. There is an abundant living here for them. They may not have much money, but they need not fear that they will suffer for food.

Well, Conference is almost here. Some of the preachers will have to move, having stayed four years, and others may move. When a preacher preaches to a people as long as the Discipline will allow, and must leave them, it makes him feel very sad. I always need my handkerchief when I bid the people that I have served farewell, and they, too, many of them.

God has greatly blessed us in the work of the church this year. Our revival meetings have been blessed with the Lord's presence, and the people have received many, many blessings. Our Quarterly Conferences have all been blessed with the presence of the Spirit. Bro. Weems, like the spies of old, has always come to us laden with fruit (good news) just from the vine. The people in this pastoral charge love him very much. We are expecting to make a good report to the Conference, notwithstanding the complaining about the low price of cotton. This has been one of the most pleasant years of my life. I have never served a better people. They have given many expressions of appreciation, and we have been made happy by them.

Doctor, we hope to get a goodly number of new subscribers for the ADVOCATE by Conference. Pray for us.

GANSVILLE CHARGE, ARCADIA DISTRICT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

We are peculiarly situated in this part of the district. It is from 25 to 30 miles to our nearest railroad, and from 40 to 50 miles to our nearest river transportation. Our people are poor, and to some extent uneducated. There was not a school in the charge of any importance until a few years ago, when the greatly lamented Rev. A. M. Wailes established a high school at Wiston (in one end of the charge). This school was not strictly a Methodist school, and was patronized more by other denominations than it was by the Methodist, as they are greatly in the majority; and the school is now being run by a very promising young man who was educated by Bro. Wailes, but is a Baptist.

Our people are a mixed multitude—made up principally of the Primitive and Missionary Baptist, and the word "Primitive" might be applied in more ways than one. It is believed, taught and practiced by some of these denominational preachers that it's a sin for one of their number to go to hear a Methodist preach. I am told that one of the "big" Missionary Baptist preachers said from the pulpit during this year, "It is impossible for a Methodist to get to heaven."

Bro. Brown's report at Conference will show that we are on rising ground. And with a few more faithful, earnest and zealous workers like Bro. Brown, in a few years we will have a circuit that any preacher in the Louisiana Conference would feel proud to serve.

We have rebuilt the camp ground at Siloam, and held a camp meeting with some glorious results. We have fixed the regular time for holding our camp meetings in October, commencing on Thursday night before the second Sunday in October, and we want some more good and pure men full of the Holy Ghost to come and help us to drive ignorance and the devil clear out of this country.

J. L. MOORE.

OBITUARIES.

BLACK—FRANK C., son of J. M. and Cornelia Black, of Bolton, Miss., and nephew of Dr. W. C. Black, editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, died at the home of his aunt, Miss Nettie Bishop, Gallman, Miss., Nov. 16, 1898, of consumption.

It was the writer's privilege to know Frank when a boy, and have him as a pupil for two years: part of which time the writer boarded in the home of his parents, and Frank was his room-mate. He was an obedient son, and very devoted to his mother and sisters. He grew up to be a good business man, full of energy and hope.

December 26, 1893, he was happily married to Miss Jennie Lucy, of Helena, Ark. Shortly after their marriage it became evident that he had consumption. He worked hard, as long as he was able, to make a support for his wife and child; but finally he gave up work, and went to Texas to seek the restoration of his health. For eighteen months he and his devoted wife have been in this vain pursuit. When they arrived at New Orleans, about two weeks ago, his relatives saw the end was near. His good, kind aunt, Miss Nettie Bishop, hearing of his sad condition, went to New Orleans and brought him and his family to her home at Gallman, Miss., where they arrived Tuesday afternoon, and Wednesday, at 1 P. M., he entered into rest.

As we stood by his bed and watched his emaciated form as his spirit was leaving his body, such a bright, happy smile passed over his countenance, that we involuntarily exclaimed, "O, he is happy; see the happy smile of recognition of his loved ones as they meet him and bid him welcome." One of the last things he spoke was that he was at peace with all mankind. His wife said he had been active in Christian work while in health, and it was their custom to hold family prayer. He had been a member of the M. E. Church, South, since quite early in life, I think. He was buried at Belton by the side of his mother and sisters, who have preceded him.

May our heavenly Father take the bereft wife and fatherless child into his own arms and protect and care for them!

W. M. WILLIAMS.

MONTGOMERY—WILLIAM HARRISON MONTGOMERY was born in Amite county, Miss., April 20, 1841, and died at his home near Zion Hill, Miss., Oct. 25, 1898. At the breaking out of the Civil War he enlisted in Company A, of the Sixteenth Mississippi Regiment, and went with his comrades to Virginia, where he served faithfully for twelve months. Having, then, fallen dangerously ill, he was discharged, and returned home. Several months later, his health being restored, he joined the Twenty-second Mississippi Regiment, in which he remained till the war closed. In April, 1866, he was united in marriage to Miss Calistia Ward Wilkinson, who proved a most devoted and inspiring helpmeet.

After the war Bro. Montgomery engaged in farming, in which occupation he met with considerable success. For eight years he resided in Gloster, Miss.

He was converted during the Civil War while in camp in Virginia, and, on coming home, united with the Southern Methodist Church at Salem, on the Amite circuit, of which he remained a member until his decease. For some time after his conversion he lived near to God, but later on he succumbed to the chilling influences of the world. During his last illness he confessed with deep penitence that he had long been a backslider, and expressed deep gratitude to God for being so gracious to him. Shortly after being taken sick, realizing keenly his neglect and unreadiness for eternity, he sought the Lord earnestly, and after several days of darkness he again found peace with God. So great was his joy that for some days, though suffering much in body, he shouted the praises of God, and exhorted all who visited him to live close to the Lord every day. Many were profoundly moved by his words.

Bro. Montgomery's deepest regret was that his life had not been more consecrated, and he earnestly desired to live that he might in some measure make amends for past neglect; but God's will was otherwise. After lingering for three months in great pain, he peacefully fell asleep in Jesus. He was buried in Zion Hill (Baptist) Churchyard, the obsequies being attended by a large number of friends and relatives. He was a man of upright character, was greatly beloved as a citizen and neighbor, and will be greatly missed in the community where he lived. His wife, one brother, and several relatives by marriage remain to mourn his loss. May God graciously comfort them in this great sorrow, and give them grace to live so as by and by to meet our departed brother in the home above. (Rev.) M. M. BLACK.

TERRILL—Mrs. INDIA TERRILL, consort of Dr. George L. Terrill, and daughter of Mr. A. G. and Mrs. J. T. Ware, was born in Caroline county, Va., Jan. 9, 1835. Under the prayerful training of a truly spiritual-minded mother she was led to Christ in her childhood, joined the Methodist Church when a little girl, and through life maintained the profession of her faith, and was ever true to her church vows. She was a faithful worker for the Lord, making her influence felt in and out of the church; a daily Bible reader, and carefully observed her hours for secret prayer. Her religious enjoyment did not break out in great ecstacies, but maintained an evenness in altitudes of love, ever dwelling in sweet communion with God. Religion was a topic of conversation on which she never tired. Her house was a home for preachers of every denomination. The weary itinerant found a resting-place beneath her roof, and, when sick, was tenderly cared for by her sisterly hands, as this writer can testify to through a painful attack when away from his home.

For many years she suffered from asthma. As life advanced she weakened from this trouble. An attack of congestion suddenly swept her into eternity.

She was married to Dr. George L. Terrill, Sept. 19, 1854, and, with her husband, settled in Winston county, Miss., when she lived ever afterward. She died Sept. 19, 1898, in her sixty-fourth year. She was the mother of six children, five of whom are consistent members of the church. She left an odor around her memory truly consoling to her grief-stricken husband, and a life-long comfort to her bereaved children. May they meet her in heaven!

J. D. NEWSOM.

HARMAN—PERCEY HARMAN, the son of Mr. O. D. and Mrs. Edith Harman, was born Dec. 20, 1876, and died at the home of his parents in Plaquemine Brulee, Sept. 27, 1898.

Percey joined the Methodist Church in 1891, and remained a member up to his death. He was always complimented for his kindness to his mother. May God bless the sorrowing father and mother and brothers and sisters that are left behind! is my prayer.

His pastor, R. C. GRACE.

A magnificent example of what care of health will do for a man is presented in the life of Mr. Gladstone, the greatest statesman of the century. This "Grand Old Man" at eighty-six years of age, retained his intellectual vigor unabated, and had not lost the sinewy grip with which he fastened upon any subject that interested him.

Nearly every man has it in his power to live to a green old age like the great statesman of England. It is simply a matter of a little daily thought and regard for health. If, when a man feels that he is a little out of sorts, he will resort to the right remedy, he will never have to submit to the more serious ills of life. Most men, when they have a headache, feel drowsy during the day and are restless during the night, and find their appetite failing off, pay little or no heed to these warnings. The inevitable result is some dangerous and possibly fatal malady. The doctor may call it consumption, malaria or biliousness, or perhaps some blood or skin disease. It makes but little difference. These troubles all have their inception in the same cause—improper and insufficient nourishment. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery corrects that cause. It makes the appetite keen and hearty, the digestion perfect, the liver active and the blood pure and rich. It is the great blood-maker and flesh-builder. It facilitates the assimilation of the life-giving elements of the food, filling the blood with the nutriment that makes new and healthy flesh and nerve tissue. Medicine dealers sell it.

"Last summer," writes Miss Laura Piersel, of East Bethlehem, Washington Co., Pa., "I was going into consumption. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery completely cured me."

A man or woman who neglects constipation suffers from slow poisoning. Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic.

Best Edition of the World's Best Book,

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers. New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to December, '99. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

SELF-PRONOUNCING

S. S. Teachers' Reference Bible

Text Conforms Exactly to the Oxford Teachers' Edition.

This Bible is printed from Large, Beautiful and Clear New Type. All Proper Names are Divided into Syllables and Every Vowel is Marked and the Syllables Inflected, showing the Sounds and Accents as they are given in a Dictionary, thus enabling the reader to properly pronounce every word. This feature is a great improvement and a strong recommendation for this Bible over others.

This Bible contains the celebrated Oxford Teachers' Helps together with a complete series of New Maps illustrating the geography of Palestine and the surrounding countries from the earliest times, and embodying the most recent discoveries renders this Bible especially desirable to teachers and students of the Holy Scriptures.

Imperial Seal Binding, Tuck Edges, known as "Divinity Circuit," Linen Lined, Round Corners, Red under Gold Edges, Price, $4.00.

This book in Bourgeois type will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price ($4) to any address; but to that select class who read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, we furnish it on the following terms: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, viz., to December, '99, and we will send it to you, postpaid, for $1.75. (A little later you will have to pay to January, 1900.)

The same Bible in Minion type will be sent for $1.55; in Emerald type, for $1.15, to those who pay a full year in advance.

For fifty cents additional we will send Bible with index. For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved on the outside in gilt letters.

Bustling activity and the cares of life smother many a heart cry, but the cry is there.—Bible Reader.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We were present at the North Mississippi Conference at the opening on Wednesday, Nov. 30, and remained until Monday morning. Being busy with matters pertaining to the Publisher's Department, we were so fortunate as to utilize the facile pen of Rev. J. C. Park in reporting the proceedings. This was Bishop Key's first visit to the Conference. He delighted the brethren in the chair, in the pulpit, and in the social circle. Our new Church Extension Secretary, Dr. P. H. Whisner, was present, and made a fine impression. Dr. Hammond presented the cause of education in an elegant address, which we are sure will bear fruit. Both these brethren made their addresses to the Conference. Dr. DuBose was more fortunate. In addition to his talk to the Conference, he addressed a crowded house at night. The address was a most admirable one, and gave a new impetus to the Epworth League movement. Dr. Hammond preached on Sunday night, and produced a profound impression. Dr. Whisner preached one afternoon, and those who heard him were delighted with his discourse. Neither of the Missionary Secretaries being present, Dr. W. T. Bolling presented the cause on Saturday night in a unique and forceful address.

We were domiciled in the palatial home of Dr. W. M. Paine, a son of Bishop Paine. A better Conference home no preacher ever had. Bro. and Sister Paine understand the art of hospitality to perfection. We shall carry through life delightful memories of our sojourn under their roof. We were fortunate in having as our co-guests men of such admirable spirit as Bro. Callicott and Dr. H. M. DuBose.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

FIRST DAY.

The North Mississippi Conference of the M. E. Church, South, met in its twenty-ninth session in the Methodist Church at Aberdeen, Miss., Wednesday, Nov. 30, 1898, at 9 A. M., the Rev. Bishop Joseph S. Key in the chair.

The day was bright, the Bishop at home (though in a new field), and the preachers hearty, happy, and well dressed. Surely they are the sunniest souls on earth.

According to custom, the Conference opened with a sacramental service, in which differences, disappointments, distresses were forgotten, and the brethren reconsecrated themselves to Christ at the cross. This solemn service was followed by roll-call. Three names, spoken in subdued tones, reminded us that three comrades—H. R. Tucker and J. B. Harris, effective, and S. B. Carson, superannuate—had finished their courses and received their crowns.

Communications were read and referred.

Question 20 was called, under which the presiding elders reported and were passed.

The characters of C. N. Terry, J. W. Bates, J. M. Hampton, W. R. Rainey, W. S. Harrison, J. T. Cunningham, S. A. Ellis, J. D. Newsom, T. L. Foster, A. J. Jones, J. Johnson and J. W. Poston were examined and passed, and their names referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuated relation.

Question 2 was called—"Who remain on trial?" J. R. Wilson's name was called, character passed, and he was continued in class of first year. Then question was left open until morning session to-morrow.

Under question 7—"Who are the deacons of one year?"—S. A. Brown, C. P. Moss, W. L. Anderson, J. J. Garner and G. A. Klein having passed in examination of character and prescribed studies, were advanced to class of the fourth year. S. B. Cox was not present, having been transferred to Indian Mission Conference.

Revs. Q. A. Oats and J. H. Bass were announced as transfers from Pacific and Indian Mission Conferences.

Conference entered into a discussion of the cause of so few conversions where so much organized, ecclesiastical force is employed. The discussion was precipitated upon the body by the searching question of the Bishop, "How many accessions to the church have you had this year on profession?" Drs. Boswell and Wier and Revs. Porter, Dorman, Thames and Gaines made speeches, and the Bishop called the Conference to prayer, praying that God might give to the ministry and to the church the spirit of travail and self-sacrificing service for the salvation of souls.

SECOND DAY.

Conference met pursuant to adjournment at 9 A. M., with religious service conducted by Rev. R. G. Porter, after which roll was called, Minutes read and approved.

Chairman announced the nominations for Standing Committees and Boards, and the Conference elected the Boards as nominated. This is a very important quadrennial work, for upon the efficiency of these Boards depends largely the success of all the work of the church for the next four years.

Question 2—"Who remain on trial?"—was taken up, and calling of names of class of first year was resumed. W. T. Browning, W. R. Williams, E. A. Tucker and J. B. Mitchell having passed in examination of character and course of study, were advanced to the class of the second year.

On call of question 8, J. E. Cunningham and R. A. Tucker were elected to deacon's orders, and R. E. Duke, a member of this class (already a deacon), was passed and advanced to the class of third year. J. A. Wilson, of this class, was discontinued.

Question 12 was called. B. P. Patterson, a member of the class of the fourth year, and now at Vanderbilt University, was passed in character and continued in class of fourth year. J. R. Countiss and J. H. Rodgers were passed, examination approved, and they were elected to the office of an elder.

T. J. Derritt, G. S. Sanders, and T. H. Porter, local preachers, were elected to deacon's orders.

John A. Lowe was introduced to the Conference as a transfer from West Texas Conference.

Orphans' Home Board made its report, showing the home to be in good condition and management excellent; the thirty inmates hearty, healthy and happy, and the prospect most hopeful.

Dr. H. M. DuBose made most encouraging report of the progress of the Epworth League work, of which he is general secretary, and reported Epworth Era as having 12,500 subscribers—an increase of 8,000 in five months.

Dr. P. H. Whisner, Church Extension Secretary, gave a hopeful utterance of the growth and prospect of the work of the church in this department, and received a voluntary contribution of $146 for David Morton Memorial Fund.

Conference adjourned with benediction by Dr. French.

THIRD DAY.

The Conference met at 9 A. M., with Bishop Key in the chair. Devotional services were conducted by Rev. A. Kendall, Minutes were read and approved, and Conference resumed its routine work.

Question 20 was resumed, and preachers of Sardis, Grenada and Winona districts reported their works, in which it seemed that collections would be in excess of last year.

When the name of Rev. A. P. Leech was called, and he had reported, his presiding elder moved the reference of his name to Committee on Relations for the superannuate relation. Bro. Leech has been a faithful itinerant in the face of difficulties, and the body gave him a voluntary expression of their appreciation in a collection of $77.70.

Dr. W. T. Bolling, of Columbus station, was called, reported, and pending the passage of his character, Rev. J. W. Honnoll asked an explanation of Dr. Bolling's action in managing a Kentucky camp meeting in the face of the protest of the pastor. Dr. Bolling made explanation, and said if he had been guilty of anything improper, he was very sorry and would surely not do so again. The brethren discussed the principle involved and unanimously and heartily passed the character of Dr. Bolling.

A resolution concerning the Publishing House Claim, condemning the action of the Agents, etc., was presented and referred to the Committee on Books and Periodicals, and the committee was requested to report on the same to-morrow.

Bishop Wilson called the class of the second year before the bar, and after a strong, spiritual address, Revs. R. A. Tucker, J. E. Cunningham and R. E. Duke were received by rising vote into full connection. A great spiritual wave swept over the congregation at the conclusion of the Bishop's address, the whole body surged, shouting toward the boys, and for fifteen minutes the Conference sang, shouted, and shook hands. Surely the young men will never forget their reception.

Dr. French, agent of American Bible Society, and Bishop Wilson made speeches setting forth the basal position of the A. B. S. in all our missionary operations, and stressing the importance of this collection which is raised in our Conference under a regular assessment.

FOURTH DAY—MORNING SESSION.

Conference had held under sunny skies for three days, but Saturday came close, cloudy and cheerless. The rain began falling with the opening of the session. A cloudy day in a Conference is a calamity. The brethren are sure to be seized with the spirit of the weather, and combat comes with the clouds. The session developed determined discussions, and the day was spent in debate.

Conference opened with devotional service conducted by Rev. J. D. Newsom. Minutes were read, corrected and approved.

The action of the Conference referring the name of J. D. Newsom to the Committee of Conference Relations for the superannuate relation was rescinded, and Bro. Newsom becomes effective.

Question 20 was resumed, and preachers of Durant, Columbus and Aberdeen districts had their character passed and reported their works. Under the call of the name of Rev. A. P. Sage, his presiding elder moved the reference of his name to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation. Motion prevailed. Bro. Sage stated that he retired voluntarily and cheerfully after forty-five years of active service. He has been most faithful and efficient. Rev. W. J. O'Bryant asked that he be granted a superannumerary relation. His name was referred to the appropriate committee.

Committee on Books and Periodicals made Report No. 1—a special report on a resolution referred to it protesting against the methods used by our Book Agents in collecting claim against the United States for use and abuse of Publishing House, and setting forth the following points:

(1) That we endorse the propositions of the Bishops, and recommend the return of the money as soon as practicable.

(2) We think the peace of the church would be promoted by an early resignation of our Agents.

"Your committee reports that it has carefully examined the paper referred to it concerning the Publishing House claim, and, in view of all the facts apparent to us, we do not deem any action of the Conference advisable in reference thereto, desiring to leave the whole matter in the hands of the constituted authorities of the church."

Walter Price—a layman—offered as a substitute for this report a resolution asking for the resignation of the agents.

It was moved that the substitute be tabled, which was carried by 91 to 49. After two hours' discussion by both preachers and laymen, on call for previous question, the report of committee was adopted by 98 to 42.

Rev. R. A. Meek asked the privilege of preparing a protest and of spreading it upon the records.

Committee on Books and Periodicals submitted Special Report No. 2, on a paper referred to them calling for the establishment of a Mississippi paper to be published at $1 a year. The report of the committee showed that the Conference was under contract with Dr. Black for three years, only one year of which had passed, and rejecting the resolutions presented to them in above-mentioned paper. A lengthy discussion followed, lasting until hour for adjournment.

Conference adjourned (to meet at 3 o'clock P. M.) with benediction by Bishop Key.

FOURTH DAY—AFTERNOON SESSION.

Conference opened pursuant to adjournment with devotional services conducted by Rev. J. W. Honnoll, after which Minutes were read and approved.

Rev. J. A. Lowe, a transfer from West Texas Conference, announced in these proceedings, on account of his health, asked a supernumerary relation. His name was referred to Committee on Conference Relations.

Pending question was taken up—question on report of Committee on Books and Periodicals concerning establishment of Mississippi paper.

Rev. J. A. Bowen offered as a substitute for the committee's report a resolution providing for the establishment of such a paper.

After extended debate the substitute was withdrawn by the authors, and an amendment was adopted making declaration of a purpose to establish a paper for Mississippi Methodism so soon as the contract with the present editor and publisher of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE expires.

The report as amended was adopted.

Board of Education made its report through Rev. R. G. Porter, commending the work of the Conference colleges, announcing the gratifying fact of more than $1,000 increase in collection for education. Report recommended the election of Dr. W. G. Sykes to be trustee of Millsaps College, to fill vacancy caused by resignation of R. W. Jones, Jr.; also the reappointment of Drs. Murrah and Malone to the presidency of Millsaps and Grenada Colleges respectively. Further, that Dr. J. W. Malone be appointed agent of Grenada College. It was further recommended that assessments be made upon the Conference as follows: Paine and Lane Institutes, $400; General Board, $300; Millsaps College, $2,000.

Rev. T. W. Dye offered an amendment providing that collection be divided equally between Millsaps and Grenada Colleges. At this point Dr. Hammond, Educational Secretary, was presented, and addressed Conference on the subject of Christian Education.

Action on report and amendment was postponed until next session.

On motion, Conference adjourned with benediction by Rev. S. M. Thames.

At the time of going to press the proceedings of the last day's session had not been received.

CONFERENCE NOTES.

If the North Mississippi Conference has a fault, it is the fault of talkativeness.

J. S. Oakley, with G. H. Lipscomb and R. M. Evans as assistants, and Thos. B. Clifford as statistical secretary, will do the clerical work of the body, and all who know these penmen are sure that the work will be well done.

The new Church Extension Secretary set the preaching tone to a sweet strain when he gave the Conference, on the first afternoon, a sweet, simple, sublime (simply sublime and sublimely simple) sermon on "The Pauline Analysis of Charity."

Dr. Hammond delivered an address on Education, noted for its solidity; He has definite plans and a fixed purpose to execute them. The correlation of schools, establishment of a high curriculum, the raising of $1,500,000 are sure to go under his management.

The North Mississippi Conference is not a stagnant body. It challenges every questionable action, calls to account its member (in whatever position) in whom there is apparent wrong, and sifts every question that comes before the body. The investigations are fearless, fair, frank and fraternal.

Bishop Key emphasizes spirituality. "How many conversions?" is the question with which he probes to the center of the year's work. The church is a souls-saving institution; its supreme business is to save men. All its men, money and machinery is to this end. If it fails in soul-saving, it fails in all.

Can not men discuss principles without descending to the pussant practice of personal thrusts! The heat of the discussion on "war claim" stirred the passions of a few brethren, and the Bishop wisely put his gavel down on personalities. "We be brethren," and will forget the feelings generated under the heat of debate.

Aberdeen entertains with an open hand. Turkeys are cheap and cheerful, and the chickens crow and cackle as if they would offer themselves as willing sacrifices upon the altar of the Conference appetite. Palative delights crowd the banquet boards, a hearty hospitality reigns in open homes, and a warm welcome is found everywhere.

Have we too many collections? Is the church over-organized? A gray-haired brother said, "I'm not enjoying religion as I used to;" "I don't have time. I am run to death trying to raise the collections. A man wants to make a good preacher; he has not time; he is too busy taking the collections." These were observations of a veteran. Have we over-emphasized finances?

Fifty years of ministerial service! What fightings and fears, what shadows and sunshine, what crosses and coronets crowd into the semi-century of an itinerant's life! Rev. J. D. Newsom, having completed his half century of service as preacher, preached during the Conference a "semi-centennial sermon." The veteran has been faithful for fifty years, and is able to mingle with the brethren, and is apparently hale and hearty.

Bishop Key to the class—"We want men who know the polity and doctrine of the Methodist Church." "The preaching of the Methodists from the beginning has been a preaching of 'conscious assurance.'" "I'm sorry that sanctification has been called a 'second-blessing,' (1) because it has been a storm center for combatants, (2) because it is not a Scriptnre term, (3) because it does not express Mr. Wesley's idea." "God can't use a man unless he owns him."

Dr. Murrah entered the chancel immediately after election of secretary, demanded the attention of the Rev. J. S. Oakley—just elected secretary for the ninth time—and preceded to lecture him concerning the essential qualifications for his office. Bro. Oakley endued the searching gaze of the earnest speaker as he told of possible dereliction and consequent disorder and confusion, only occasionally looking guilty of some neglect. But the drooping countenance revived when Dr. Murrah produced a high-grade typewriter and presented it to the handsome secretary as token of the body's esteem and appreciation.

THE PORTRAIT. By Rev. K. S. Enochs, of the Louisiana Conference. NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, 512 Camp street, New Orleans.

The above is the title of a neat pamphlet of 36 pages, which deals with such subjects as the fall and the redemption of man, and the status in which man is placed by the atonement. Without expressing an opinion for the present as to the correctness of the author's conclusions, we commend the work to our preachers and reading laymen as one that deals with themes of great importance. It is written in a flowing style that holds the attention from start to finish. It can be had of the author, whose address for the present is Vicksburg, Miss.

NOTES.

Rev. B. Carradine will begin a meeting for Rev. T. L. Melien at Canton, Miss., Dec. 13.

Rev. H. W. Knickerbocker has reached Los Angeles, Cal., and has begun his pastoral work with fine prospects.

A letter from Rev. J. A. Parker, received just as we go to press, brings the unwelcome tidings of the destruction by fire of our church at Boyce, La. As usual with Methodist Churches, there was no insurance.

Rev. J. W. McLaurin was in the city a few days since, and let the light of his countenance shine into our sanctum. He is in good health and spirits and gives a good account of his charge—West End, Meridian.

Mrs. S. C. Trueheart, general secretary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, is the guest of Mrs. F. A. Dicks, 1918 Napoleon avenue. She will probably meet the ladies of the various churches at Carondelet Street Church some time during her stay.

We call the attention of our readers to the following notice from Sister Meekins, and hope that many will respond to the call she makes:

As Christmas rapidly draws near, and with an array of little faces before me with a look of hope and expectation that they will receive something in the way of toys and candy at that time, I most earnestly appeal to those who can help these less favored ones—these children around the mission, to whom this Christmas-time is the only spot of sunshine in their paths—for any donations of toys, candy, etc.

PESSIMISTIC PASTORS.

The manner, spirit and disposition of a preacher have a fnndamental bearing on the snocess of his efforts. A cheerfnl conntenance, a bnoyant spirit, a hopefnl and charitable attitude toward Indivldnals, and the work of the congregation In general, will always have "right of way" and meet with ready and favorable response. A gloomy, censorlons, offi sions, irritable and irritating disposition is so incompatible with the nature of the preacher's mission that where it is allowed to prevail the work of the ohnrch is snre to snffer.

To sncceed in the gospel ministry difficnlties and disconraging featnres mnst be met bravely and with a fringe of good cheer in spite of a burdened heart. It is the pastor's bnsiness to bring hope and gladness to others, bnt if he himself is despondent, fears, faints and falters, how shall he comfort and help those that are bowed down and ready to give np the struggle?

Christianity is happiness incarnate. It is the one thing in all the earth that is the balm for every sorrow and the help of the helpless when all other helpers fail. The joy of the gospel shonld beam from the eye and drop from the lips and radiate from the life of him who preaches it to others as the Word of Life. The pastor who stagnates his faith in the shadows of the dark side of things is a poor spiritnal gnide for others. He who allows himself to dwell more upon the faults of his parishioners than npon their good qnalities will soon find himself disqnalified to minister to their spiritnal needs. The dominance of a state of mind which is strongly inclined to look for flaws and fanlts nntil the individual is scarcely capable of seeing any good even where it predominates, is a flagrant departnre from the spirit and purpose of the Christian ministry.

The faithfnl pastor will discover the fanlts and infirmities of those under his care in dne time. He will not be indifferent to their remissness of dnty and will not wink at inconsistencies; but observing these things he will not cast away his confidence, bnt will in love admonish, reprove and instrnct to the end that he may establish the weak and erring in righteonsness and in the faith of the gospel.

When a pastor reflects donbts and fears and disconragement concerning the work of the Lord and the immediate trinmph of the gospel as to the work at hand, instead of the victory and conrage of faith, he is not fit to stand before the people as an ambassador of the Lord Jesns Christ. The pastor mnst be fnll of hope and habitnally of good cheer—bearing in his heart a feeling of confidence and a spirit of tenderest sympathy toward those whom he would edify in the Lord and lead on to higher attainments in the spiritnal life. An nndertone of discontent and lack of confidence and want of appreciation will be detected—and if long persisted in, will be resented by the people, and the resnlts will be disastrons. The preacher who revels in the joy of the Lord and maintains confidence in his people and in the trinmph of the church will be heard gladly, and can freely administer reproof and correction without giving offense.—Evangelical Messenger.

THE LAST FIVE MINUTES.

The following letter will explain itself. Both the pulpit and the pew are interested in the state of mind it exhibits:

To the editor of the Christian Register: Having great confidence in yonr wisdom, I write to say that last Sunday my sermon was nnfortnnately five minntes too long (I am not snre bnt it was ten); and, as I came ont of the pnlpit, I could see a sort of twelve-o'clock expression, a kind of cold dinner look of reproach in the eyes of some of the congregation. I think it was the last five minutes that did it. Will yon be kind enough to tell me whether the last five minntes ought to have been omitted? TRANSGRESSOR.

We take the following from the editor's reply: A week hence, my friend, when yon take np yonr sermon of last Snnday, and look it over coolly, yon will find that yon could have cnt it down. The tronble was that yon could not ont it down when it was hot. Heat has a tendency to expand; and the hotter yon get a sermon when you are making it, the more likely it is to expand nnder yonr hammer. But if yon feel when yon have yonr sermon ready at first hand that yon mnst cnt off five minntes, don't take off that five minntes at the end. Take it off at the beginning. Rednce the size of yonr front "stoop." Don't spend so much time engraving yonr doorplate. Shorten the corridor. Don't nse so many winding-stairs. Be a little more direct. Leave ont some of yonr parentheses; nobody will miss them. Make yonr sentences short and terse, and don't nse too many of them. Cnt it down at the beginning or cnt it down in the middle. Leave ont those polished literary conceits. Every snch sentence yon fling at the andience is a pillow on which they will soon cnshion their heads to sleep.

Cnt down yonr sermon, then, if yon can; bnt preach it all, if yon feel that yon mnst. Don't, for heavon's sake, cnt short the message God has given yon to preach, from the fear of any clock that the ingennity or devilry of man has constrncted. And, as yon valne the sonls intrnsted to yonr care, don't cnt off the last five minntes—those minntes when yon look into the nptnrned faces of yonr anditors, and make that personal appeal to them without which yonr discourse may be an essay, bnt can not be a sermon. The last five minntes may be worth more than the twenty-five that have preceded it. It is then that yon are to ponr the red-hot fire of yonr brain and heart into these waiting sonls. If there is any nnction in yonr message, any divine anthority, any glow of persnasion, any holy admonition, any joy of hope or force of aspiration, it onght to come ont then, when yon gather np the whole force of that sermon and drive it home in your final appeal.—Christian Intelligencer.

RATES TO LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

I am informed by W. A. Kellond, assistant passenger agent for Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad, that their rate will be one fare going and one-third of one fare returning, on certificate plan.

Mr. L. J. Parks, general passenger and ticket agent of Southern Pacific, writes, under date of Dec. 2, as follows: "I am advised that the T. and P. railroad will make a one-fare rate for this Conference at Mansfield, selling tickets Dec. 13, 14, and 15, with limit for return Dec. 26. We are willing to make this same rate for points on our line."

I have nothing further from the T. and P. railroad than that which was published in last week's ADVOCATE.

THE HOLIDAYS.

Special low rate tickets to points in the Southeastern States will be sold by the Texas & Pacific Railway Company from all points on its line, Dec. 20 and 21, the same as in former years. It should be borne in mind that passengers have the choice of three gateways via this line in going back to their old home for Christmas and New Year's, namely: New Orleans, Shreveport and Memphis. It is with a feeling of pleasure and pride that we offer you the best passenger service in the South.

If you contemplate making the trip and want to know the cheapest and best way, write to nearest ticket agent or E P. Turner, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Texas & Pacific Railway, Dallas, Texas, or to H P. Hughes, Trav. Pass. Agt., Fort Worth, Texas.

GONE HOME.

Revs. T. S. and Robert Randle are deeply bereaved in the death of their only sister, Miss Hattie, who died in triumph at the home of the latter, Dec. 2. According to her wish, often expressed, he brought her to Mansfield, and she sleeps beside her sainted mother. The prayers of their brethren of the Conference will be sincerely offered for these sorrowing brothers.

We have been requested to publish our editorial on "The Gospel of Giving" in the form of a tract, and have done so. We will send it, postpaid, at the following prices: 3 copies, 5 cents; 10 copies, 15 cents; 25 copies, 30 cents; 50 copies, 50 cents.

RAILROAD RATES TO MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The New Orleans and Northeastern and Vicksburg and Meridian railroads, known now as the Queen and Crescent route, will sell tickets from any point on same to Hattiesburg. This road and the Illinois Central, the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley, and the Mobile and Ohio roads, will require brethren coming to our Conference to pay full fare, and on returning from it, one-third fare. The Gulf and Ship Island road requires full fare of all coming over it to Conference, and then allows them to return free of any charge whatever.

However, in order that the brethren may get the above rates on returning from Conference, let them be sure to have the agents from whom they buy tickets to give them a certificate showing that they paid full fare from that point, which certificate shall be signed by the secretary of our Conference. Brethren who have to come over more than one railroad, and can not get their agent to sell them a ticket through to Hattiesburg, must be sure to get the agent where they have to buy another ticket to give them a certificate also, showing that they have paid full fare, which certificate must be signed by the secretary of our Conference. To make it plain: If brethren in Yazoo City can not purchase tickets from there to Hattiesburg, but only to Jackson, then let them not only get a certificate from their agent at home, showing that they have paid full fare from there to Jackson, but also let them get the agent at Jackson to give them one showing they have paid full fare from there to Conference; or brethren at Waynesboro on the Mobile and Ohio road, if they can not purchase tickets from there to Hattiesburg, but will have to purchase tickets again wherever they change railroads, let them not only get the agent at Waynesboro to give them a certificate, but also the agent where they have to buy again, showing they have paid full fare, and before leaving Conference, get our secretary to sign both of these certificates, etc. Let the brethren remember that every time they have to purchase a ticket on their way to Conference they will have to get a certificate also. Those whose wives are coming also will have to get certificates for them, too, in order to secure rates for them. ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

A Ragged Coat and An Empty Pocket Changes the Aspect of the World.

Walter Wycoff, a student of social problems, abandoned his station in life and assumed the garb of daily toiler, taking his place among grimy handed workers in order to test the change. A MALARIA POISONED LIVER will also cause as great a change in physical life. Sunshine will leave the face. The eye loses its sparkle; while the skin assumes a dull copper tint. These are least of the evils and merely bespeak the external cry that Nature gives when battling with Malaria germs. Headache, Nausea, dullness of thought, pain in the back and side, a coated tongue, a horrible taste, are among the danger signals which if unheeded portend CONGESTION, CONVULSIONS, SUPPRESSION OF SECRETIONS AND TERMINATION OF LIFE.

Far easier than the solution of the social problem is the remedy for Malaria—DICKS' CHILLIFUGE absolutely exterminates it. A Few Doses, and health spreads her wings over the grateful system, and the sun shines once more, while life is worth the living.

NEATNESS.

I wonder if the mother, when training her boy with a helpful, useful manhood in view, ever thinks of the possible and very probable wife whom her son some day may have.

As the mother sows so will the wife reap. Inculcate, if possible, habits of neatness; do not allow him, when he comes into the house, to throw his coat upon one chair, his hat upon another; it may be easy for you to pick up after him, but maybe in the years to come it will be less easy for the young wife, and "just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined."

I know a young wife who takes great pride in doing the work of her little home, but whose duties are doubled by a careless, untidy husband—muddy rubbers worn into the house, collars and ties thrown upon the sideboard, overcoat dropped upon the first convenient chair or couch. When his wife asks him to be more careful he says, laughingly and thoughtlessly: "Mother always picked up after me; why can't you?" It is selfish in a man, but the real fault goes further back; for, as he says, "Mother always picked up after me;" and, as the old saying is, "It's hard to teach an old dog new tricks."

If that mother had been more mindful of her duty toward the boy whose early training had been intrusted to her, if she had been less thoughtless of the grave responsibility resting upon her, he would have been a different man. He would have grown up with a love for order and tidiness; he would have been more thoughtful and considerate, and throughout his life he would have conducted himself in a manner to cause the least possible trouble to others.

Teach your son to be thoughtful and tender toward yourself as well as others; teach him to respect and reverence womankind, knowing that these seeds sown in his heart will grow and bear good fruit years hence.—Grace Yule Ball, in Woman's Home Companion.

KEEPING PACE WITH PROGRESS.

To succeed in business, the young man of to-day must be up-to-date in every respect. Old methods and usages must be constantly supplanted with new, fresh ideas. Methods of business are continually changing; everything is on the move; progress is the watchword of the age, and the young man and young woman who expect to succeed in this driving, pushing, hurrying age, with old methods and worn-out usages, will be left behind. One must study his business just as an artist studies his canvas. Eternal vigilance is the price of success, as of liberty. Great musicians say that, if they cease to practice, even for a day, they begin to lose power; if for several days, the public will notice their deterioration.

Be progressive in your occupation. Be constantly on the alert for new ideas and suggestions. Study carefully the methods of the successful leaders in your business; learn what has lifted them up from ordinary wage-earners to managers of capital and labor. Study the steps by which office-boys have climbed up to be superintendents and managers. Study the beginnings of great concerns and successful men; find out how they started, and the secret of their rise from small offices with single desks, in small stores on side streets, to immense commercial establishments.

There is no secret about success; it is simply a question of tact, great industry, and the constant exercise of common sense. It is not so much a question of great ability, as the constant application of ordinary business principles and horse sense; not so much a question of capital as of push and downright hard work.

Remember that men succeed, as a rule, because they fulfill the conditions of success; because they are always trying to succeed; always on the alert for every hint and suggestion which will help them to get on in the world.

If you keep a store, study labor-saving devices, the most economical and effective way of arranging your merchandise and taking care of it, the quickest and least expensive method of transporting freight, etc. Nothing is too trivial to be carefully looked after.

The same is true of every other business. Success lies in recognizing and supplying the world's needs, keeping pace with the world's thought, taking advantage of the world's devices, allowing no loopholes of extravagance or waste, and in the ability to stand firmly and confidently while a business is being established.—Success.

CULTIVATE PRESENCE OF MIND.

Very few children in the average family are ever taught steadiness of nerve, presence of mind in time of danger, or ever have practice in what to do if anything happens. In some households there are sets of rules what to do in emergencies pasted in some scrap-book; but this is never at hand when wanted, and even if it were, the moral and physical condition of the members of the family absolutely precludes any understanding of the usually vague and too technical instruction contained therein. Every child should be taught what to do in case of fire. If necessary, all of the motions should be gone through with. It should be told what is best to do first, the reason for doing it, and the results of cool and careful action as compared with the always disastrous consequences of haste, confusion, and terror.

It is a curious fact that children who have received any reasonable amount of training in this direction are much cooler and more composed than adults. Whether it is that the young mind unfamiliar with the actual terrors of the situation is left more free to act, or whether the interested curiosity of the child is stronger than its fears, might furnish ground for debate; certain it is that young persons and children, although unspeakably distracted and unmanageable without training, are of much more value as assistants in times of the greatest peril than many who are of mature years. Danger seems to be something that one must become educated into; naturally one fears nothing, probably because the consequences have never been fully realized. It would be but a small task to train children to habits of steadiness and self-control in times of danger, and it might be a means of saving many lives and much valuable property.—New York Ledger.

BEECHER'S ADVICE TO HIS SON.

From a letter once written to his son by the famous preacher, we take the following wise hints, which are good for all young men—and young women, too:

"You must not get into debt. Avoid debt as you would the devil. Make it a fundamental rule:—Cash or nothing.

"Make but few promises. Religiously observe the smallest promise. A man who means to keep his promises can't afford to make many.

"Be scrupulously careful in all statements. Aim at accuracy and perfect frankness, no guess work—either nothing or exact truth.

"When working for others, sink yourself out of sight; seek their interest. Make yourself necessary to those who employ you by industry, fidelity, and scrupulous integrity. Selfishness is fatal.

"Hold yourself responsible for a higher standard than anybody else expects of you. Demand more of yourself than anybody expects of you. Keep your own standard high. Never excuse yourself to yourself. Never pity yourself. Be a hard master to yourself, but lenient to everybody else.

"Concentrate your force on your own business; do not turn off. Be constant, steadfast, persevering.

"The art of making one's fortune is to spend nothing; in this country any intelligent and industrious young man may become rich if he stops all leaks and is not in a hurry. Do not make haste; be patient.

"Do not speculate or gamble. Steady, patient industry is both the surest and the safest way. Greediness and haste are two devils that destroy thousands every year."—Success.

EVEN IN AFFLICTION.

A girl, belonging to a church society, went to call upon a cripple, taking some sweet Spring flowers to the invalid. After a little conversation the visitor asked:

"Don't you get tired of being tied to that bed day and night, Miss Grey, week after week?"

"Yes, I think I do sometimes; that is, I grow bodily tired," was the response. "But I try not to think of that. I only want to remember that God is good and merciful. In his love he spared me, even though I am a cripple, to live that I might learn to know him here. You see, before I was hurt, I never thought about him as being a real Friend and Helper. But since I have been compelled to lie here quiet and helpless, I can even find joy and thankfulness in my affliction; I live to serve him, and that crowds almost every other thought out."

And the one who had come to minister went away feeling that she had received more than she had given during that brief visit. "Joy and thankfulness in affliction." Truly, only those who know him for the loving Savior that he is, can say this.—Young People's Weekly.

ON TIME.

A business man advertised for a boy. The place was a good one, and a large number of boys applied. Out of this number two were selected, whose references were good and whose appearances and manners were alike favorable. He hesitated between the two, and, after a private conversation between each one, told them to call the next morning at 9 o'clock, when the decision would be made.

The gentleman sat in his office at 9 o'clock. Promptly as the great clock outside sounded the hour one of the boys appeared. He was engaged at once. Five minutes later the second boy came. "Just five minutes too late," said the gentleman. "I made this appointment with you that I might see how much value you placed upon promptness. The boy who is on time is the boy for me."

Be prompt, boys. Time is money. Yes, your time is money. Do not fancy that your time is of little value, and so you can use it as you please. Take care of the minutes, and the hours will take care of themselves.—Advance.

God has given only two perfect things to this lost world. One of them is the Incarnate Word, which is the Lord Jesus Christ; the other is the Written Word, which is the Holy Scripture. There is a divine element and a human element in both.—James H. Brookes.

Hygiene.

THE HYGIENE OF SUNSHINE.

Tubercular bacilli can find no better soil than the lung tissue of those who dwell in the shade. This disease is becoming prevalent because we are living an unnatural life. It is unnatural because it is shut away from nature. It is confined within walls of man's building, and devoted largely to pursuits which do not lead to communion with nature. Many people seek false remedies to restore their health, thinking that some decoction will prove a miraculous change, but it is of no avail.

Some have suggested laws for the control of disease by preventing infection, but the laws of this kind come no nearer preventing disease than laws against murder prevent killing. Both are good, but it is often necessary to practice self-defense, notwithstanding the law. Is there a mode of defense against disease? Is there no way to prevent infection but by laws on the statute books; or when infection has taken place to become disinfected? The natural way is to give every ray of sunlight abundant opportunity to reach these intruding germs, and they will become the sickly ones, while their victims grow strong and ruddy. Dark rooms are unfit to live in. It is said that patients on the sunny side of hospitals recover more quickly than their shaded companions.

In many houses the window space should be enlarged, while in others the window draperies should be removed and burned up as the only effectual way of destroying germs harboring in them. A room into which the sun seldom shines is to be shunned as the "hold of every unclean and hateful germ." It is time for every lover of health to arise in strength, and refuse to be longer fettered by chains of darkness and consequently disease. Open the doors and windows; go forth under the open sky, where nature may smile upon you, and microbes, together with their evil effects, will disappear as dew before the morning sun.—Selected.

APPLEWHITE—Mrs. PRUDANCE APPLEWHITE was born June 16, 1810; married to Thomas Applewhite, Jan. 19, 1836; departed this life Oct. 9, 1898.

On the beautiful Sabbath morning of Oct. 9, when the sun was spreading its golden rays over the earth, and the birds were hymning the praise of God, the spirit of "Aunt Prudance," as she was so familiarly called, took its flight to the realms of bliss, where she spent her first Sabbath in heaven. It seems so sad to us; yet, through our tears we can look up and say: "No more does grandmother suffer here, but has donned the pure robe of immortality, and is now waiting and watching at the golden gates for her loved ones, to welcome them to that city."

The golden gates were open,
A gentle voice said, "Come,"
And with farewells unspoken
She calmly entered home.

Those eyes that have been blinded with tears; the heart that has been wrung; the frail, bent, wasted form that has so patiently endured the pains and toils of life, is now at rest. All tears have been wiped away; all heartaches are done away with. There are no more lonely hours, no more sleepless nights, no more sorrow or death. Oh, heaven! beautiful heaven! —heaven where grandmother has gone; where she will again meet her sainted companion. As they meet on the shining shore with old friends, now saints in glory, I imagine the Savior will wave his hand over them, saying, "These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." There they gaze on the temple, on the palaces, on each other. They weave their joy into garlands; they spring it into triumphel arches; then all the loved ones gather around the throne of God. Father, mother, brother, sister, sons, daughters, relatives and friends join in the praise with the saints in glory.

Grandmother's life was so beautiful. She was always so sweet and gentle in all her ways, and always spoke in the softest tones. Never once have I heard her speak evil of anyone, but never forgetting to do deeds of kindness to those around her, and speaking words of cheer wherever it was needed. Her Bible was her constant companion. Though its leaves are yellow with age, yet it never seemed old to her. Oh, her life, so mild, so pure, so upright! In her latter days she suffered a great deal, but through it all she kept close to Jesus, without a murmur of complaint, and now her reward is a home where the gates are pearl, streets are gold, and temples are always open, and hills that quake with perpetual songs; a city where the voice of hallelujah unto God is heard forever.

To her bereaved children we would say: Be faithful in the race you are running; then by and by the Savior will say: "Thou hast been faithful through all these years. The mansion is ready; come home. There you can meet mother again." Her granddaughter,

HUFFMAN—Mrs. ABI ELIZABETH HUFFMAN, daughter of Levi and Martha Felder, of Pike county, Miss., was born May 31, 1849, and died at her home, seven miles east of Summit, Miss., Aug. 17, 1898.

Sister Huffman professed conversion in childhood and joined the Methodist Church, in which she lived and died a consistent member. She was married to Geo. W. Huffman, Jan. 10, 1867. To this union were born six children—five living, one dying in infancy. Her Christian virtues were most strongly exemplified in her faithfulness and devotion as a wife and mother. For nine or ten years Bro. Huffman has been an invalid; for seven years was confined to his bed. Through all these years she was true, patient, self-sacrificing, devoting herself entirely to his comfort and happiness. Such faithfulness can not be without its reward.

Her last illness was severe and brief; her sudden death a shock to the community. I visited her several times, but did not find her at any time in a condition to converse; hence we were not able to get anything from her as to her last wishes or desires, but in answer to questions she gave the fullest assurance that she was conscious of her condition. Sister Hoover, her friend, asked her if she felt the abiding presence of the Savior, to which she, amid the groans of inexpressible suffering, answered, "Yes, yes, yes." May the God of all grace comfort the loved ones bereft!

V. V. BOONE, P. C.

GRAHAM—Mrs. EVELYN ANDERSON GRAHAM was born in Kemper county, Miss., Dec. 15, 1842. Her maiden name was Cannon. She was married to Mr. Levi Graham, Sept. 8, 1859. She was left a widow June 11, 1864; joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1869; died at her brother's home in Bentonia, Miss., Aug. 11, 1898.

Sister Graham lived a consistent member of the church, and was a devout Christian, full of good works and kind words. With strong faith in God she went about her Master's work. She was quite ill for some time before her death; however, she did not murmur nor complain, feeling assured, no doubt, that God doeth all things well. No doubt she knew that death would soon come, but she expressed herself as fearing no danger, telling her loved ones just before the moment came that she was not afraid, for God was with her. "Christians die well."

Sister Graham leaves one daughter and a large family connection, with a host of friends, to mourn her loss. We tender our deepest sympathy to her relatives, and especially to the bereaved daughter, whom she loved so much, and on whom all her earthly love and care were centered. We grieve, yet we are comforted, expecting one day to meet her where parting will be no more.

Her pastor, C. C. EVANS.
Satartia, Miss.

WHITED—SAMUEL WHITED, of Girard and Colony circuit, died Oct. 16, 1898. He was born in Blairsville, Penn., Oct. 25, 1822; married Miss Isabel Jane Hall, Feb. 22, 1849. Five children blessed the union; two died in infancy; two sons and one daughter remain to cherish his precious memory. He was "born of the Spirit" in 1875 under the ministry of Rev. H. O. White, presiding elder of Opelousas district. Seventeen years he led the Sabbath-school of Bowman Chapel. All the children loved him. He blessed them with companionship. One of the teachers said, "He has become as one of these little ones." A man of faith, glowing with zeal for the elevation of the human race. As his pastor, I found him indispensable.

The following memorial was read at the fourth Quarterly Conference, Girard and Colony circuit; Rev. B. F. White, P. E., in the chair:

Whereas, Samuel Whited, one of the members of this body, died Oct. 16, 1898; therefore, be it

Resolved, We, the members, would give, if possible, some expression of our appreciation of this true, faithful servant of the church. Twenty-three years ago he was converted and joined the church. That he was esteemed worthy of trust by his brethren who knew him need not be stated in words. The many offices he held prove his integrity. For many years elected delegate to our Annual Conference, district steward, trustee, steward, Sunday-school superintendent, and Epworth League president. We sorrow that he is no more among us; yet we thank God for his example, and take courage in the hope that we will, if faithful, recover our losses in glory.

Resolved, That we extend our sympathy to relatives and friends, and that a copy of this be sent to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE

SUMMER—NANNIE S SUMMER, the subject of this sketch, was born March 13, 1888, and died Oct. 6, 1898.

Little Neonie was the baby daughter of Bro. and Sister W. W. Summer, of Trenton, Miss. She was the idol of the family; a bright Sunday-school scholar and an agreeable playmate. She often expressed herself as loving everybody. Her agonies in her last illness were great, but we thank God that her end was peace.

Rest, little one, from thy toils;
No troubles now molest;
The life that once made glad thy home
Has left the mortal breast.

Weep not, loved ones;
Remember Christ has said
He hath power to give life
To living and to dead.

Trenton, Miss.

CAMPBELL—Died in Flora, Miss., in the early morning of Friday, Nov. 4, 1898, little TOMMIE CAMPBELL, aged five years, son of Mr. and Mrs C. C. Campbell. He had been sick just three weeks of typhoid fever. He had been a patient little sufferer, and his condition had not been considered serious till two days before he died. He was named for his uncle, a twin brother of Dr. Julius Crisler, who died a few years ago, and was laid to rest near by his side. The father and mother are sad over the first broken link in their family. He had been well and carefully trained; was a member of the Sunday-school, and was a nice, good boy. May the good Lord bless and comfort all of the bereaved ones left behind!

Machine Offer.
New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.
A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one guage, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.
THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.
NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, can trolling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.
IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.
SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.
THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great length; finely polished.
SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.
LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.
PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The University of North Carolina will undertake the education of one student from Porto Rico and one from Cuba.

A memorial service in honor of the late Prince Otto von Bismarck was held in this city on Sunday. The meeting was marked by scholarship and eloquence.

The storm which raged all over the country on Saturday and Sunday proved particularly severe in the Eastern and Middle States. Telegraph and telephone wires were prostrated everywhere.

Preparations are being pushed forward rapidly by the Spanish Government for the transportation of troops back to Spain. The present arrangements provide for the shipment of nearly 50,000 men before Dec. 25.

General Wood seems to be making things hum in Santiago. Not content with prohibiting bull fights and cock fights under heavy penalties, he has authorized the establishment of a school for the higher education of women.

The Currency Commission in India has nearly concluded hearing evidence for and against the gold standard. A small majority will report in favor of gold, and the minority will recommend reopening the mines to free silver coinage.

Secretary Alger's report has been submitted to the President. It is a voluminous document, but makes few new or valuable contributions to the history of the Spanish war. It is made up chiefly of reprint reports of Miles, Merritt, Shafter, of the heads of the War Department Bureaus and of official orders and correspondence, interspersed here and there with a few lines of original matter.

The President's message has been received by Congress. The Chief Executive reviews the events of the past year, pointing out the causes leading up to the war with Spain, and gives a brief history of the war, from Dewey's victory to surrender of General Toral at Santiago de Cuba. He makes no recommendations as to the future government of Porto Rico and the Philippines. He says of Cuba that it will remain under military rule until able to govern itself.

Advices from the Philippine Islands say the insurgents there have decided not to recognize the cession of the islands to the United States and that they will resist to the last. It is also stated that the United States will require 70,000 troops to put down the rebellion, and it is alleged that the insurgents hold 10,000 Spanish prisoners, whom they will force to serve against the Americans. The Philippine insurgents demand 7,000,000 pesetas for the release of the forty friars, imprisoned since the commencement of the war.

Among the drafts submitted by Spain to United States one article provides that the United States and Spain shall appoint an international commission of five experts, each country to name one of its citizens, one Briton and one Frenchman, with a German to be the president. This commission is to determine responsibility for the Maine disaster. If Spain is responsible, she is to send a warship to sainte the American flag at New York. If she is not, the United States is to pay all expenses of the commission. The Spaniards' idea is that, having yielded on the main principles, they will gain important advantages in the details.

The question has often been asked: "Will soldiers of the Spanish war be entitled to pensions under existing laws?" It seems that they will be. The report of the Secretary of the Interior, in whose department the Pension Bureau is embraced, shows that he is acting on that assumption. He announces that a separate division has been organized for the adjudication of claims growing out of the war with Spain. These soldiers will receive their pensions under the general laws for disabilities of a permanent character contracted while in the service. Less than 100 claims had been filed up to the close of the fiscal year, and none had been adjudicated.

When Congress adjourned, in July, the United States was in the midst of war with Spain. Admiral Sampson had won his splendid victory over Cervera's fleet, General Shafter was still investing Santiago, and General Miles was preparing for his campaign in Porto Rico. The National Legislature reassembled on Dec. 5 under entirely different conditions. Peace has been attained in all but the formal signing and ratification of the treaty, and the United States, instead of being merely the dominant power of the western continent, has at a single step taken her place among the first great powers of the world, and must be reckoned with in every international complication. Congress now finds itself confronted with the necessity of legislating for this new condition of affairs.

It is not without significance that the French Government, in reorganizing the salaries and allowances of its various ambassadors and envoys, has diminished the allowances of its ambassador at Madrid, while it has increased those of its ambassador at Washington.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Booneville, Miss., EDITOR.

Epworth Leaguer, keep your record clean.

Character counts. See that you lay well the foundation.

Build on Christ. He is the only sure foundation.

Examine yourselves, and see if you are building according to the divine plan.

The apostle tells us that Christ left us an example that we might follow in his footsteps. In the language of the hymn let us say, "Where he leads me I will follow;" "I'll go with him all the way."

Dr. DuBose has been appointed as a member of a special committee on program, etc., for the fourth International Conference of Epworth Leagues, to be held in Indianapolis next Summer.

The North Mississippi Annual Conference is in session at Aberdeen, Miss., these notes being written at the seat of Conference. The readers of this column will excuse scarcity of notes this week, as the editor is statistical secretary of the Conference, and at time of writing has his hands full of work.

We publish this week a report from the corresponding secretary and treasurer of the Mississippi State Conference, and would respectfully call attention of the delinquent Leagues to the exhortation found at close of the report:

The Executive Committee of our State League is to meet on Dec. 1, and fix the time for our next State League Conference. I feel sure the time will be fixed for early next Spring, and, in order to meet this pledge of $1,200, the Leagues of our State will have to raise $900 between now and that time.

I trust that every Leaguer who reads the above report will resolve to "lend a hand" in redeeming this pledge.

A Preacher's Discovery.

Samples Mailed Free.

We have given away 100,000 trial packages of Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure to persons afflicted with Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, Deafness, etc., and now offer another 50,000 packages absolutely free. If the trial package does not convince you of its curative properties, you will have been at no expense; if it proves beneficial, you will gladly order a month's treatment at $1.00. We are willing to take all the risk, knowing what the medicine will do.

This remedy was discovered by Rev. J. W. Blosser, M. D., the well-known Minister of the Gospel and Catarrh Specialist. It is a harmless, pleasant, vegetable compound, inhaled by smoking in a pipe, which we furnish free. It cures the worst cases. If you wish the free package, write at once to Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 38 N. Broad St., Atlanta, Ga.

WOMAN'S WORK.

The following important statement, relative to the Cuban Boarding-school at Key West, from the senior Missionary Secretary, places a grave responsibility upon the women of our church. The conditions require prompt and united action. Will our women meet it in the fear of God?

MRS. R. K. HARGROVE.

Habana, Cuba, Nov. 25, 1898.

Mrs. R. K. Hargrove, Nashville, Tenn.—

DEAR MRS. HARGROVE: While in Tampa I had the pleasure of looking in upon Miss Bruce and her staff of workers. They are diligent, effective, and hopeful. With the return of some Cubans to their homes there may be a little unsettling of things, but others come to take their places. It is a time for seed-sowing—the harvest will come by and by.

Nearly a week in Key West gave opportunity to study conditions there. The greatest need is a better building, more centrally located. If a monthly allowance of $40 could be furnished, an excellent place might be secured at once. The landlord, Mr. Low, is willing to put the place in good repair, and keep it so. Several boarders could be accommodated in this home.

We found a deeply-settled conviction among the Americans that there should be a Protestant seminary for girls. Under Bishop Candler's leadership, this took expression in the form of a subscription, payable in six months, amounting to $1,000. A committee was appointed to canvass for more until $3,000 were secured.

This last sum will be placed at the disposal of your Board, to meet the $5,000 you intend raising. The residents of Key West will, in this way, provide a sum sufficient for purchasing a site, so that the sum you invest may all go toward the erection of a building. The generous sympathy and enthusiastic support was the more a surprise since both the sisters and daughters of many of these gentlemen were educated in the Roman Catholic convent in Key West, and were the recipients of much kindness. But the Key Westers are of old English stock, from the Bahama Islands, and remain true to their Protestant traditions.

There is no good reason why the school should not be largely self-supporting. One thing is certain: the $5,000 furnished by your society will secure $3,000 more, if you can collect it promptly. Delay may be fatal. Now is the time to strike. God help you. Dr. Fulwood loves your work. He is a wise counselor. The people at Key West and in Tampa have unbounded confidence in him. His presence and timely words helped the cause.

I rejoice with you in the outlook. Pray for me as I go further into the interior of Cuba. We have a great work before us.

Yours in the bonds of the gospel.

Blood Cure Free.

HAVE YOU Foul and Impure Blood, evidence of which you will see in Scrofula, Pimples, Sores on Face, Ulcers, Little Sores in Throat, Tongue or Lip, Eczema, White Swelling, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Itching Humors, Boils, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, and Cancer? If this is your trouble, then B. B. B. will cure you. This is what Botanic Blood Balm is made for. B. B. B. is not a "cure-all." It cures only blood diseases.

Botanic Blood Balm is not a new remedy to most of our readers, but no doubt many suffer from some form of Blood Taint, who have never tried the marvelous healing powers of three B's, most likely because they have doctored with other milder Blood Remedies until they are discouraged. For this reason Blood Balm Co. sends free to all readers of our paper a trial bottle of Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.), so that they may know that B. B. B. is something different from the inert, watery, so-called Blood purifiers, which sufferers have tried, and became discouraged of ever being cured.

B. B. B. cures because it literally drives the poison or Humor (which produces blood diseases) out of the blood, bones and body, leaving the flesh as pure as a new-born babe's, and leaves no bad after effects. It is this kind of a cure that counts.

The following testimonials prove all we say to be true, and the genuineness of the cures are vouched for by the Atlanta Constitution and Journal.

SCROFULOUS HUMOR ON THE NECK AND FACE.

George Leonard, of Atlanta, writes under date of October 2, 1898: "Blood Balm Co.—I had SCROFULOUS HUMOR ON MY FACE AND NECK for the past twelve years. My face would at times raise white blotches and then peel off; also matter and water would run out and discharge, and this again would cause another sore. At times my face was raw and red as a piece of meat. From year to year I tried every remedy that came along, but all to no purpose. The disease got worse instead of better. The sores looked bad and made me feel bad. At last I hit on B. B. B., as it was held out as a more powerful blood remedy than any other. The first bottle of B. B. B. drove the humor out. If I was bad before, I was now ten times worse; but it was the first medicine that had any effect whatever. Nothing could start the humor or poisoned blood before. I reasoned to myself that, if the humor kept on coming out, I would yet get well. So it has proved. I took six bottles of Botanic Blood Balm. My face is now quite smooth. Numbers of neighbors have taken B. B. B. on seeing the effects of it in my case; and I am happy to say they all speak of B. B. B. in the highest terms."

TERRIBLE DEADLY CANCER AND ULCER CURED.

Cancer is the worst form of Bad Blood. Cancer can only be cured by a powerful Blood Remedy like B. B. B. The following are only one of 26 recent testimonials of cures of Cancer by B. B. B.:

Mrs. E. Story, of Fredonia, Ala., writes under date of Oct. 15, 1898: "Blood Balm Co.—About twenty years ago I was cured of a bad eating ulcer by taking B. B. B. Three large ulcers broke out on my collar bone. I cured these up with B. B. B. Lately an eating cancer broke out in my head and ears, and cut all the small bones out of my mouth, and I could scarcely eat and talk. I could eat a little strained soup, that was all. I tried nine doctors, but none could cure me, my case was pronounced hopeless, so I tried B. B. B. again, and was cured once more. I am now 65 years old, and am able to walk a mile any time; am strong and healthy. I use a bottle of B. B. B. sometimes, not often; don't need it. The disease made me most deaf. B. B. B. helped my hearing.
"Respectfully, MRS. E. STORY."

are due to poor, weak, poisoned blood. They should have prompt treatment, or otherwise they very frequently lead on to cancer.

Mrs. S. M. Wilson, Round Mountain, Tex., writes: "A lady friend of mine has for several years been troubled with lumps and pimples on her face and neck, for which she used various cosmetics in order to remove them; but these local applications were only temporary and left her skin in worse condition. I recommended an internal preparation, known as Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.), which I have been using; she used three bottles and all pimples have disappeared, her skin is soft and smooth, and her general health much improved. She expresses herself much gratified, and can recommend it to all who are thus affected."

TYPHOID FEVER AND CATARRH CURED.

Typhoid or any other fever leaves the blood in a terrible weakened condition, hence the patient is likely to be attacked with Catarrh. Many people think Catarrh is a local disease, but in reality is a deep seated Blood Disease, and only a strong Blood Remedy like B. B. B. permanently cures Catarrh.

"Fredonia, Ala., Sept. 28, 1898

"Blood Balm Co.—I was sick with something like typhoid fever for a whole year. I could scarcely eat or sleep any. First to last, I used seven prominent physicians from Georgia and Alabama. I could not see that I was scarcely any better, and I was getting very much out of heart. My aunt prevailed on me to take B. B. B. I got better rapidly after taking your celebrated medicine. Before taking B. B. B. I suffered very much with catarrh of the head. Since taking B. B. I have never had another attack. I think truly it is a great medicine. I have a brother and father with catarrh, and they are using B. B. B. I am now a strong and hearty girl, and feel glad that I took your medicine. Yours truly, MISS E. V. ADAMS."

SEND FOR FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

The above testimonials prove enough for any sufferer from Blood Humors that Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.), or three B's, cures terrible Blood diseases, and that it is worth while to write for a sample bottle. The medicine is for sale by druggists everywhere at $1 per large bottle, or six large bottles for $5, but trial bottles can only be obtained of Blood Balm Co. Write to-day for yourself or friends. Enclose a couple of stamps to pay postage. Address plainly, BLOOD BALM CO., 63 Mitchell St., Atlanta, Georgia, and sample bottle of B. B. B. and valuable pamphlet on Blood and Skin Diseases will be sent you by return mail.

Smith's Dictionary

—OF THE—

BIBLE,

Comprising Its Antiquities, Biography, Geography, and NATURAL HISTORY.

EDITED BY WM. SMITH, LL. D.,
Classical Examiner of the University of London.

This great work prepared under the direction and superintendence of Dr. Smith himself contains every name in the Bible and Apocrypha of which anything can be said; gives an account of each of the books of the Bible; explains the civil and religious institutions, the manners and customs, while many of the longer articles, being the results of the most finished scholarship, are complete treatises in themselves; embraces the results of the most successful and approved biblical labors and researches, constituting an indispensable aid to ministers, teachers, families, Sunday-school superintendents, and Bible readers generally.

The simple explanations of this work, unlike the expositions of a commentary, admit of no denominational or sectarian coloring and it is therefore equally valuable to Bible readers of every diversity of belief.

This is, undoubtedly, the best work of its kind in the English language, and has no rival in importance for the elucidation of the scenes and facts of Scripture.

The work contains 1024 large octavo pages, over 150 illustrations and maps engraved especially for this work and is handsomely and strongly bound in cloth. Publishers' price, $4.50.

To any person who will pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: To December, '99, we will sell this magnificent book postpaid for $2. Send in your order at once, as this offer may soon be withdrawn. Address

THE SECRET OF A HAPPY DAY.

BY FRANCES RIDLEY HAVERGAL.

Just to leave in His dear hand
Little things,
All we can not understand,
All that stings;
Just to let Him take the care——
Sorely pressing,
Finding all we let Him bear
Changed to blessing;
This is all; and yet the way
Marked by Him who loves the best
Secret of a happy day,

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

SUNDAY.

A cold and cheerless day came with the dawn. A slight snow had fallen during the night, but the weather did not keep the people away from the services.

At 9:30 a throng had assembled in the Methodist Church, and a love-feast service was promptly opened. Preachers told of perils, distresses, successes and sorrows, but testified to the grace of God—sufficient in it all. The waves of spiritual fervor rolled high. "It was good to be there."

At 11 o'clock Bishop Joseph S. Key preached a strong scriptural and spiritual sermon on "The Witness of the Spirit," after which the solemn service of the ordination of deacons was entered into.

At 3 o'clock Dr. W. T. Bolling preached to preachers on the call and service of the ministry, after which Jno. R. Conniss and J. H. Rodgers were elected elders.

At 7 P. M. Dr. Hammond preached a strong sermon on "Transfiguration of Christ."

This scribe attended services at the Methodist Church. There were good reports of the brethren at the other churches.

FIFTH DAY— FORENOON SESSION.

Conference convened at 9 A. M. with devotional services by Rev. T. W. Lewis. By appointment of Bishop Key, Rev. T. W. Dye was in the chair.

Report of Committee on Books and Periodicals was presented. Report commended all the publications of our Publishing House, and the editorial and mechanical work of Dr. Buck in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Drs. W. T. J. Sullivan, T. C. Wier and J. D Cameron were continued on the Publishing Committee of NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Report of Committee on Conference Relations was received and adopted. Report added the names of Revs. A. P. Sage, C. C. Grisham and A. P. Leech to the list of superannuates, and the names of Revs. B. S. Rayner and W. J. O'Bryant to that of supernumeraries.

Committees on Sabbath Observance and Spiritual Interest reported. E. C. Sullivan and J. H. Holder, having been properly recommended, and having passed in examination, were received on trial.

The amendment to the report of the Board of Education, which amendment provided that assessment for education be equally divided between Millsaps and Grenada Colleges, was carried, and report of Board passed as amended.

G. W. Stickling, having certified his agreement with us in doctrine, and having taken the elder's vows of our church, was received in elder's orders from the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

Report of Sunday-school Board was read by G. J. Leftwich, adopted, and a resolution was passed asking the secretary to furnish a copy of same to NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for publication.

Protest of opponents of the special report of Board of Education, referring to Publishing House claim, was presented and ordered to record.

Dr. J. W. Boswell, A. H. George and S. M. Thames were appointed to answer the above protest, and presented their answer to same, which went to record.

Joint Board of Finance reported. Church Extension Board reported.

Resolution providing that Rev. J. S. Oakley, secretary of Conference, be appointed to edit and publish the Minutes, was presented and adopted.

On statement of Rev. H. C. Morehead that Bro. C. C. Grisham, just superannuated, would be left without an appropriation from the Joint Board for the next year, a voluntary collection was presented him amounting to $55.80.

Visiting committees were announced as follows: Millsaps College, J. S. Oakley, J. A. Bowen, R. A. Burroughs; Grenada College, H. T. Gaines, J. C. Mimms, and R. A. Meek.

Committee on Temperance reported. After earnest speech from A. H. George, report was adopted.

Resolution expressing the sense of the Conference against the use of tobacco was adopted.

Bible cause reported, and an assessment of $1 200 levied on the Conference for this worthy cause.

Conference adjourned with benediction by Rev. R. A Burroughs.

FIFTH DAY—AFTERNOON SESSION.

Conference opened at 3 P. M., with Bishop Key in the chair. Devotional service was conducted by G. W. Gordon. Minutes were read and approved.

Bishop completed call of charges, and the Corinth, Holly Springs and Greenville districts reported, and preachers had their characters passed.

R. I. Allen asked for location, and it was granted.

Board of Missions reported, in which report Dr. S. A. Steel was recommended to the appointment of Conference Missionary Secretary.

Committee on Conference Records reported.

Statistic report shows that we have 117 local preachers, 45,780 members, 1,195 adults baptized, 359 infants baptized, 72 Epworth Leagues, with 2,612 members; 470 Sunday-schools, with 2 511 teachers and 22,455 scholars. Shows further that we have paid Bishops, $1,235; Conference claimants, $2,765; foreign missions, $7,613.05; domestic missions, $2,359.52; church extension, $2,055.01; education, $1,409.08; W. F. M. Society, $3,710.48; H. M. Society, $2,407.42; American Bible Society, $669.06; total from all sources, $153,795.48.

Next Conference will convene in the Delta city of Greenwood.

Conference adjourned to meet at 7 P. M, with benediction by Dr. J. D. Cameron.

FIFTH DAY— EVENING SESSION.

Committee on Memoirs reported, and loving tributes were read and spoken of Revs. H. R. Tucker, J. B. Harris, and S. B. Carson—the members of the Conference who had died.

Resolutions of thanks to churches, railroads, pastor and the good people of Aberdeen were offered and passed by rising vote, after which Bishop Key announced the following

OUTWARD BOUND.

BY WALTER R. LAMBUTH.

The creative genius and business enterprise of the American people challenge the admiration of the world. In 1853 Henry B. Plant, then in the express business in New York City, undertook to bring his invalid wife to Florida for her health. The trip from Jacksonville to St. Augustine had to be made in a dug-out. Losing their way, they were compelled to spend the night in the swamp. Recognizing at once the difficulties and possibilities of the then almost unknown State of Florida, except as connected with alligators, Spanish occupation, and Seminole Indians, this man of invincible faith and indomitable will set to work to make a highway where there was none, and to open an artery of trade with the West Indies and Central America. The Plant System has been the result—"thirteen railway lines, extending several thousand miles; nine steamboat and steamship lines from Nova Scotia to Jamaica, and six large hotels," besides wharves, docks, repair shops, orange groves and farms, in all employing over 12,000 workmen, and, including children, supporting an aggregate of 60,000 souls.

The Tampa Bay Hotel is itself one of the wonders of the Western world—built in Moorish style, with its miles of corridors and porches, its hundreds of columns, fenestrated windows and minarets. When it bursts out with its thousands of electric lights, or seems to float in the moonlight upon the river bank, the tourist might easily think himself in front of the old Alhambra, or amid the gardens and palaces of Constantinople. While we can neither commend nor condone that luxury which is built upon extravagance, and which must inevitably enervate, yet we gratefully acknowledge the auxiliary forces of a civilization which makes it possible to carry the gospel with dispatch and economy into the regions beyond. If it were not for such men, we might still be treading the swamps and forging the rivers of undeveloped territory within the bounds of our own country. As it is within a few days after the cessation of hostilities and before the evacuation of Cuba, we are able to move forward to the religious occupation of the island.

At 8 P. M. Monday night, Nov. 15, Bishop and Mrs. Candler, Dr. Fulwood and I boarded the train for Port Tampa, ten miles down the bay. Here we found another hotel, not so magnificent as the one referred to, but unique in that it is built on piles over the sea, and yet has every equipment for the entertainment of passengers. It was along its front and upon these wharves and docks that I had the pleasure in July of distributing tracts and Testaments to our soldiers who were embarking for Porto Rico. Not one refused, and many showed the kindest appreciation. One young fellow spoke of his mother in far-off Michigan, and heartily wished he had listened more earnestly to her patient admonitions.

At 9:30 our steamer, the "Mascotte," cast off, and we floated out on the dark tide unrelieved save by the reflection of the disappearing lights or the phosphorescent wake behind us. On deck all was confusion—a medley of trunks, bird cages, bundles of clothing, and lunch baskets, in dangerous proximity to hungry-looking dogs. In the social hall on one sofa was a young soldier suffering from acute rheumatism, on another two West India negro women—black as coal—and in a corner the wife of a Cuban general. Bishop and Mrs. Candler were fortunate in getting a state-room. Dr. Fulwood sought refuge on a sofa in the after-saloon, and I secured a cot among some soldiers in the dining-saloon. Before turning in for the night I took a long look at the silent stars and sent messages to the loved ones in the dear old Tennessee home. He who can direct the sweet influences of the Pleiades or gird the bands of Orion can watch over those whom we place in his charge and keep, for he neither slumbers nor sleeps.

The grey dawn fell upon the forms of full twenty men stretched about me. The nearest was a negro with a frame for a Hercules in ebony, the next a Cuban merchant, the third an artilleryman from Wisconsin. One bowl for the crowd, but fortunately the steward served a dozen towels. A line was formed beginning with the man next the wash bowl. I was third. When my turn came a big double-fisted soldier pushed in ahead and seized the bowl. Before a word could be said a powerful hand grasped his shoulder and whirled him round. "Fall back into your place and respect the rights of a gentleman." I looked up and recognized the face of a lieutenant to whom a little kindness had been shown a few minutes before, thanked him, and proceeded without further interruption. The lieutenant, in full uniform, had slept in the passway between cotton sheets, as he was a modest man and the place a public one. The consequence was an appearance of his having been in a cotton gin, much to the amusement of his companions. My clothes brush had helped make him presentable again, and the favor had won a friend.

It was not long before we discovered that our fellow-passengers formed some interesting groups. At the breakfast table next to ours sat General Green and his staff—an engineering corps going in advance of General Fitzhugh Lee's division. In this corps was Lieutenant Lee, the General's son, a slender young man of twenty-five, perhaps, with an active step and an intelligent face. Another member was Col. Young, son of Brigham Young, of Salt Lake City. The Colonel looked to be fifty years of age, had grey eyes, light brown hair, a Roman nose, a strong, determined face, square shoulders, and stout, well-set limbs. There was a serious, determined look about his face, and force of character in his stride. His subordinates spoke of him as a man of ability, justice, and kindness. He spent the day in pouring over a typewritten letter-book with photograph illustrations of harbors and fortifications upon the Cuban coast. One thing was noticeable—wine was not used at meals by any of these officers; a worthy example to set the rank and file who unfortunately exhibited an inordinate thirst for strong drink long before breakfast was served. In marked contrast to Col. Young was the Mormon chaplain of the regiment to which some of these soldiers belonged—a man heartily despised, and one who had no right, either civil or religious, to such an appointment.

A group of West India negroes interested me much. The women had small heads, an approach to an oval face, the lips were thinner, the nose not so broad, and the whole countenance more angular and expressive than is usual with the African. The type was a different one from that of the black belt of the Southern States. All wore circular ear-rings of gold, all spoke Spanish fluently, and several wore the mantilla thrown over the head and shoulders.

The Cuban deck passengers did not impress me favorably. But allowance must be made for a sensual life, added to long privation and migratory habits growing out of successive revolutions. These were refugees returning to their native land. The women looked careworn and poorly nourished, while the men were thin-visaged, and showed the effect of strong coffee and incessant smoking. The women, in addition to the care of their children, had canary birds, poodles, fruit, and bundles of clothing. A brace of game chickens owned by one of the men called forth unstinted admiration. As I studied these poor creatures and thought of the life they were going back to, I thanked God that the Gospel is the power of God unto the salvation of everyone that believeth, and that in the strength of divine grace we can plan and pray for the redemption of soul and body.

One passenger on the "Mascotte" had associated with her name and that of Cuba a story which reads like a romance. Evangelina Cisneros, the heroine of the Revolution, was also on her homeward voyage. The world has heard of her patriotism, her imprisonment by a merciless tyrant, and of her rescue by Karl Decker. In a later letter I may repeat her story. As I looked at her face there seemed a shadow of sadness which even her ill-health could not explain. It was a wistful, unsatisfied look. Her need, perhaps, is that of her fair island—peace, the peace which comes from resting in God.

THE BIBLE INSTITUTE.

In daily life, in all parts of the country, I find that there are hundreds of consecrated men and women with an intense love for souls who feel called of God to do his work. All they lack to do effective service for him is a systematic knowledge of the Bible.

The question asked me hundreds of times by young people convicted by a direct call of God for evangelistic work, or where they could be used for his glory, was, "Where can I obtain this knowledge?" This question started the Bible Institute in Chicago as a training-school for home and foreign missions, ten years ago.

I have become convinced the way to reach the masses is to reach them—that is, to go after them. I have not announced "Hold the Fort" in my meetings for years. The time for holding the fort is past, and now we must go out of the fort and fight hand to hand with the power of evil. The Bible Institute at Chicago aims to equip workers who can fight this way—hand to hand. The school is open the year round, and as the course is in a circle of two years, students may enter any time. Between one and two hundred of those who have passed through the door of the institute are telling the story of the gospel in foreign lands, and more than seven hundred are engaged in home missions, and as evangelistic preachers, regular pastoral work and church visitors, to say nothing about those who have gone forth with the gospel message of songs.

The many missions in Chicago give unbounded field for personal work, and the lectures of the morning and study in the afternoon find practical demonstration in the missions and cottage prayer meetings of the evenings. Students are not only instructed in preaching the gospel, but in singing it as well. No one doubts the power of song, and many a recruit in the army of the redeemed has received a call in some message of song. Prof. D. B. Towner, the well-known gospel singer and writer, is superintendent of the musical course, with competent assistants. The institute is undenominational, or, better, interdenominational, and enrolls men and women as students. Separate dormitories are provided for both sexes. Representatives from all races have been enrolled as students the past year, and more than thirty denominations were represented among the students last year.

I shall be glad to hear personally from any who desire to know more of the work of the Institute at my Chicago address, 80 Institute Place.

HEART-BALM.

Tell me about the Master;
I am weary and worn to night.
The day lies behind me in shadow,
And only the evening is light!
Light with a radiant glory
That lingers about the west.
My poor heart is aweary, aweary,
And longs, like a child, for rest.

Tell me about the Master!
Of the hills he in loneliness trod,
When the tears and the blood of his anguish
Dropped down on Juden's sod.
For to me life's seventy mile-stones
But a sorrowful journey mark;
Rough lies the hill country before me,
The mountains behind me are dark.

Tell me about the Master!
Of the wrongs he freely forgave;
Of his love and tender compassion,
Of his love that was mighty to save;
For my heart is aweary, aweary,
Of the woes and temptations of life.
Of the error that stalks in the noonday,
Of falsehood and malice and strife.

Yet I know that, whatever of sorrow
Or pain or temptation befall,
The infinite Master has suffered,
And knoweth and pitieth all.
So tell me the sweet, old story,
That falls on each wound like a balm,
And my heart that was bruised and broken
Shall grow patient and strong and calm.

THE CAROLINE ISLANDS.

In the middle of the Pacific Ocean lie some tiny specks, several hundred in number, known as the Caroline Islands. Few indeed knew of the existence of such islands till after the wonderful developments of the Hispano-American War; but now, as one of them at least will become a naval station of our government (if the reports from Paris be true), the American people have suddenly become interested in this lonely group of islands.

The Carolino Islands are supposed to have been discovered by Alvadro de Saavedra, a Spaniard, in 1528. He deeming them worthless to the world, made little note of them, not even giving them a name; and it was in 1686 when another Spanish explorer visited them and named them Carolines, in honor of Charles II., King of Spain.

However, they did not possess the gold mines the Spaniards were at that time searching for, so they occupied an unimportant place in the Spanish view. Allured by the precious metal, they turned deafly away from this solitary land and emigrated westward.

In 1852 the American Board planted a mission on Ponape, one of the larger islands, and for fifty years labored untiringly to lead the simple Micronesian to Christ. When the first missionaries arrived there was no government for the islands at all, save that of their own fashion, and, in the words of one of the missionaries, the people seemed more like monkeys than human beings. Difficult indeed was the task before them, and it seemed for a time that they would fail in the attempt, but at last the faithful workers of Christ translated the Bible into the Micronesian tongue and began to teach the simple islanders. Their work prospered, and there alone on these mountainous islands of the sea the missionaries were rapidly building up a church for God when serious trouble occurred.

In 1885 the Germans took possession of the Marshall Islands and also raised their flag over the Carolines. Spain at once demanded its removal, claiming the islands by right of discovery. The matter was referred to Pope Leo XIII. for arbitration, and he decided in favor of Spain, so that power immediately established a government station at Ponape. Then the same old story that we all know by heart—Spanish oppression caused the natives to revolt. After serious skirmishes more troops were ordered from Manila, and in September, 1890, the Spanish transports in the harbor shelled the premises of the missionaries, leaving them a worthless heap of ruins. At the time there were but two women at Ponape, the scene of the trouble, and they were ordered by the officials to vacate the premises within twenty-four hours. An American ship, the "Alliance," lay in the harbor and carried the ladies away. Soon after their departure the buildings were totally destroyed. The ladies left the island, once a field of so much promise, and have never succeeded in gaining permission from Spain to renew their work. The natives, left totally to the mercies of their cruel masters, ceased to prosper, and therein one of the most fertile and promising parts of the Pacific where Christianity was once budding its fairest is the simple islander, pining yet in his ignorance for the return of those who brought him peace and happiness.

If I were to deal with the productiveness of the islands, I would have a pleasant task, for, like all tropical countries, they produce abundantly. The breadfruit can be plucked from every forest: bananas are produced abundantly, more than a dozen varieties being found. Copra, the dried kernels of the cocoanut, is one of their chief exports.

Strange, however, bird life is very scarce, only a few varieties being found, and only a few horses and still fewer cattle are found. The alligator can be seen in every swamp and snakes of enormous proportions can be found.

There can be seen all over the islands much beautiful and enchanting scenery and relics of a pre-historic race are visible. There are embankments and terraces and many quaint and curious lodges all over the islands, and roads built long, long ago, perhaps before the white man ever beheld the peaceful Pacific or gazed upon the verdant scenes of the Carolines.

MEN AND THE CHURCH.

Accepting the opinion expressed in the ADVOCATE, of Dec. 1, on this subject, is it not a singular fact that the church directed, controlled, and taught almost exclusively by men, should have failed to win and hold men? The Holy Ghost is surely in the world reproving men of sin and of judgment. Men who are seemingly engrossed in business or in pleasure must, and do at times, feel the need of something higher and better. To deny this is to deny that every man is a possible Christian. Why, then, does not the church win men? If the attitude of men toward the church is one of indifference rather than hostility, what is the cause of that indifference? On this point much might be said without controversy and without exhausting the subject. The following is offered for consideration: May not the cause of this indifference be simply a lack of admiration and respect for individual church members and for the church as an organization? Not a lack of reverence for God, nor of respect for the teachings of Christ, but lack of confidence in the sort of Christianity exhibited daily in the affairs of life. Perhaps the ideal Christian character, as commonly portrayed, does not inspire men to emulation. The virtues—meekness, humility, obedience—which are usually stressed and exemplified oftenest in the lives of women, do not appeal to men as desirable for themselves. It is just possible that the church would have more influence with men if more attention were given, in theory and practice, to the manly virtues—strength, courage, aggressiveness. The church which sees the laws of God defied on every side without protesting, in a practical and effectual way, presents a spectacle of weakness rather than strength. Self-respecting, worldly men, seeing the church pray one way and vote another, seeing Christian men profit by sharp methods in business, may reasonably infer that religion concerns and controls only a very small section of a man's life. Having reached this point, it is natural, and not unreasonable, to go a step farther, and conclude that it may be dispensed with altogether as something suited only to women and preachers.

If the church of Christ lacks drawing power, the fault lies in the hearts of its members; not in defective methods. All problems connected with the progress of the kingdom of our Lord would be solved by a deepening of the spiritual lives of Christians. A mighty baptism with the Holy Ghost, an enthusiastic devotion to our Lord Jesus Christ, would take away all fear of man, of loss, of political or social ostracism, and cause the church to stand before the world clothed with that divine power which alone can win and save men.

IN MEMORIAM.

George Washington Ferrer was born in the State of Georgia on the fifteenth day of March, 1850. His father was a minister in the Baptist Church, and his mother was a member of the Presbyterian Church. Thus his training by both father and mother made deep impressions upon him while yet a child, and at the early age of seven years he united with his mother's church.

After leaving home, and when about the age of twenty-five, he left the church of his early choice and united with the Methodists. He was licensed to preach in 1884, and the same year was admitted on trial in the Alabama Conference. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Keener at the Conference held in Greensboro in 1887, and at Mobile, the following year, was given a certificate of location signed by Bishop Hargrove. In 1891 he was readmitted into the Mississippi Conference, and at Natchez, in '92, was ordained elder by Bishop Granbery.

He served the following appointments in the Mississippi Conference: Whitting circuit, '92 and '93; Augusta, '94 and '95; Mt. Carmel, '96; Westville, '97, and Clarksburg, '98.

December 7, 1886, Bro. Ferrer was married to Miss Emma E. Johnson, of Melvin, Ala., and she bore with him the hardships and privations of an itinerant preacher.

During the Summer of 1897 he often complained of feeling badly, and in September had a hard spell of fever, from which he never fully recovered.

In June, '98, he began declining rapidly, and in July was forced to surrender his work to another. Friends and brethren advised him to go to Brown's Well, but here he found no relief, and went on to New Orleans for treatment, but he was informed that his case was beyond the reach of medical skill. After an absence of but few days he returned to his rented home in Pelahatchie, where everything that medical skill and kind and loving hands could do was done for him; but this could not restore his health. Friday and Saturday morning he seemed perfectly conscious, talking to his wife and friends about his future, repeating favorite and appropriate passages of Scripture, and assuring them that he felt no alarm at the approaching end.

It was my privilege to be with him more than once during his illness, and always found him submissive to the Lord's will. Saturday afternoon, Sept. 3, 1898, at 3:40 o'clock, surrounded by his wife, Bro. Linfield, and some of his friends, he sweetly "fell on sleep," and was gathered unto his people.

A good man, a good preacher, a faithful pastor has gone to his reward, while his wife and six small children are left to mourn their loss.

The funeral service, conducted by this writer, assisted by Bros. B. F. Lewis and W. L. Linfield, was held at the Methodist Church in the presence of a large concourse of friends. We laid his body to rest in the Pelahatchie Cemetery, Sunday morning, Sept. 4, 1898, but we shall meet him again. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

W. W. SIMMONS.

PRESIDING ELDERS.

Dr. Lafferty, in his notes on the recent session of the Virginia Conference, says: "In theory, our system to a bystander is military, verging on despotism; but public opinion, the character of the Bishops, and their devotion to the church, make it a paternal arrangement, administered in love. After all, it is in the power of an elder, who has the ear of the Bishop, to do any preacher irremediable harm. For that reason, as we heard Bishop McTyeire say, he made it a rule never to appoint a man an elder who was not on good terms with all the preachers."

This reminds me of a remark made to me by an ex-presiding elder when I was first appointed to that office, ten years ago. He said, "A very dangerous power is lodged in the hands of a presiding elder." I did not seriously regard the remark at the time, but I had not been in many cabinet meetings before I saw that it was true. Since then my convictions on that subject have been confirmed. No office in our church is more essential to our system or more liable to abuse. The power lodged with the presiding elder is necessary, and inseparable from the office, and when rightly used makes for good; but when it falls into improper hands, good men suffer, and the cause they represent is damaged. Presiding elders, therefore, should not only be on good terms with all the preachers; they should also be broad-minded, deeply pious, exemplary in word and deed, kind-hearted, sweet-spirited, gentle, patient, charitable, etc. A presiding elder who is harsh, autocratic, self-opinionated, prejudiced, or partial, is a manifest misfit. A long continuance in the office may develop these traits in men not otherwise given to them. There is such a thing as governing too much. A wise parent will leave a child as much as possible to govern himself, and not assume to dictate to him in every little thing. So, it seems to me, the right kind of a man in this office will refrain from every tendency that looks in the direction of officiousness in his administration. Pastors should feel free to exercise their own judgment in the management of their respective charges without the fear of being put under the ban. They are generally equal to the presiding elder in everything but official position, and sometimes his superior. To be overawed by a power in the hands of a superior officer, which the secrecy of the "cabinet" enables that officer to use with impunity to humiliate an innocent, good man, does not comport with the love of liberty in an American's heart, or with the spirit of liberty inbreathed by the gospel of Christ. It is more in accord with the genius of Romanism than of Protestantism, and should be eliminated, as far as possible, from our system.

As a pastor, it has always been my policy to keep in close touch with my presiding elder, and, as a rule, I have always felt safe in their hands. I have never gone to a Bishop with my case. If at any time I have felt a lack of perfect confidence in the friendship of my presiding elder, I have taken the matter to a higher authority than a Bishop—to Christ, the Great Head of the church, and have rested absolutely in his hands. And he has never disappointed my confidence. May he bless our Bishops, presiding elders and pastors with great grace and abundant peace!

HAS REV. ISAAC L. PEEBLES BEEN MISREPRESENTED?

In a communication to the ADVOCATE, of Nov. 3, in regard to the unjust manner in which Boards of Health and experts were being criticised, I had something to say about an article in the ADVOCATE, of Oct. 20, from Rev. Isaac L. Peebles, of Hattiesburg. I notice in your issue, of Nov. 24, Bro. Peebles charges me with having misrepresented him.

The part of my communication to which he seriously objects, and in which I alluded to the harsh manner in which he spoke of health officials and experts, was not given as a quotation from his article, but was what I thought to be a most liberal construction of the words used by him. I will now give the exact language used by him.

In speaking of the fever at Hattiesburg, he says: "It is true that two experts have declared it to be yellow fever, but what of that? Are they not liable to make mistakes as well as other people, and egregious ones, too? Certainly they are, even when they are honest and desirous to do the right thing. But as far as my knowledge and observation extend, experts, as a rule, are not men of the highest ability. They are far from it, and, therefore, they are quite liable to mistakes, and fatal ones at that. Not only are experts, as a rule, men of ordinary ability, but also the men who compose the Boards of Health. Men of reputation in the medical profession have no time for such things. I verily believe that if we had no Health Boards or experts, there would be no yellow fever in our country anywhere."

In speaking of the above, I used these words, which he says is a misrepresentation of the above language: "Asserting that Boards of Health, and the physicians employed by them, are not men of skill in the medical profession." That does not read to me like a misrepresentation.

He says: "Such language as this of the doctor's (the above) does not occur at all in my article, and I challenge him to show it. Why, therefore, did the doctor use it as mine?"

I leave it to the readers of the ADVOCATE to say whether or not Bro. Peebles has been misrepresented.

The Christian Life.

RICHES AND RELIGION.

There was a story in one of the newspapers not very long ago about a very rich man, who addressed a Bible class of boys on a Saturday evening, and said to them among other things: "I hope you young men are all careful. I believe it is a religious duty to get all the money you can; get it fairly, religiously, honestly, and give away all you can." The man who spoke had started in life without any money, and as the result of the diligent exercise of unusual business abilities, had come to be one of the richest men in the world. He had also given much money away. The precepts that he uttered seemed to be such as he had followed himself. . . . It is an admirable thing, if we have the gift for money-getting, to use our gains generously and wisely for the benefit of our fellows; but we are vanity and greedy creatures at the best, prone to make our consciences and our moral standards submissive to our material interests; prone to take an ell where duty seems to warrant us in taking an inch. If we make it our religious duty to get all the money that we can (honestly, of course), that we may have the more to give, shall we not be more than ever in danger of being careless how our money comes, and whose loss is involved in our profit, and of cajoling our consciences by a liberality made possible by enterprises in the development of which piety and human kindness have had no share?

Man's religious duty is to seek righteousness, to be honest, to be merciful, to be just. It is his privilege to gather all the money he can without sacrificing his higher obligations as a creature with a soul, a citizen, and a member of the human brotherhood. Whether he gains more money or less is of minor consequence. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness," said the Master, "and all these things shall be added unto you." Money gains appear then as the incident, not the aim; and nothing in modern experience seems to impeach the wisdom of that attitude toward them.—Scribner's.

HELPING SATAN.

A young man who is not a Christian attended a Christian Endeavor meeting one evening. It was a good meeting; nearly all in the room took part; the prayers were earnest, the remarks were practical and inspiring. The young man was impressed by it all. He felt that he ought to be a Christian; he was thoughtful.

But when the meeting was over, the first thing said to him was by one of the young men about the football game of the day before; then the conversation drifted to a party. The young lady with whom he went home criticised the leader, made a laughing remark about one of the prayers, and said nothing of the good things.

The young man thought, as he sauntered home: "I don't believe those Christians are much in earnest, after all; they didn't seem to care whether I was a Christian or not, or whether I joined them."

The next week he did not go to the meeting. No one asked why he was absent. After that, for a while, he would happen around as the meetings were over to go home with one of the young ladies. But in the meantime he got in with a fast set, and went from bad to worse.

Did anyone help Satan to drag that young man down? Might not some one easily have helped Christ to save him?—Golden Rule.

DO NOT LOWER THE STANDARD.

The Rev. John MacNeil has done well to call attention, in his suggestive little book, "The Spirit-Filled Life," to the superficial nature of some people's idea of sin. Many have been led astray at this point, even considering that they had no need to pray, "Forgive us our trespasses," because, forsooth, they were conscious of no trespasses. As if their consciousness was amply sufficient to judge in the case! Paul at least did not think so. "I know nothing against myself," he cries, "yet am I not hereby justified." He recognized that there was a much higher standard than that, and that being delivered from conscious sin was by no means the same as being delivered from all sin. Our whiteness may look very satisfactory until we bring it into contrast with God's whiteness, then we see the difference. The more we compare ourselves with Christ, and not with one another, the better chance we shall have of reaching a true humility. To be blameless is one thing; to be faultless, or without blemish, is quite another.—Zion's Herald.

MORE PRAYER.

Religious life begins in prayer. It stretches from that point to the triumphant death-bed. No advance in experience lift above its necessity. No surrounding conditions make it useless. Only when the "Task is done,

The gates are passed,
And heaven is won,"

may the Christian cease to pray.

Prayer is the highest exercise possible to man. It is an exalted employment to preach that Word which is "the power of God unto salvation." It is a grand work to lay siege to a soul, and, by the help of the Spirit, persuade it to Christ. But even these high privileges may not be put above that of talking directly to God through Jesus Christ. It is enough if they stand on the same level. Nothing surpasses in sublimity the heartfelt approach of the creature into the presence of the Creator, and the bold, though humble, presentation of petitions to the Ruler of heaven and earth. Its twin sister, thanksgiving, seems to us to stand nearer than anything beside.—Selected.

The rich man in the parable was lost not because he was rich, for his eyes rested upon one in heaven who was the richest patriarch of his age. He was lost, because—why did not Jesus give the reason? Why should he give the reason when there is but one reason for all lost souls alike? And yet, though he was lost, and knew it; though he had offended Almighty God, and knew it, and though he was in sight of paradise, and could then communicate with it, not a word suggestive of sorrow escaped his lips, not a prayer for forgiveness; not an expression of regret for his past life, not a breath of apology. His attitude toward God was the same that it was on earth. Let us not overlook this. There are those who say that God will give men a second chance to repent; but this glimpse of what is behind the veil assures us that if the second opportunity were given, it would be spurned like the first. If they took advantage of the second probation at all, they would use it solely as a fire escape. The rich man wanted no forgiveness; he only wanted to escape torments, or to have his sufferings alleviated, and his sense of justice was so blunted that he did not hesitate to ask heaven for the drop of water without begging heaven's pardon for the past, and to ask that it might be sent by Lazarus, the beggar he had spurned in the other world.—Bible Reader.

The pleasures of life have their alloy. When we have obtained most of the happiness of life, there is still some secret pain, some strange yearning of the heart for something not yet attained. Solomon, after having tried all which riches and position could afford, pronounced all as vanity, and Solomon's experience is ever the experience of the world. The simple truth is, there is no real peace of mind until there is an abiding conviction that eternal interests are safe. The sense of security here will sweeten every pleasure and lessen every pain. The path of safety is the path of pleasure, for "her ways are ways of pleasantness and all her paths are peace."—Selected.

God's love is like the atmosphere which fills up all corners regardless of their shapes. It is like the flowing river which spreads its beauty into every creek, and fills the shadows as well as the deep holes in its course. It adjusts itself to the hearts which it visits. Its consistency lies in this: that it is the same to all. Its earnestness and thoughtfulness lie in this: that it adapts itself to all. It is the same pure, true and beautiful current wherever it goes; but it possesses the capacity for adapting itself to each. It is like the ether, rigid, yet penetrating, as fine as steel, and yet as flexible as the softest silk.—W. Boyd Carpenter, D. D.

To-morrow will be like to-day. Life wastes itself whilst we are preparing to live.—Emerson.

A PREACHER'S REPORT

Interesting Statement by Elder Joel H. Austin of Goshen, Ind.

"I was a victim of catarrh and had almost constant pain in my head. The trouble was gradually working down on my lungs. I was weak and irresolute. My wife had the grip and Hood's Sarsaparilla cured her. After this I had the same disease and resorted to Hood's. In a short time the aches and pains were relieved and I also saw the medicine was helping my catarrh. In six weeks I ceased to have any further trouble with it and I am now a well man. The pains and bleating I had in my limbs are gone and I am relieved of a heart trouble. I am thankful for a medicine so intelligently compounded and so admirably adapted to the needs of the system." STATE HOLINESS CONVENTION.

In response to a previous call, a convention of the holiness people met at Waynesboro, Miss., Dec. 3, 1898, and after songs and prayers imploring the guidance of the Holy Spirit, Bro. H. C. Cochrane was chosen president, and Rev. E. T. Breland, secretary.

After a free and deliberate discussion of the various questions and issues before the holiness movement, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the voice of this convention is, that it is utterly foreign to the purpose and desire of the holiness people to establish any organization to supplant or take the place of the present existing church organizations.

Resolved, That it is not thought best for this convention to attempt the organization of a State Holiness Association; but,

Resolved, That this convention advises the holiness people of the different localities to organize themselves into independent holiness associations.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that all the holiness people co-operate with the different church organizations, as far as possible, and that they support their pastors, and meet the financial claims of their respective church organizations as far as they can conscientiously do so.

Resolved, That this convention advises that all the holiness people attend upon the regular services of the churches to which they belong, according to the vows which they have taken, and that they bear patiently and in a Christ-like spirit any opposition or severe criticism that they may meet.

Resolved, That this convention advises the holiness people to meet constantly, at least once in a week in religious services, such as holiness, prayer, and testimony meetings.

Resolved, That these resolutions be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, The Pentecostal Herald, and The Zion's Outlook for publication.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. I. L. Bronson, P. C., Winnsboro, La., Dec. 5, 1898: "I am now at the close of a quadrennium on my first circuit. I can truly say God has been good to me. In the Summer Bro. Turner was with us at Boenf Prarie. His preaching reached the people, and they attended in large numbers. Twenty-six joined the church, and many were reclaimed. Several of the converts went to work at once. They helped in the Sunday-school and also began raising funds to purchase an organ and to repair the church. The work is now completed and the organ in use at a total expense of three hundred and sixty dollars. Our churches are in good repair. A parsonage has been added to the work, which has recently received two coats of paint. We trust that the people have been spiritually benefited by our labors among them."

R. E. Rutledge, Lake City, Dec. 5: "I desire to say through the ADVOCATE that wife and I are enjoying the blessing of entire sanctification, perfect love, the second blessing. The Lord abides with us. Glory to his name! We were regenerated years ago. On the eighteenth of November I heard Dr. Carradine preach, and one week later my wife heard him. After Bro. L. S. Jones received the blessing I went to him to hear his experience. The same day Sister Alice Rohinet asked me to bring a book—'Sanctification,' by Dr. Carradine—to her parents at Lake City; at the same time insisted on my reading the book. Mrs. Rutledge and I read the book, but before we were half through we obtained this great blessing. If anyone desires this way to be made plain to them, I would say get this book and read it. Glory to God for salvation from all sin! Amen."

RALLY DAY AT MANASSAS.

The Conference year is coming to a close, and the time will soon be at hand when pastor and people in many places must say, Good-bye! This may be the case here on Energy Mission, the thought of which makes many of us feel heavy-hearted; but the thought that we have tried to be a loyal people and observe all the "days" demanded of us by our church, is to us a comforting one. These "days" are splendid factors to help draw the children and youth of our country into the Lord's service. This year Children's Day was to us both pleasant and profitable, Education Day was edifying; but Rally Day was real soul-inspiring.

It was impracticable, if not impossible, to hold a Rally Day service with every congregation in this large and "tough" circuit; so our pastor, Bro. J. C. Ellis, appointed Manassas Church—where there is a new and capacious building—as the place to concentrate his forces. After consultation with the officials, the first Sunday in November was appointed as the time for the exercises. The necessary preparations were made, the day was as lovely as heart could wish, and the house was filled to overflowing. It was indeed pleasing to see how nicely our efficient pastor conducted the services, while his faithful wife led the music, performing on the organ to the delight of all. When the music was begun and the children commingled their voices in the singing of those sweet songs, I was perfectly delighted. Methinks the angels bent their ears to listen to those childish strains. I would not be surprised but some of these beautiful words (God bless the authors of the same!) will be gathered into the angelic chorus to be rolled on in eternal symphony. Thank God for this privilege our children enjoy, and may our sympathy for the heathen be increased!

It was perfectly delightful to see how eloquently the children recited; how carefully they built their Pyramid, and read the sentence; how gradly they displayed the Missionary Alphabet, and how proudly the little fellow held aloof his Two Peanles. I think that before the exercises were ended, everyone present, who was not ordained from all eternity to be "Hard-shell," was filled with a missionary spirit.

I verily believe that if Rally Day is rightly observed, it will do a great deal for the promotion of the missionary cause. God bless the inventor thereof!

OBITUARIES.

BENNETT—"Miss MAMIE is dead." Such were the sad words whispered throughout the community on the seventh of last September. It cast a pall over every home. Known and loved by all, we wished so much for her to get well. Young, beautiful, and promising, she was the joy of her parents and hope of friends.

Miss Mamie was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Bennett, and was born Nov. 10, 1878. She was scarcely twenty when she died. In 1893 she attended East Mississippi Female College, and graduated in 1895. During her first year at Meridian she professed conversion and united with the Methodist Church. She won the confidence and esteem of President Holloman and faculty, and was a favorite with all her schoolmates. We quote the following from a letter written by Bro. Holloman to her parents shortly after her death: "Of all those with whom we were associated in the days at East Mississippi, none have left a more pleasant recollection than your affectionate daughter. As the months went by she became more and more attractive to us. During her last session, when the measles broke out in the college, she demonstrated, above all others, her real spirit and worth. We can not forget her kindness to her companions and to our own little ones during those days. We count it a pleasure to have been associated with her so long."

A few weeks before her death she was away from home nursing a sick relative, who had slow fever. It is supposed that she then caught the disease which proved her death. We are reminded of the words of our Savior, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me." She seemed to have had some presentiment that she would not recover, and remarked several times during her sickness, "They tell me I will not get well."

After an illness of several weeks with typhoid fever, in which she patiently suffered, her pure spirit slipped away into the land of no death. We gently laid her to rest in the family graveyard beneath the cedars, to await the resurrection of the just. She is missed in the Sabbath-school and family circle, but it will be a blessed recollection that she grew up to love and be loved by those who will ever so tenderly cherish her pure and sweet memory. To the bereaved parents and loved ones we extend our sincerest sympathy, with prayer that they may so live as to meet their lost darling in heaven.

BARNES—WILLIS BARNES, the subject of this sketch, was born in Robeson county, N. C., June 8, 1817, and departed this life at his residence in Crystal Springs, Miss., Nov. 2, 1898. He came to Mississippi in 1834, and to Crystal Springs in 1871. He was converted and joined the church under the ministry of the late Rev. Hardy Mullins, when about twenty years of age. At the age of twenty-one he was married to Miss Mary M. Hennington, who died about fifteen years ago. In 1887 he was married to Mrs. Kate Long, who survives him.

At one time in life, when well and active, he was a useful officer in the church. He was prosperous, and his home was given to hospitality. He raised and educated a large family of children, who are useful members of society and of the church. In his latter days his health was bad, and his attendance upon the services of the church irregular, but he always enjoyed the visits of his pastor and of other religious friends.

During his last illness it was my privilege to be with him often. His conversation was that of a man who put all his trust in God, and had hope of everlasting life through Jesus Christ. In age and feebleness extreme he waited long for the coming of the Master, and seemed ready to meet him.

W. B. LEWIS.

SPEED—On Oct. 7, 1898, about noon, the pure spirit of Sister MARY SERENA SPEED (nee Scott) was suddenly called home to be with Christ. Her illness was so short—dying of congestion—that no one knew the end was nigh until she was gone. The only warning the husband had was for him to take the children to her mother. In early life she united with the Methodist Church, and from that time lived that pure life of self-denial that exemplifies the doctrine of Christ. Educated at Lexington, Miss., she afterward taught school near her home in Claiborne county.

On Aug. 13, 1896, she was married to Mr. Robt. Speed, of Issaquena county, where she lived until death claimed her. Full of hope and cheer, and seemingly in perfect health, her life brought sunshine to her home. Her life was centered in the love of her Savior, her husband, and the two children. One of her fondest hopes was to return to Claiborne county, the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Scott.

The fond husband and little children have been bereft of the life of their home, and the parents and sisters and brothers are heart-broken over their loss, but weep not without hope. The comforting grace of their heavenly Father is theirs. W. T. GRIFFIN.

Mayersville, Miss.

GAY—"LOULA VAL," daughter of Louis B. and Lonla Gay, was born in Rebeline, La., Aug. 5, 1891, and departed this life at Zwolle, La., Sept. 15, 1898.

Only seven happy years was this precious little one permitted to gladden her earthly home where she was as the bright sunshine is to the earth, and which is now so lonely, bereft of her bright presence. An unusually attractive child, she was not only beautiful in person, but had a sweet, amiable disposition; always gentle and kind to her brothers and sisters, and obedient and affectionate to her fond parents. But she is gone. The bright, happy life, so full of promise, was suddenly cut short by the rude hand of death, and only sweet memories are left of the little "sunbeam" that has vanished from our sight. Grieve not, fond parents, for your darling child. "He who is too wise to err and too good to be unkind" has taken her to himself and may each of you so live as to make an unbroken family in heaven! Her uncle,

J. D. HARPER.

BERRY—The undersigned committee, appointed by the Winnsboro M. E. Sunday-school to draft resolutions on the death of one of its members, hereby submit the following:

Whereas, It hath pleased our heavenly Father, in his wisdom and goodness, to call from our midst a faithful and beloved pupil, SADIE BERRY, and though bowing in reverence to his will, we realize the loss of a diligent and attentive member of our Sunday-school; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved parents in their hour of sorrow. We commend them for comfort to Him who knoweth and doeth all things well.

The door of health stands open to every woman who will enter. All that she needs is the key and a little knowledge. The knowledge that she needs is concerning her own nature, her own physical make-up and the principal cause of ill-health in women.

When a woman suffers from headaches and pains in the back and sides, and burning and dragging sensations and the weakness, nervousness and despondency that are caused by diseases peculiar to her sex, she cannot enjoy good general health. The key to the door of health—the cure for all disorders of this description—is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a medicine specially devised for disorders of this nature and no other. It is the invention of an eminent and skillful specialist, Dr. R. V. Pierce, for thirty years chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. When a woman writes to Dr. Pierce she consults a physician who has practiced for thirty years right in one place, and who was some years ago honored by his own townspeople by an election to the National Congress. He will answer letters from women free of charge. All professional correspondence is regarded as sacredly confidential.

"For years I kept failing in health and getting worse and more nervous all the time," writes Mrs. Annie Dulan, of East Stroudsburg, Monroe Co., Pa. "I doctored with two different doctors without relief. My system was run down and my nerves weak. I had ulcers of the uterus which were so painful at times that I was afraid they must be cancers. I felt discouraged and did not get any better until my nurse advised me to write to Dr. Pierce. In May I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I took twelve bottles in all, six of each. Thanks to God and Dr. Pierce's medicines, I am cured and am a well woman."

Best Edition of the World's Best Book,

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers. New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to December, '99. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

SELF-PRONOUNCING

S. S. Teachers' Reference Bible

Text Conforms Exactly to the Oxford Teachers' Edition.

This Bible is printed from Large, Beautiful and Clear New Type. All Proper Names are Divided into Syllables and Every Vowel is Marked and the Syllables Inflected, showing the Sounds and Accents as they are given in a Dictionary, thus enabling the reader to properly pronounce every word. This feature is a great improvement and a strong recommendation for this Bible over others.

This Bible contains the celebrated Oxford Teachers' Helps together with a complete series of New Maps illustrating the geography of Palestine and the surrounding countries from the earliest times, and embodying the most recent discoveries renders this Bible especially desirable to teachers and students of the Holy Scriptures.

Imperial Seal Binding, Tuck Edges, known as "Divinity Circuit," Linen Lined, Round Corners, Red under Gold Edges, Price, $4.00.

This book in Bourgeois type will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price ($4) to any address; but to that select class who read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, we furnish it on the following terms: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, viz., to December, '99, and we will send it to you, postpaid, for $1.75. (A little later you will have to pay to January, 1900.)

The same Bible in Minion type will be sent for $1.55; in Emerald type, for $1.15, to those who pay a full year in advance.

For fifty cents additional we will send Bible with index. For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved on the outside in gilt letters.

The shuttles of his purpose move
To carry out his own design;
Seek not too soon to disapprove
His work, nor yet assign
Dark motives, when, with silent tread,
You view each somber fold;
For, lo! within each darker thread
There twines a thread of gold.

We all of us complain of the shortness of time, and yet have much more than we know what to do with. Our lives are spent either in doing nothing at all or in doing nothing that we ought to do. We are always complaining that our days are few, and acting as though there would be no end to them.—Seneca.

Instead of asking, as is now being done, "What kind of a preacher the people like," or "What kind of a hearer the preacher likes," it would be more to the purpose if the question were, "What kind of a preacher or hearer does God like." Both preacher and hearer stand related to him, and must answer to him for the manner in which his truth is preached and heard.—Presbyterian.

When science fails to agree with the Bible, there need be no doubtings or wonderings as to the result. Again and again the seeming differences which have arisen have vanished in the light of a fuller knowledge. So it will be as we continue to learn. We shall stand more and more in awe and admiration of that infinite wisdom which is above all human knowledge "as the heaven is high above the earth."—Selected.

"ENDURING HARDNESS."

To say nothing of its great dangers, its frequent risk of life and limb, a soldier's life involves peculiar hardships and privations, as many of our young volunteers have found out by bitter experience. While war gives splendid opportunity for deeds of daring, and calls for the most unquestioning obedience, yet there is no quality of true manhood that it calls into more vigorous or constant play than that of fortitude, or passive courage. The soldier must forego the many comforts and conveniences of home and the occupations of peace, and endure the hunger, fatigue, exposure and sickness which so generally are entailed by camp life. The young recruit soon learns that war is not a picnic, but that it means arduous service and stern discipline. But despite its dangers and discomforts, military life, has, as we know, a peculiar fascination for many.

Soldiers, however, do not compose the only class who must "endure hardness" in the performance of duty and in the pursuit of success. The railroad employee, the miner, the explorer, the sailor, the physician, the farmer, the missionary, must all suffer hardships of various kinds, frequently sacrificing personal pleasure and comfort in the faithful discharge of duty. Almost every occupation, in fact, if earnestly pursued, involves some measure of self-sacrifice, some degree of fortitude.

Above all, the believer, as "a good soldier of Jesus Christ," must from time to time suffer hardships, or as the Apostle Paul phrases it, "endure hardness." Some of his troubles and privations he shares in common with unbelievers and non-professors, who see only evil in the ills that they suffer. The Christian, however, on finding hardships and misfortunes in his path, endures them, not murmuringly and impatiently, because forced upon him, but cheerfully and with meek submission, remembering that "what God chooses for us is better than what we can choose." Christianity ever appeals to the heroic in our nature. If the Christian endures the ills of life with no more patience and resignation than other men, his religion is but an empty profession, serving neither to strengthen his own soul nor to impress anybody else with its enchaining, soothing power. All men have to undergo more or less of hardships and affliction; few of them, however, bear them with Christian fortitude, making them the stepping stones to higher things.

The faithful service of God frequently requires the sacrifice of personal comfort and convenience, just as is the case with the soldier. He who attends public worship only when all things are favorable, never has grace enough to do right at all times, nor love enough to lead a soul to Christ. He who does good only when he feels like it, never becomes noted for benevolence. Not a few are willing to be Christians so long as the path of duty is smooth and easy, but as soon as it begins to involve difficulty and discomfort, they turn back to the flesh-pots of Egypt. Fair-weather Christians, people who serve God when their temporal skies are bright, and all goes well around them, are numerous enough, but such are far from being true disciples.

As Henry Drummond wisely says: "Sooner or later we find out that life is not a holiday, but a discipline. Earlier or later we all discover that the world is not a play-ground. It is quite clear God means it for a school. The moment we forget that, the puzzle of life begins." Sacrifices and afflictions form no small part of this spiritual discipline.

In addition to the ills which come to all alike, the Christian must at times voluntarily endure some hardships and losses for the gospel's sake. Though others may prosper through tricks and dishonest methods, he must "provide things honest in the sight of all men," even at the cost of worldly success. In the end, however, he is almost certain to be the gainer thereby, for God has said: "Them that honor me, I will honor."

Again, it is often the duty of the Christian to endure slander and reproach for the gospel's sake. Some are more afraid of criticism and ridicule than they are of the devil himself. Well has the poet Lowell said:

"They are slaves who dare not be
In the right with two or three."

There are times, however, when it is harder to suffer wrong than it is to do right. Fortitude is sublimer than courage, because there is no excitement in it. Action is soon over, but endurance means a long strain upon faith and patience.

Whatever forms of endurance our service involves, let us remember that Jesus has shared them with us. "He was a Man of sorrow and acquainted with grief." "Though he was rich, yet for our sakes, he became poor, that we through his poverty, might be rich." He dignified toil, glorified poverty, and triumphed over suffering. His grace can make us strong to bear all the trials and hardships that Christian warfare involves. These may seem grievous at first; nevertheless as we bravely endure them for the Master's sake, our hearts grow light, and joy fills our souls. Piety that is a stranger to sacrifices knows no joys.

THE EDUCATIONAL COMMISSION.

The Education Commission created by the last General Conference held its first meeting at Nashville, Nov. 16, and organized by electing officers as follows: President, Dr. J. H. Carlisle; vice president, Dr. W. M. Baskerville; secretary, W. P. Few. A course of study was prescribed as a prerequisite to admission into any of our colleges; also for the baccalaureate degree. This being done, the following was adopted:

The foregoing courses of study are easily put on paper, but to make them really effective something more must be done. To this end, therefore, as well as to strengthen and to solidify our educational work, we make the following recommendation:

(1) It is important that the distinction between the college and the university, and between the university and the college, be clearly defined. The college should not do the work of the academy, nor should the university do the work of the college. We recommend that the Annual Conference or Conferences of each State unite upon one college, and one college only for boys and girls. We believe it better to maintain one strong, well-equipped college open to both sexes, than two weak colleges, one for boys and one for girls. In States, however, where the policy of co-education may be adversely regarded, it may be possible and best to maintain two strong institutions for single sex education.

(2) We recommend that the academies of each State be so correlated with the college of that State as to form an harmonious educational system preventing friction and waste. We recommend that our colleges be so correlated with the Vanderbilt University as to form a complete and harmonious educational system for the whole church.

(3) We recommend that no institution be classified as a college unless it have:

(a) The support, and become the only college of at least one Annual Conference.

(b) A permanent annual income, not counting tuition fees, of at least $3,000. This income may arise from the interest on an endowment fund, from Conference assessments, from private contributions, or otherwise, but should be so secured as to guarantee the permanent support of the institution.

(4) In the opinion of this commission, adequate instruction in the courses of study outlined for baccalaureate degrees can not be properly given with a faculty of less than seven competent teachers.

(5) We recommend that an institution to be classified as a university have an endowment of not less than one million dollars; that it be organized on a basis of professional schools and of elective studies, with departments of original research.

NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

The following report of the Committee on Books and Periodicals, North Mississippi Conference, was presented on Monday and unanimously adopted:

This noble paper continues to prosecute its valuable work in the three patronizing Conferences. We congratulate the editor and publisher, Dr. W. C. Black, on the improvements made both in the editorial and mechanical departments of the paper. The approaching end of the debt, so long a burden to the enterprise, gives promise of larger means to improve the service of the paper, and we hope to lessen its cost to subscribers. We regret that its patronage is not double and treble the present numbers.

Resolved, That we hereby express to Dr. W. C. Black our approval of his work in conducting the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, and will continue to him our earnest support.

IN TRIBULATION.

MR. EDITOR: On yesterday morning our parsonage was burned to the ground. Most of our clothing, also meat and lard and molasses, were destroyed. Having a family of thirteen, and having received only $275 as a salary for the past year, we are in considerable trouble.

Yours truly, J. M. HUGGIN.

Big Creek, Miss., Dec. 7, 1898.

[This is a case which calls for an exhibition of brotherly love. A man with a family of thirteen on a salary of $275, with house and most of his effects, including clothing, burned; surely the facts only need to be stated in order to bring contributions from the people called Methodists.—EDITOR]

SOME RECENT UTTERANCES OF BISHOP MORRISON.

"God sends forth a Methodist preacher to conquer and conquest, not simply to hold and occupy."

"Smooth running is no indication of success. I have seen the satisfied preacher and the satisfied congregation—both satisfied with doing nothing."

"Some preachers resort to sensationalism to draw a crowd. Beware of it, brethren. A monkey and a hand organ will do that."

THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

There are more than 1,400 islands in this great group which Spain has ceded to the United States, and the area of them all (114,000 square miles) is almost exactly equal to that of the New England States and New York. They are inhabited by about three-quarters as many people as these seven States contain. Luzon is almost as large as New York or Pennsylvania; Mindanao is the size of Maine; Panay, a little smaller than Connecticut, has a larger population than that State. The length of the group from north to south is greater than the distance from Chicago to New Orleans. Many of the islands are very small—mere rocks raised by volcanic action. The group, discovered in 1521 by Magellan, who was killed on one of the islands a few weeks later, was named in honor of Philip II, of Spain. Of the aborigines, called negritos, few remain; a majority of the inhabitants are the descendants of Malay immigrants, or people showing a mixture of Malay and Chinese blood. While the islands are mountainous, the soil is very fertile and well watered. Active volcanoes can easily be found and earthquakes are not unknown. There is an abundance of fine timber. Tropical fruits grow in profusion. Among the undeveloped resources are deposits of coal, petroleum, gold, iron ore, copper and lead. The rainy season lasts from May to November. The leading agricultural products are hemp, sugar, tobacco, rice and coffee.—Independent.

POLYGAMY TO THE FRONT.

There is a considerable speck of war now to be seen in Utah. The Mormons are growing bold. At the late election B. H. Roberts, a high official of the Mormon Church, and a polygamist, was elected to Congress by a majority of more than ten thousand. The issue was an open one in the canvass. The polygamous relations of the candidate were not disputed. Polygamy is unlawful under the laws of the United States, as also under the Constitution of Utah. The church professes to have abandoned, but that the crime is still committed is well known; and in defiance of law and decency this man was elected to Congress.

Now the anti-polygamists have determined to carry the war to Washington. They will protest against the admission of Roberts to the House, on the ground that he is a polygamist. They should succeed. The members of that body, without regard to party, should vote to reject him. These defiant lawbreakers should thus be taught a lesson. It would not stop polygamy—no power can now break that up, since Utah is a State and polygamists have charge of all the machinery of the law. They will not punish men for this offense, but it will teach the Mormons that polygamists can not be admitted to Congress.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

WILD FANATICISM.

The great scandal brought upon the cause of religion by some of its pretended followers is lamentable. The insanities of extreme faith-cure and Christian science fanatics are amazing. By neglecting the means God has put within their reach and the reason with which he has endowed them, adults and little children are neglected, and allowed to suffer and die.

The daily papers lately contained the account of a man whose little son had his fingers crushed in an elevator, and yet he refused to allow the surgeon to care for the lad when he had been sent for, claiming that he could heal him "by prayer." He became so violent that an officer had to be called in to arrest him. The surgeon amputated the boy's fingers, and he is doing well. The father, we are glad to say, was fined by the magistrate for disorderly conduct, and was compelled to pay the surgeon's bill. A severe dose of punishment is the only proper treatment for such intolerable fanatics.—Pittsburg Advocate.

To trace the connection between social vice and a decline of the political and industrial importance of a great State may not at first glance seem an easy task, but there is certainly a thread of union between the moral state of Paris and the present condition of France. The Republic is evidently in a state of decadence as marked as that of the moral condition of the French people. The Latins have never been able, intelligently, to comprehend or practice self-government. The Republics of Italy were travesties on the name. The present Republic of France is neither more nor less than a military despotism. France is declining in native population, the figures of the census showing that for some years the population of the Republic has been at a standstill, and but for the influx of foreigners, Belgians, Hollanders, Germans in the North, Italians and Swiss in the South, there would have been a positive and marked decline. The laws of nature are inexorable, and, however greatly the fact may be deplored, France presents to the world the spectacle of a dying Nation. That the fact is due in no small degree to the nameless vices which have made Paris the Sodom of modern days, can not be doubted. There is not a vice depicted in the infamous paintings and sculptures of Pompeii, which has not its counterpart in the Paris of to-day. "The wages of sin is death," is as true in the case of Nations as of individuals.—St. Louis Advocate.

The determined effort of a New York temperance society to suppress the military canteen in its State camp, is supported by reports from the English army in Africa, where the recent brilliant victory on the Athara was won by a force composed exclusively of total abstainers. For months Sir Herbert Kitchener has denied all liquor to his troops, with the result that in one of the deadliest of climates no army has ever had so little sickness, been in such magnificent physical and moral training, or won hard-fought battles after forced marches of such extraordinary character. No wonder that the total abstinence principle in warfare is being pondered by military authorities throughout the world.—Youth's Companion.

The greatest Sunday-school in the Methodist Episcopal Church is said to be the Bohemian Sunday school, Cleveland, Ohio. It has a membership of 1,200, with 300 in the primary department, nearly all of whom are Catholics. Nearly all the adult scholars were Catholics when they entered the primary department, but are now Protestants.—Exchange.

Bishop Candler returned from Cuba last week and is actively engaged trying to provide money and men for the Cuban Mission. He is full of enthusiasm for the cause, and if he can only have the support of the church, great things will be done in that field.—Wesleyan Advocate.

Miss Anna M. Sackett, of Waukesha, Wis., has revoked a legacy of five thousand dollars to Carroll College, of said city, because the trustees permit the students to play football; she took this action after witnessing a game.—New York Advocate.

New York Methodism is coming to the front. Some idea of what it is doing may be derived from the fact that in that part of New York above the Harlem river, in a territory which now numbers 200,000 people, the Methodist Episcopal Church maintains about one-fourth of the work which is being done by Protestants. It outnumbers the Episcopal Churches, and "has twice as many as either the Baptists or Presbyterians or Reformed Churches, and three times as many as the Lutherans or Congregationalists."—Exchange.

At the National W. C. T. U. Convention, held recently at St. Paul, Miss Belle Kearney resigned her position as national organizer in order to secure time to finish a book which she has had on the anvil for some time. She was prevailed upon, however, to accept the position of national lecturer. She hopes to be able to take the field by the first of June.

From some unknown source we have received a large and artistically executed photograph of our new church at Monroe, La. We had heard much concerning the handsomeness of this church, but "the half had not been told" us. So far as our observation goes, it is by far the handsomest Methodist Church in the State. Bro. Evans and his flock have wrought a work that will tell upon the fortunes of Methodism in that enterprising city for generations to come.

An immense crowd participated in the reopening service at Algiers last Sabbath evening. An excellent sermon was preached by the presiding elder, Rev. S. S. Keener. An interesting history of the church from its beginning was read by Hon. F. A. Daniels. An appropriate service of song was rendered by a choir composed of representatives from the choirs of several of our city churches. Everybody was delighted with the service and with the transformation in the appearance of the building. We extend hearty congratulations to Bro. Wynn and his flock.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT,

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Mansfield, La., EDITOR.

Dr. DuBose attended the North Mississippi Annual Conference at Aberdeen. This was the first time we had met our friend since he was elevated to the office of League Secretary and Editor.

He wears his honors gracefully, and was heartily received by the North Mississippians, who helped by their new subscriptions to swell the growing list for the Era.

A special service was set apart for the League, at which time Dr. Du Bose entertained and edified the large congregation assembled. The editor of this department was denied the privilege of being present at the session on account of the pressing work of statistical secretary of the Conference.

Rev. J. A. Randolph, president of the Mississippi State Conference of Epworth Leagues, leaves this week for Cuba as chaplain of the Third Mississippi Regiment. The Leagues are asked to remember him in their prayers.

From a private letter recently received from Miss Vic Thompson, of Tupelo, Miss., we quote the following:

"The first Sunday in November our League had a very interesting missionary meeting. The subject for discussion was 'Our Mission Fields,' and reports from each one of these fields were given. These reports were gleaned from the fifty-second annual report of the Board of Missions and The Review of Missions. Our leader for this service was one of our most consecrated young men, who made the service truly helpful. The meeting was interspersed with good missionary songs."

Rev. J. E. Thomas, pastor of our church at Greenville, Miss., has a Number One League in his charge. In his report at Conference he stated that as there was no Y. M. C. A. in the town, the League had raised the money and kept up a well-furnished suite of rooms down town to help young men in the direction of Christian culture. They propose to continue this in connection with their regular work.

This League consists of 50 members, 35 of whom will lead a meeting or pray anywhere. Bishop Key, upon hearing this report, said, "Give my love to those young people, and tell them I wish their tribe would increase."

We desire to call attention of all correspondents to change of address of this scribe from Booneville, Miss., to Mansfield, Louisiana. As our work for the coming year as financial agent for Centenary and Mansfield Colleges will lay within the State of Louisiana, it will be in order for the president or vice-president of the Mississippi State League Conference to appoint a successor to serve till next Spring, at which time the Louisiana Leagues will appoint an editor. The present editor will serve until another shall be appointed.

W. F. M. S.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference held its nineteenth annual session in the hospitable town of Brookhaven, Dec. 1-6.

It was a rare pleasure indeed to have Mrs. S. C. Trueheart, corresponding secretary of the Woman's Board of Missions, and Miss Alice Moore, of Brazil, with us. Mrs. Trueheart's visit will result in great benefit, and when she comes again we promise that she shall find a model Conference.

Our corresponding secretary will doubtless send you a letter very soon telling of the work and changes made at this session of the Conference.

I want to tell you of the royal hospitality extended by good people. Brookhaven is certainly a town of schools, of refined and talented people. It was my pleasure to be entertained in the home of Bro. and Sister Chambers, at Whitworth College. The college is an auxiliary, as it were, to the church. At the devotional exercises I noticed that every girl had her Bible and took part in the services. They use the "Young People's Hymnal," and the singing was an inspiration. We had the pleasure of meeting all the teachers, and enjoyed the beautiful music, recitations, etc., furnished for our entertainment. The art room at Whitworth College is a dream of loveliness. The beautiful China painting was especially fascinating to the home makers of our party. The dormitories were nicely furnished, and a more home-like home, a happier, prettier set of girls I have never seen. Bro. and Sister B. F. Jones, Bro. and Sister Chambers, Miss Addie Marshall, Sister Bowen and others were untiring in their efforts to make our Conference a success, and our delegates comfortable and happy; and that they succeeded most admirably is voiced by every one who was so fortunate as to be in attendance.

Mrs. Robert McLaurin, in behalf of the Conference, presented Miss Sallie Smylie, Conference corresponding secretary, with a certificate of life membership. This little courtesy was prompted by love and appreciation of her and her work. To tell you how much we enjoyed the lovely music furnished by Mr. Snyder, Mrs. Snyder, Miss Hunt, Miss Anderson, Mrs. Willoughby, Mrs. McNair, and other members of the choir and faculty of Whitworth College, would consume too much space. We left this little town with hearts full of gratitude to the Giver of all good gifts, and praying for the peace and prosperity of the people who live in Brookhaven.

FROM MISS BELLE KEARNEY.

Since the last National Convention of the W. C. T. U. I have lectured in California, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Louisiana, Virginia, Tennessee, Delaware, Pennsylviana, New York, New Jersey, West Virginia, and Mississippi making a total of 11 States and 2 Territories visited. Eleven W. C. T. U.'s have been organized, 3 reorganized and 2 Y. W. C. T. U.'s formed. Have held fifteen business meetings, made a number of short speeches and delivered 100 addresses. Have neglected to keep an accurate account of regular members gained except in the organizations; these, with a few scattering meetings, have amounted to 350. The number of regular members to the Y's organized have amounted to 44. No record of increase of honorary membership for either W. C. T. U. or Y's was kept. I have attended the State Conventions of Louisiana, Mississippi, Virginia and New Jersey; and while lecturing in New Jersey, during September, I attended 5 county conventions, and later spoke for the King's Co. (N. Y.) Convention at Brooklyn. Delivered addresses at the Summer Assemblies at Ocean Grove, N. J.; Monndaville, West Va.; Cuba and Round Lake, New York. Attended the National Temperance Congress at Prohibition Park, Staten Island, where I gave several brief talks. Have spoken before an Indian school in Arizona, college students in Mississippi and a meeting held for the soldiers at Camp Alger. . . . Since the above was sent to the National Corresponding Secretary of the W. C. T. U. for publication, I have delivered 17 addresses, gained 42 regular and 24 honorary members for the W. C. T. U., and 27 regular and 4 honorary members for the Y's, attended a parlor meeting and organized a Y. W. C. T. U. at Saratoga, New York. This, included with the earlier report, makes a total of 117 addresses delivered, 3 Y's organized, 14 W. C. T. U.'s; 4 State W. C. T. U. conventions attended and 6 County Conventions, and a gain of 71 regular members for the Y's and 392 for the W. C. T. U.

QUESTION AND ANSWER.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me to ask through the ADVOCATE whether or not a layman is violating any law of church or propriety when he pronounces a benediction at the close of prayer meeting or Sunday-school. For ten years I have tried to assist my pastors by conducting prayer meetings in their absence, and usually closed by pronouncing a short benediction taken from the Bible. Not long ago my doing so was criticised by a scholarly layman of a sister denomination as being improper; that I was assuming the pastor's place.

If I was violating any law of etiquette or propriety, I beg pardon of all the pastors whose positions I seemingly assumed, and shall be glad if some brother will be kind enough to inform me whether or not a layman should pronounce a benediction.

"Am I my brother's keeper?" If so, what harm is there for me to pray God's love and grace to be with him always? W. B. MIDDLETON.

Satartia, Miss., Nov. 28, 1898.

[If there is any law in the Discipline, or any passage of Scripture that prohibits a layman from pronouncing a benediction, we have never seen it.—EDITOR]

THE HOLIDAYS.

Special low rate tickets to points in the Southeastern States will be sold by the Texas & Pacific Railway Company from all points on its line, Dec. 20 and 21, the same as in former years. It should be borne in mind that passengers have the choice of three gateways via this line in going back to their old home for Christmas and New Year's, namely: New Orleans, Shreveport and Memphis. It is with a feeling of pleasure and pride that we offer you the best passenger service in the South.

If you contemplate making the trip and want to know the cheapest and best way, write to nearest ticket agent or E. P. Turner, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Texas & Pacific Railway, Dallas, Texas, or to H. P. Hughes, Trav. Pass. Agt., Fort Worth, Texas.

M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH, AT BOYCE DESTROYED BY FIRE.

MR. EDITOR: I have to communicate to the readers of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE the very unpleasant intelligence of the destruction of our church-building at Boyce, La., at about 7:30 o'clock this (Sunday) evening. The congregation were just gathering for service when the building was discovered to be on fire about the stove flue. Though this was of brick, and had for several years resisted the heat, it is certain that the fire started either from some defect in the floor at the base, or by sparks falling on the top of the house. We saved most, or all, of the chairs, sash, blinds, doors, windows, and lamps; also the pulpit, organ, books, and tables.

As usual in the case of our churches and parsonages, there was no insurance, and in the present panicky condition of this section of the country, the outlook is most gloomy. But the Lord must have a house, and, no doubt, the good people will build one for him. Respectfully,

J. A. PARKER.

512 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

We have been requested to publish our editorial on "The Gospel of Giving" in the form of a tract, and have done so. We will send it, postpaid, at the following prices: 3 copies, 5 cents; 10 copies, 15 cents; 25 copies, 30 cents; 50 copies, 50 cents.

FROM REV. IRVIN MILLER.

MR. EDITOR: On the twenty-sixth of September, last, I was thrown from my cart and had my hip dislocated, since which I have been confined to my bed and room until a few days ago. I have never suffered as much from any cause in my life, but through all my suffering the Lord has been with me, and I have been very patient and cheerful. Thanks to the kind providence of God, I am now able to get about the house and yard on my crutches. My physician says in a few months more I will be on my feet again. Up to the time I was crippled I kept up regular appointments as usual; and preached to large and attentive congregations, who seemed anxious to hear the Word.

Bro. L. J. Jones has been our pastor on Walnut Grove circuit this year (his first year), and has done a faithful and acceptable year's work, and the people all want him back again. I have never seen a more godly man, and he is one of the best pastors we ever had. He literally "visits from house to house," and prays with the people in their homes. He informs me that the finances of the circuit will come up better than he expected. The cry of "hard times" is on us here as well as elsewhere.

I regret exceedingly that I will not be able to attend Conference this year, as it is always an enjoyable occasion to me. I trust and pray that you will have a pleasant session.

IRVIN MILLER.

A Ragged Coat and An Empty Pocket Changes the Aspect of the World.

Walter Wycoff, a student of social problems, abandoned his station in life and assumed the garb of daily toiler, taking his place among grimy handed workers in order to test the change. A MALARIA POISONED LIVER will also cause as great a change in physical life. Sunshine will leave the face. The eye loses its sparkle; while the skin assumes a dull copper tint. These are least of the evils and merely bespeak the external cry that Nature gives when battling with Malaria germs. Headache, Nausea, dullness of thought, pain in the back and side, a coated tongue, a horrible taste, are among the danger signals which if unheeded portend CONGESTION, CONVULSIONS, SUPPRESSION OF SECRETIONS AND TERMINATION OF LIFE.

Far easier than the solution of the social problem is the remedy for Malaria—DICKS' CHILLIFUGE absolutely exterminates it. A Few Doses, and health spreads her wings over the grateful system, and life sun shines once more, while life is worth the living.

A SONG OF CHEERFULNESS.

The wosiy world's a cheery place
For those with hearts to win it;
Thank God! there's not a human face
But has some laughter in it!
The soul that comes with honest mirth,
Though health and fortune vary,
Brings back the childhood of the earth,
And keeps it sound and merry.

The plodding world's an eager place
For those with wit to use it;
Where all are bidden to the race,
Let him who dares refuse it!
The simplest task the hand can try,
The dullest round of duty,
Knowledge can amply glorify,
And art can crown with beauty.

A busy, bonny, kindly place
Is this rough world of ours,
For those who love and work apace,
And fill their hands with flowers.
To kind and just and grateful hearts
The present grace is given,
To find a heaven in themselves,
And find themselves in heaven!

SELF-CULTURE A CHRISTIAN DUTY.

The life of sacrifice to which Christ calls us involves no mystical self-annihilation. There is a very clear distinction between self-love and selfishness. The latter is the essence of all sin, but the former is the basis and guage of our love to others. We are to love our neighbors as ourselves. To make the best of our lives and to improve to the utmost our talents, is a Christian duty. He who would help others must be himself at his very best.

We speak of some men as self-made, but, as matter of fact, all men are self-made. Schools and colleges can not make a scholar, any more than canvas and paint can make an artist, or tools a mechanic. What the boys and girls of to-day are to become rests mainly with themselves. Never was help more abundant nor opportunities more favorable, but the final decision, after all, rests with each young man and young woman. The physical life should be well-guarded. If bad habits and late hours wreck that, there is small chance of success. He who is always physically at his best has a tremendous advantage in the battle of life.

Then come the mental powers. How varied and rich they are! There is the memory that links us to the past, and makes advance possible; the will that should always decide for the right and the good; the imagination by which we rise to the loftiest heights of intellectual enjoyment; the logical faculty which makes us reasoning beings, and the esthetic faculty that lifts us up to the realm of the beautiful. All these powers are to be cultivated to the highest point of efficiency. "I will be a scholar," said Adam Clarke; "nothing is impossible to him who wills." But the highest cultivation of the mental life will not alone satisfy the deepest and richest part of our nature.

The spiritual life must be attained, and this life can be cultivated as well as any other part of our nature. Consecrate your whole being to the Lord Jesus. Take him as a present and all-sufficient Savior. Then by prayer, the reading of God's Word, the social and public means of grace, and by loving service to others, broaden and deepen the spiritual life.

To a life thus consecrated and developed, eternity offers the glorious prospect of an endless unfolding. Michael Angelo, when an old man past ninety and almost blind, was found in a garden feeling of an ancient statue which he could scarcely see, and when asked what he was doing, answered: "I am learning still." We are all builders, and the highest dome of thought and character that we rear in this world will be but the platform upon which we shall stand when we enter the life immortal.—Rev. Jesse S. Gilbert, A. M., in Epworth Herald.

FINANCES IN THE HOME.

A lack of sound business understanding between husband and wife has been the ruin of more homes than poverty. When a man and woman enter into a marriage—that most important partnership in life—both members in the new firm should have a distinct appreciation of the financial situation, and, as the years pass, the firm's profits and losses should come within the equal knowledge of both.

So would be avoided much of the unhappiness that arises from the husband's thinking his wife extravagant, or the wife's thinking her husband stingy. Nothing is more discouraging to a man than to see his hard-earned money thrown recklessly away on luxuries he feels that only the families of richer men can afford; but often this expenditure is due, not to willfulness on the wife's part, but to simply not knowing how much her husband can afford to have her spend. He is often over-indulgent. She tells him of two bonnets; one is five dollars more than the other, and she doesn't know whether she ought to get it—"but it is a dear of a bonnet," she adds, and he, too weakly loving, tells her "to buy it and look pretty," and then when the bill comes in he broods over his expenses.

At another time she asks for money to buy a certain piece of bric-a-brac, and meets with a refusal, and, at a loss to reconcile her husband's former generosity with the present denial, inwardly decides that he is "close."

Both of these misunderstandings are due to a want of mutual advice and confidence concerning the household treasury.

The way to avoid the unhappiness that such misunderstandings invariably bring about, is for the wife to have an allowance for household expenses, knowing exactly what ratio this allowance bears to her husband's whole income. Whether the allowance be large or small will really matter very little in a home that is established on the above sound-money basis.—Dixie Farmer.

BETTER THAN THE BEST HOTEL.

"Home life cements the love of husband and wife; other modes of living often loosen the tie," writes Edward W. Bok in the November Ladies' Home Journal. "Nor does the question of expense excuse the not having of one's own home. A home is not, of necessity, a palace. The humblest cottage is a million times better than the most luxurious hotel ever planned by the hands of man. In the one happiness is probable; in the other it is just possible. We can talk all we choose about married happiness; that it, after all, rests solely between two people, and that it makes no difference where they live. That is very good as a theory. But thousands of instances prove the contrary, that the theory will not work out in practice. Happiness depends upon the growth of the people who are parts of it. People who stop and stagnate are never happy. True happiness thrives on what it feeds upon. Let stagnation enter into two lives, and happiness becomes stagnant and unhealthy. But let our lives be filled with contentment, with domestic pleasure, with that germ of evolution which springs from the hearthstone, and the happiness which springs from those elements is purer, sweeter and more satisfying to our natures, our minds and our souls. A man and wife were made to abide together in inseparable lives, and as new elements come into that union to sweeten and hallow it, the abiding-place should be some little place, some corner of this big world which they can call their own, their very own, where everything around them speaks of the husband's energy and the wife's achievement. That is home."

SMALL COURTESIES.

One evening last week I entered a room where several young people, with books and work, were sitting around the lamp. The young man with the lexicon and the grammar on the table before him was the busiest of the group, but he instantly arose and remained standing until I had taken my seat.

The little action was automatic; the habit of this family is to practice small courtesies, and the boys have been trained from childhood to pay deference to a woman. They always rise whenever a lady, their mother, sister, friend, or the guest of the house, comes into the room where they are at work; they place chairs gallantly and gracefully for ladies at the dinner table, and take off their hats when they meet their mother on the street, and never kiss her with a hat on; in saying good-morning or good-evening to her, it is hat in hand. Her bundles are carried, her way is made easy, a beautiful politeness waits for her word in the domestic discussion, and refrains from interrupting her even in the most heated argument.

Neither mother nor sister goes out after dark without an escort. One of the boys can always go out of his way, or find it in his way, to see her safely to a friend's door, or to the meeting which she wishes to attend. Most winning and sweet is the air of good breeding which these young men have acquired, which they wear with an unconscious grace.

Equally charming are the manners of the girls in the home I speak of; gentle, soft-spoken, appreciative, considerate, reverential. To old people they are tender, to children kind, to each other lovely.

One can not too sedulously look after the small courtesies in one's conduct, and, if one be charged with the management of the household, in the accustomed ways of the family. Habits count for everything here, and example is better than precept.—Margaret E. Sangster, in Interior.

PURITANICAL.

Thinking of the old paths and how the fathers and mothers walked in them, we could not help wishing that the Christian families of to-day walked even as they walked. They had family altars. They catechised their children. They encouraged and required them to memorize the Scriptures. They believed in the Bible, the whole Bible, as the Word of God. A "thus saith the Lord" was to them the end of all controversy. They went reverently and gladly to the house of God, even when it rained and snowed and the Winter winds were cold and cutting. We of this generation owe much of such piety as we have to the early training which we sometimes thought was too strict, and which this liberal age calls "Puritanical." But it was good for us, and it would be good for our children.—Word and Way.

HAVE YOU TRIED SWAMP-ROOT?

THIS EMINENT PHYSICIAN'S GREAT DISCOVERY PROMPTLY CURES ALL KIDNEY, BLADDER AND URIC ACID TROUBLES.

TO PROVE ITS WONDERFUL MERITS EVERY NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE READER MAY HAVE A SAMPLE BOTTLE SENT FREE BY MAIL.

It is now conceded by eminent scientists that the most important organs of the whole body are the kidneys.

They filter your blood and work away night and day, whether you sleep or are awake.

People are apt to believe that kidney disease is a rather rare disease, but recent discoveries have proven that it is a most common trouble.

And the proof of this is that most diseases, perhaps 85 per cent., are caused in the beginning by disorders of the kidneys.

BECAUSE they fail to filter your blood.

You can not be sick if your blood is pure—free from kidney poison and disease-breeding germs.

The treatment of some diseases may be delayed without danger; not so with kidney disease.

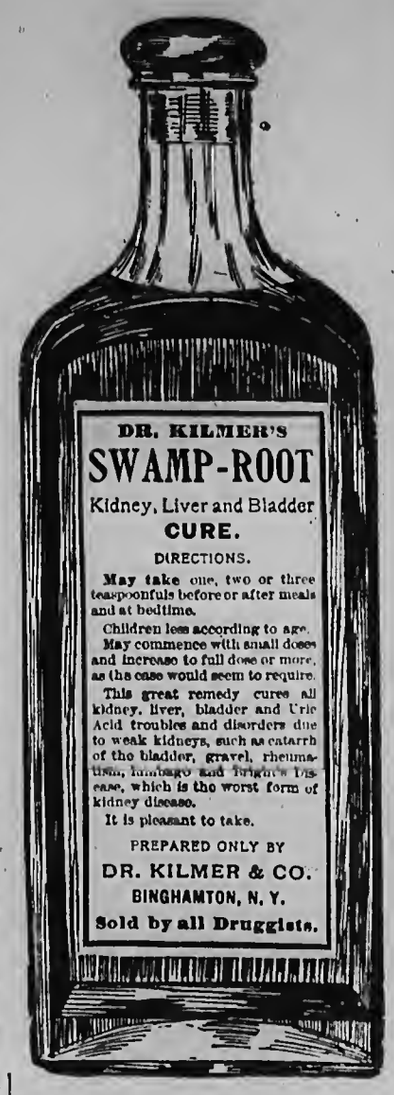
When your kidneys are not doing their work it will be manifested by pain or dull ache in the back, rheumatic pains, sciatica, sediment in the urine, scanty supply, scalding irritation in passing it, obliged to go often during the day and to get up during the night, uric acid, sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, sallow, unhealthy complexion, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, loss of energy and ambition.

If your water, when allowed to remain undisturbed for twenty-four hours, forms a sediment or settling, or has a cloudy appearance, it is evidence that your kidneys and bladder need immediate attention.

Swamp-Root is a vegetable remedy, the great discovery of Dr. Kilmer (the eminent kidney and bladder specialist) and has truly wonderful restorative powers over the kidneys. It will be found by both men and women just what is needed in all cases of kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles.

Swamp-Root will set your whole system right.

The best proof of this is a trial, and nothing could be fairer than the offer to send a sample bottle



DR. KILMER'S

DIRECTIONS.
May take one, two or three teaspoonfuls before or after meals and at bedtime.
Children less according to age.
May commence with small doses and increase to full dose or more, as the case would seem to require.
This great remedy cures all kidney, liver, bladder and Uric Acid troubles and disorders due to weak kidneys, such as catarrh of the bladder, gravel, rheumatism, lumbago and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney disease.
It is pleasant to take.

of this great remedy and a book telling all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail to any address.

The great discovery, Swamp-Root, is so remarkably successful that our readers are advised to write for a free sample bottle and to kindly mention NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE when sending their addresses to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can get the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar bottles at the drug stores.

HYGIENIC VALUE OF FRUITS IN DISEASE.

Dr. Dupoury, a French physician, celebrated for his scientific investigations in dietary matters, in an article printed in a Paris journal, considers the hygienic value of fruits. He divides fruit into five classes, each one of which possesses a special hygienic value—the acid, the sweet, the astringent, the oily and the mealy. To the first, including cherries, strawberries, raspberries, gooseberries, peaches, apples, lemons and oranges, he accords great merit. Cherries, however, he prohibits entirely to those affected with neuralgia of the stomach. Strawberries and raspberries he recommends warmly to those of bilious, plethoric and gouty temperament, and denies them to those whom diabetes is present or suspected. Of the sweet fruit he considers that plums are of special hygienic value, and even a preventive in gout, and, particularly, rheumatism. To the grape he accords the very first place. He is an ardent advocate of what in Europe is called the grape cure. In this cure grapes for several days form the exclusive aliment. The patient commences with the consumption of from one to two pounds daily, with a gradual increase to eight or ten pounds. After a few days of this diet a marked improvement in the general health is noticeable. The appetite improves, the digestion becomes easy and rapid, and increased capacity to withstand the fatigue of outdoor exercise is noticeable. The grape cure is particularly recommended to the anæmic, dyspeptic and consumptive, in diseases of the liver and in gout.—California Fruit Grower.

EMRICK—With all the sunshine God sends into each home, and with all the blessings he showers upon each individual, sometimes, in his infinite love and wisdom, he sees fit to cast a gloomy, dark shadow across the path of those who serve him, worship him, and glorify him to the best of their knowledge and strength; and often our frail human intellect does not enable us to comprehend the meaning of the shadow; but when it comes in the form of death, and robs the home circle of one of its most loved and lovely members, we are prone to enquire, "Why does the Father deal such crushing blows to his children of earth?" But, however this may be, it is done, and we must submit with meekness and humility, and say, "Not my will be done, but thine, O Lord!" For ETHEL EMRICK is no more! After a short illness of two days she succumbed to fever on Oct. 24 at her home in Hermanville, Miss. All that loving parents, kind friends and superior medical skill could do for her was done, but it seemed "her task on earth was done." Her suffering was intense throughout her entire illness, but she bore it with patience and fortitude, and died happy in the thought of meeting her Savior.

Ethel Emrick was the eldest child of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Emrick, and was born Aug. 8, 1880. Though her life was a brief one, it was one of usefulness in her home, her school, and her community. She was a loving, devoted, faithful sister and daughter; an earnest, obedient and loyal pupil, and firm, true and sincere friend. She had been a faithful member of the Methodist Church for nearly two years, and was a pupil of the Hermanville High School. The faculty and students of her school marched in a body with her funeral procession to the M. E. Church, where services were held by the pastor, Rev. A. D. Miller. Her classmates, Lindsay Torrey, Calvin McMurphy, Ruins Purvis, Joe Walters, Oscar French and M. C. Foster, acted as pall bearers. Her remains were laid to rest in the village cemetery, which places her in the shadow of the high school building, where she now sleeps under a bed of roses, which were placed there by loving friends.

What a life of promise and unselfishness cut short! How hard to realize she has gone from home and friends forever! How sad and lonely her parents are without her! But what a consolation to know she is where sorrow never comes, where joy unspeakable prevails, and where ever lasting peace reigns supreme!

May the good Lord comfort her parents and prompt them to let their "hearts be where their treasure is!" For

"There is no death!
What seems so is transition.
This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portal we call death."

Hermanville, Miss.

JONES—Mrs. MOLLIE E. JONES, daughter of M. J. and S. J. Babb, was born Nov. 19, 1856. She was happily married to Mr. H. B. B. Jones, Jan. 12, 1876; was converted Aug. —, 1873, at Kossuth, under the ministry of Bros. Bounds and D. W. Babb (her brother), and united with the M. E. Church, South, from which time she lived a devoted Christian. She was the mother of seven or eight children. She lived to see all those children happily converted and join the church of which she was a member, except the two youngest.

Sister Jones was sick three months, but bore it with all the patience characteristic of a Christian. She submitted to death with all the meekness and calmness that one could. She talked to husband and children; told them to meet her in heaven, and asked the Lord to bless and keep them, and expressed perfect satisfaction that he would. She told her sister to tell her three brothers to meet her in heaven. One brother fell asleep at his post in West Point, Miss.; and Bro. D. W. Babb, pastor of Louisville circuit, and Bro J. G. Babb, L. P., in Corinth circuit, and Bro. Eugene Babb, a faithful member of the same church, are the three brothers.

Sister Jones died as she lived, in the triumphs of a living faith, and went home to heaven; hence we do not weep as those who have no hope. We shall meet again in the sweet by and by, where sickness and death never come.

May God comfort and sustain the bereaved husband, children, and brothers!

Borne by angels on their wings,
Far from earth the spirit flies;
Finds her God, and sits, and sings,
Triumphing in paradise.

G. R. E. FELLOWS.

Corinth, Miss.

WALKER—Bro. ELLIS ERASTUS WALKER, the subject of this obituary, was born Sept. 8, 1873; joined the M. E. Church, South, at New Prospect Camp Ground in 1888; was happily converted at Palmer Camp Meeting in 1884 under the pastorate of Rev. C. F. Gillespie, and died at Chickamauga, Ga., Sept. 8, 1898.

Bro. Walker, at the outbreak of the Spanish war, feeling it his duty to fight for the rights of suffering humanity, responded to the first note of the bugle's war cry, becoming a member of the First Mississippi Volunteers. In all the walks of life he held on to his Christian integrity. As a soldier, he was true and faithful to duty. At divine services (regimental) his bright face was always present to gladden the heart of his loving chaplain, Rev. F. M. Keen, of the Mississippi Conference, and to take some humble part in the worship. At home, his seat in the church and his place in the choir were never vacant in times of service, unless unavoidably hindered. In the home with loved ones his sunny nature and loving smiles brought rays of light and joy to the loving father, mother, brother and sisters, whose hearts are now torn and bleeding. He was a model, and great indeed is the loss which the community, his family and the church have sustained. But, thank God! "our loss is his eternal gain." He is to-day basking in the sunlight of God's eternal glory,

Where marshal robe is never worn,
Nor noise is heard of fife and drum;
Where belching cannon's awful roar
Is heard by none on that bright shore.

God bless the bereaved ones, and help them to meet their precious soldier boy where parting is no more!

G. R. E.

WATKINS—Mrs. ANNA WATKINS, wife of B. F. Watkins, died at their home at Hays, Miss., Oct. —, 1898. During her illness, which was very severe, she was beautifully patient, and full of perfect trust in the God she had trusted through life. With not a cloud between her and her Father's house, she went to be with Christ, leaving husband, three children, mother and three grandchildren to wait God's time to join her in heaven.

In early life she joined the Methodist Church, afterward uniting with the Baptist Church, to be with her husband. Her Christian life was exemplary, and its influence will speak to loved ones for years to come. Such a life is an adornment to the gospel of Christ; a faith that keeps one in the narrow way "till life's last hour has fled;" calm and serene in all her trials and afflictions remembering that "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth."

Charity was the first and chief element in the make-up of her beautiful Christian character. She left a carefully written "diary," which will be a blessing to her children. "Death loves a shining mark!" When we see her she will be like her Savior, for she will "see him as he is." Then let us endure as seeing him "who is invisible." Of a truth her loved ones can say they "weep not as those who have no hope."

FRASER—RICHARD ANDREW FRASER was born in Kimonion, Metcalf county, Ky., Jan. 25, 1828, and died in Mansfield, La., Oct. 9, 1898. He entered the Confederate Army as a volunteer in Missouri in 1861, and served to the close. He was discharged in Shreveport, La., and he soon afterward located in Mansfield, which continued to be his home till his removal to his home on high. He united with the Methodist Church when sixteen years of age, and continued a faithful member till death. He was a man of sterling integrity, of great fortitude, true devotion, and strong faith. For many years he suffered much, but bore his pain with patient submission to the divine will. He never murmured. He said to the writer a short time before his death, "I have peace," and that he was ready to live or die, as God might choose for him. He was a good man; he lived well; his end was peace; he "rests from his labors," and his "works do follow him."

He was married to Miss Amanda McElhenny in October, 1867. Of this happy union seven children were born, all of whom are worthy descendants of such a father, reflecting in their lives the careful, godly training and example of their father and their excellent mother. He was a devoted, faithful and loving companion, and a tender and affectionate father. A pious and bereaved companion and sorrowing children cherish with deep tenderness the memory of such a husband and father, and all of them rise up and call him blessed, for "the memory of the just is blessed."

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Bishop Brooks seldom put into smaller compass a weightier truth than when he said, "Prayer is not conquering God's reluctance, but laying hold upon God's willingness." Our own reluctance to accept God's will has often to be conquered before we can be brought into right relations with the Father, and we sometimes call this struggle prayer, but it is hardly the right name for it.—Exchange.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

The man who finds most fault with the Bible is probably the one who has made the least trial of it in his life. If we test its principles by our practice, we shall find them true and constant.—Exchange.

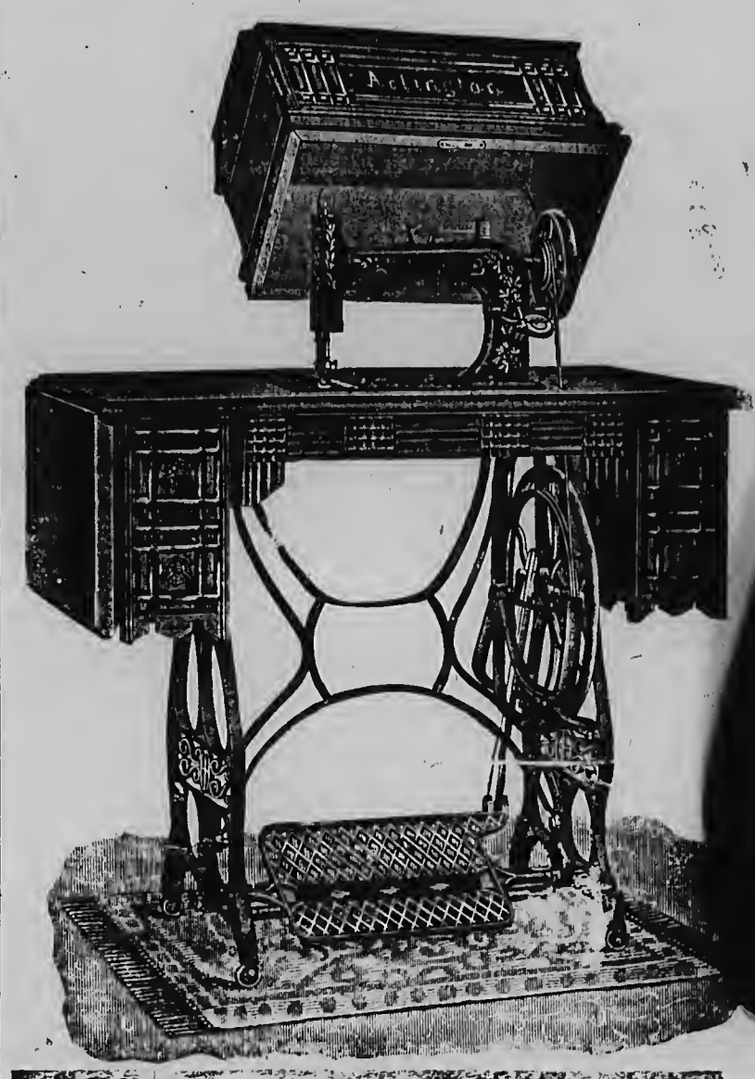
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-trailer, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock-stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great length; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Bishop Hurst is enthusiastic over the American University, of which he is the head, and he declares that he will get $1,000,000 from the Methodists of Pennsylvania alone.

It has come to light through an investigation made by the Cuban military authorities that the Spaniards, in evacuating the interior towns of Morron and Ciego de Avila, Cuba, poisoned the water in the public cisterns used by the Cubans, and scores of them have died as a result.

Antwerp is preparing to celebrate the three hundredth anniversary of the birth of Vandyke. It has been decided to hold an exhibition of the works of the Dutch master, and Belgian and foreign collectors who are fortunate enough to possess specimens of the Flemish painter's work will be asked to lend their assistance to the movement.

General Calixto Garcia, the distinguished Cuban warrior and leader, and the head of the commission elected by the Cuban assembly to visit this country, died in Washington, where the commission has its headquarters, on Dec. 11. The sudden change from the warm climate of Cuba, with the hardships he had endured, to the wintry weather of New York and Washington, is responsible for the pneumonia which resulted in his demise.

The dedication, on Dec. 11, of a handsome iron fence inclosing the plot of ground in the cemetery in which rests the remains of the sailors who were killed in the explosion of the battle-ship "Maine," as well as four men from the "Winslow," one from the "Marblehead," one from the "Newport," one from the "Yankee" and thirty-seven others killed during the rebellion, was the occasion of one of the greatest demonstrations ever witnessed.

On Dec. 6 United States Senator Caffery, of Louisiana, introduced a bill for the construction of a wide, deep channel from the deep water of Mississippi river to the deep water of the Gulf of Mexico. It provides that the Secretary of War be and is authorized and directed to construct such sufficient jetties and auxiliary works as are necessary to create and maintain a navigable channel, not less than three hundred feet wide and thirty-five feet deep at mean low water of the Gulf, through Southwest Pass from deep water in the Mississippi river to deep water in the Gulf of Mexico.

The treaty of peace which has just been concluded by the United States with Spain requires that the "open door" policy of trade shall be established as to the Philippine Islands. "Open door," in this connection, means that all nations shall be permitted to trade with the Philippine Islands on precisely the same conditions as are set up for the commerce of the United States. In a word, if the United States shall open the Philippines free of tax or duty to the products of the United States, all other nations shall be permitted to land their products in the Philippines on the same terms—that is, free of all tax or duty.

There were bloody disturbances in Havana on Sunday, caused by the Spanish soldiers who are on duty there shooting promiscuously at people in the streets and in the Hotel Ingleterra. Some Cubans wanted to secure the closing of the theatres on Sunday night, out of respect to the death of the Cuban general, Garcia. The Spanish soldiers, who are still on duty in Havana notwithstanding that Spain has surrendered Cuba to the United States, prevented the closing of the Tacon Theatre. This caused an altercation, as a result of which the Spaniards repeatedly fired on the people in the streets and houses, killing several and wounding many.

Very discouraging rumors are afloat regarding the prospects of the Paris Exposition of 1900. But little real progress has been made on the huge buildings, and it is thought possible the exposition may be postponed until 1901, though the latter course would meet with intense opposition and inflict severe and widespread losses. President Faure has visited the site and endeavored to stimulate the work. But, what with the recent strike and certain difficulties between the municipality and the government, the prospects of its completion in time are none of the brightest. Moreover, the Metropolitan railroad can not now be ready for 1900.

The treaty of peace between the United States and Spain was concluded on Saturday at Paris, and signed by the Commissioners of both nations. The treaty must still be ratified by both nations before it is final. The treaty itself, after some preliminary expressions of a desire that the friendly relations shall be re-established between the two nations, cedes Porto Rico and the Philippines, and also the Island of Guam in the Ladrones group, to the United States, while Spanish sovereignty over Cuba is relinquished. Provisions are made for the evacuation by the Spanish soldiers of all the surrendered territory and for the exchange of all prisoners held by the Spaniards, the Filipinos, the Cubans and the Americans. The sum of $20,000,000 is to be paid to Spain for the Philippines.

THE JOY OF SYMPATHY.

He has an unfailing source of pleasure who has learned to enter largely into the joys of others. Paul was always happy, because, although in chains, he always knew of some one else who was happy. Jesus himself, although a "man of sorrows and acquainted with grief," always had a joy set before him. And the follower of Jesus to-day has an unfailing source of joy in that he can always find either some one who is happy, or some one who can be made happy.—United Presbyterian.

CATARRH in the head is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which eradicates from the blood the scrofulous taints that cause it, soothing and rebuilding the delicate and diseased tissues.

Each day read your chapter or passage with the idea that you are receiving your marching orders, that there is some new service to render, some new duty to perform, some new virtue to acquire. Let the attitude of your soul be indicated by Samuel's word, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth." When you hear, do.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

Do not be disconcerted by the fits of vexation and uneasiness which are sometimes produced by the multiplicity of your domestic worries. No, indeed, dearest child, all these are but opportunities of strengthening yourself in the loving, forbearing graces which our dear Lord sets before us.—Francis de Sales.

To believe in him is to be like him. All other faith is a mere mist of words dissolving into empty air. To live our human lives as he lived his—purely, lovingly, righteously—is to share his eternity.—Lucy Larcom.

EPWORTH COLLEGE.

THE STUDENTS OF EPWORTH COLLEGE

Will enjoy a literary feast of rare excellence during the remainder of the session. On the evening of Dec. 23d, Miss Sallie McGee Isom (University, Miss.) will give, in the College Chapel, a Shaksperian Recital, and in February, "Scenes from 'Quo Vadis.'"

Beginning January 5th, Miss Clara Conway, of Memphis, will give a series of six lectures, dispensed through first and second week of January (three each week).

SUBJECTS.

1. How to Enrich the Vocabulary.
2. The Abuse of the Superlative.
3. A Study of Verbs.
4. Common Errors.
5. The Value of Science.
6. Ethics of Conversation.

We have in preparation what we will call our Easter Program, that will be of great educational value; and, better still, we have a course of study mapped out especially for pupils who enter after Christmas, that for real, true educational worth will approximate the work of a whole session.

Write for terms, and come and spend five months with us, and meet and hear the most distinguished readers and lecturers in the South. Address

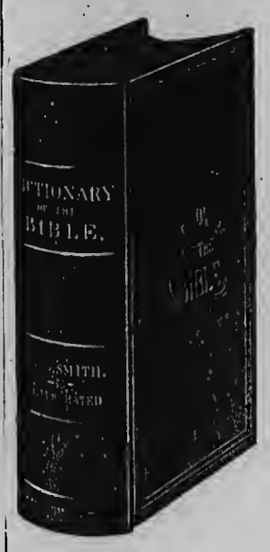
Smith's Dictionary OF THE BIBLE.



Comprising Its Antiquities, Biography, Geography, and NATURAL HISTORY.

EDITED BY WM. SMITH, LL. D.,
Classical Examiner of the University of London.

This great work prepared under the direction and superintendence of Dr. Smith himself contains every name in the Bible and Apocrypha of which anything can be said; gives an account of each of the books of the Bible; explains the civil and religious institutions, the manners and customs, while many of the longer articles, being the results of the most finished scholarship, are complete treatises in themselves; embraces the results of the most successful and approved biblical labors and researches, constituting an indispensable aid to ministers, teachers, families, Sunday-school superintendents, and Bible readers generally.

The simple explanations of this work, unlike the expositions of a commentary, admit of no denominational or sectarian coloring and it is therefore equally valuable to Bible readers of every diversity of belief.

This is, undoubtedly, the best work of its kind in the English language, and has no rival in importance for the elucidation of the scenes and facts of Scripture.

The work contains 1024 large octavo pages, over 150 illustrations and maps engraved especially for this work and is handsomely and strongly bound in cloth. Publishers' price, $4.50.

To any person who will pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: To December, '99, we will sell this magnificent book postpaid for $2. Send in your order at once, as this offer may soon be withdrawn. Address

WILLING.

It may not be on the mountain's height,
Or over the stormy sea;
It may not be at the battle's front
My Lord will have need of me;
But if by a still, small voice he calls
To paths that I do not know,
I'll answer, dear Lord, with my hand in thine,
I'll go where you want me to go.

Perhaps to-day there are loving words
Which Jesus would have me speak;
There may be now in the paths of sin
Some wanderer whom I should seek;
O Savior, if thou wilt be my guide,
Though dark and rugged the way,
My voice shall echo thy message sweet,
I'll say what you want me to say.

There's surely somewhere a lowly place
In earth's harvest fields so wide,
Where I may labor through life's short day
For Jesus, the crucified.
So trusting my all to thy tender care,
And knowing thou lovest me,
I'll do thy will with a heart sincere,
I'll be what you want me to be.

TRANSMUTING KNOWLEDGE INTO POWER.

In an address to teachers Horace Greeley once said: "I have known not less than a thousand thoroughly educated—that is, expensively educated—men in New York; men who have entered German or English or American colleges, and have been sent forth with diplomas, who are yet utterly unable to earn their own bread, and who are to-day pacing the stony streets in a vain search for something to do."

While it is an undeniable truth that in a large majority of cases a college education is an inestimable advantage to one, whatever his calling may be, whether professional or manual, it also remains an undeniable truth that a certain minority find their learning but an accumulation of so much dead matter which lumbers the brain and congests the mind, while adding nothing to the executive ability.

This is an intensely practical age. Common sense is the genius of the century. The mere theorist will soon find his occupation gone. Men care very little about what might do, or what ought to do, but they want to know what "will" do.

The college or university of the twentieth century will either have to conform its curriculum to the practical needs of the world, or it will be scholarless.

Not long ago a traveler found three graduates working on a sheep farm in Australia. One was from Oxford, one from Cambridge, and the other from a German university—college men tending brutes. Trained to lead men, they were driving sheep. The owner of the ranch was an ignorant, rough, coarse sheep-raiser. The quotations of poetry and Latin and Greek, the discussions of theories or philosophies of his hired men were "all Greek" to him. He knew nothing about books or theories, but he knew sheep, and made a fortune out of them, while the others could scarcely get a living. The universities which had graduated these men were powerless to supply gray brain matter, or stamina, or push, or practical talent. All they could do was to work over the material which the students brought, polish it a little, change its form, and make it a little more artistic possibly, but they were powerless to change its quality. The student who brought partially cultivated brains would carry away brains better cultivated, but that was all.

The prime object of education is power; ability to better cope with men and things, to become more efficient in the great struggle for existence.

A head filled with disconnected facts, disjointed ideas, a head full of knowledge, is not necessarily educated. A man may be a great eater, and yet not be strong, if the system does not digest and assimilate his food, and make it into blood, bone, and sinew. A student may stuff his brain with facts at school, and yet come out almost as weak as he entered. He may take high rank, and yet not have half the power of the slow, stupid boy who takes the lowest rank. The memory is one of the lowest faculties of the brain; it is merely a receptacle. Its function is to hold, not to use; to retain, not to make available. The latter office belongs to the other and higher powers of the brain.

Some students seem to be injured by their training, for they have their heads crammed with facts and theories, and have a firm conviction that they are infinitely better fitted thereby for the great struggle of life. They look upon their diplomas as insurance policies against failure. They are graduates from colleges and universities—why shouldn't they succeed? Why should they begin at the bottom, where the boy begins who has never seen the inside of such institutions? No, they will wait for a good opportunity, a good salary, and, while they are waiting, the poor boy with "no chance," but with push and determination, has seized the place which the graduate was waiting for. He has not neglected his practical faculties. He can convert every bit of information he can get, every scrap from a newspaper or magazine, and every experience of life, into mental and moral strength, which will better help him to grapple with men and things. He gets his power at first hand from realities. There is no doubt that such a boy would be infinitely benefited by a college training, but he can win fair success without it.

It often happens that the boy who takes the highest rank in school takes the lowest rank in real, practical life.

What to do with the ever-increasing army of graduates yearly turned out of our higher institutions is a great problem. While many of them have been almost transformed by their education, and their efficiency for life doubled many times, others seem to have lost their ability to grapple with men and things.

True education increases a student's strength to grasp, to hold, to utilize. A really educated man has a peculiar faculty of transforming knowledge into power. Such ability is the secret of success.

No circumstance, no college, can give this peculiar transforming power. If a boy does not take it to the institution, he will not carry it away. If he has brought a great lump of putty, he will take putty away. It may be in more elegant shape, it may be modified in appearance, but it is putty still. If he has brought a lump of gold, no matter how crude he may be, how awkward, dull of energy, and wholly unconscious of the prize he has brought, he will take gold away.

If the mental scythe is made of good steel, the college grindstone will bring it to an edge and enable it to do more effective work; but if the scythe is made of soft iron, all the college grindstones in the world will not make it effective.

It was said of a great French scholar, "He was drowned in his talents." We sometimes see college graduates who, like the architectural ornaments in some European structures, have been carved and polished so much that there is no strength left to support the building. They have been ornamented to death.

Young man, do not lumber your mind with merely ornamental knowledge to the detriment of the effective, practical knowledge which alone can aid you in life's struggles.—Success.

WINSOME PREACHING.

It is undeniable that a speaker, just because he is a master of the art of saying things, can secure a hearing where a better man who lacks this gift can get no hearing at all. If the world were what it ought to be, virtue would always and everywhere outrank mere accomplishment. But the world being what it is, and being especially susceptible to the charm of outward graces, must be dealt with on the basis of its susceptibilities if it is ever to be subdued and shaped to better things. And, then, there is no necessary antagonism between the content and the form of truth. The truth is not less the truth because it has a beautiful setting, and it is entirely beside the mark to say, as many do say, that the work of a brilliant writer of history is the less reliable because of its brilliancy. Dullness is not the only genuine signature of truth.

There are preachers who have a horror of rhetorical training, and who hold it to be a reflection on the Almighty that they should in any way take pains to make his message attractive by any art of man. They pride themselves upon being plain men of God, declaring the truth just as it comes to them, scorning the tricks of the rhetorician and giving their people a "straight" gospel, whether they will hear or whether they will forbear. The type is still common, though less influential than formerly and having a shadow growing steadily less. As a matter of fact, such preachers were and are following, not their Master, but a bad example. From the rhetorical point of view there is no more beautiful or artistic book than the Bible; and its loveliness reaches its ripest perfection in the sayings of Jesus. Those who, for sensational effect, always refer to the apostles as "poor and illiterate" fishermen, and especially those who do so that they may secure Scripture endorsement for a poor and illiterate sermon, are not dealing honestly with the facts. There is abundant evidence to show that our Lord's disciples were neither poor nor illiterate; and, so far as the writers of the New Testament are concerned, we know that Luke and Paul were professionally trained. The books of the Old Testament, notably the Psalter and the books of Job and of Isaiah, all exhibit the highest literary skill and proficiency; and though Amos was a herdsman and a dresser of sycamore trees, and Micah was a peasant, the works bearing their names show an art of composition as marked as it is original. If a man proposes to deliver God's message after the Bible model and standard, he will find it necessary to use all his diligence, all his skill and all his knowledge to approach in any degree that quality of enduring beauty which has made the Bible the Book of books to so many hearts through so many centuries. Fra Angelico is said to have painted with the conviction that he was inspired so to do, and, consequently, he would never alter what his brush had touched. Now, Fra Angelico had an exceptional gift; but even with his exceptional gift, critics are all agreed that his work would have been better if he had vouchsafed a better treatment to his inspiration. Raphael, on the other hand, who would spend weeks upon the drawing of a single muscle, vindicated his industry by disciplining God's gift to him to its most perfect expression, so that he might become the greatest painter in the world.

The pulpit was made for man, not man for the pulpit; and the preacher who fails of making his pulpit a center of attraction will just as surely fall of making it a center of power. It is not simply that he must have something important to say; he must also train himself to say it in the most effective way. Now, so long as man is compounded of reason, emotion, and a sense of beauty, he will not be tolerant of a leader who, in the name of God, argues with him as if he were a logic-chopper, or rants at him as if he were a mass of flabby sensibility. Man requires in a leader that note of authority which comes only of a message known in the fibers of experience to be a divine message, and accredited by a delivery which directs itself at the very citadel of his conscience through every avenue—rational, emotional, and esthetic—of his nature. The preacher who imagines this can be done without infinite painstaking in preparation misjudges terribly the character of his work. He has a message from God. That message must first be clear to himself, but in making it clear to himself he is dependent upon the words by which he defines it to himself. Then he must make it clear to his people; but his only means of communication is by the symbolism of the Word. To fail at either point—in understanding it himself or in communicating it—is for the preacher to dishonor his commission and vitiate his message.

But granting an understanding of the message and a measure of clearness in communicating it, does the responsibility of the preacher end here? By no means. There still remains the responsibility of so preparing it that by the mere beauty of its presentation it will command and keep attention, for beauty has a universal and fadeless quality which will commend truth so linked to all classes of minds and perpetuate it through all ages. It is just the difference between saying a thing any way and saying it the best possible way that makes the difference between a thing speedily forgotten and a thing forever remembered. Sermons would be more welcome as literature were preachers as anxious about the permanence of their message as poets are about their favorite creations. And, as literature, why might not their influence and power be working long after the hand that wrote them had vanished and the voice that uttered them was still? Surely a minister may honorably desire to perpetuate his ministry and commend his message by a style clear, strong and beautiful as that of the Book which he expounds and which abides, in no small measure, by virtue of its style.

Such preaching would require much painstaking, tedious and exhausting work, for the mastery of such style, like Raphael's mastery of form, is not come at rapidly or easily. It is, in the main, the achievement of a patient and pitiless self-criticism in the light of a familiar acquaintance with the few great writers whose message has achieved an enduring bearing, and of an unreserved consecration to the work of making the gospel of the Son of God the most winsome and most beautiful message the world has ever heard.—North western Advocate.

HOW AMERICANS ARE REVOLUTIONIZING TURKEY.

Writing under date of Nov. 14 from Constantinople, Mr. William T. Stead says:

"Judged by results, the Spanish war has made mighty little return for a prodigious expenditure compared with the returns already realized and to be realized from the peaceful campaign which America is waging in the Ottoman Empire. By an expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars and the sacrifice of over 2000 men the United States has succeeded in ousting the moribund sovereignty of Spain from a couple of islands near her own shores and of raising a question as to her continued dominion in the Philippines. The results achieved by the infliction of hideous suffering upon the unfortunate islanders, whose relief was the main object of the war, small though they be, represent probably the best and quickest dividend ever earned by modern war.

"Compare this result with those achieved by the Americans, who for the last thirty years have been patiently, silently laboring for the regeneration of that composite of wrecked kingdoms, principalities and nationalities called the Ottoman Empire. Thirty years ago a couple of Americans, Christian men, with heads on their shoulders, settled in Turkey and set about teaching on American methods the rising youth of the East in an institution called the Robert College. They have never from that day to this had at their command a greater income than $30,000 or $40,000 a year.

"HAVE NO HAND IN POLITICS.

"They have taken no hand in politics. They have abstained from identifying themselves with any sect, nationality or party. They have stuck to their appointed task, and they are still sticking to it. They have insisted that every student within their walls shall be thoroughly trained on the American principles, which, since they were imported by the men of the Mayflower, have well nigh made the tone of the world. They taught all these students fine languages, but they never hesitated to proclaim that, though they spoke with all the tongues under heaven, it was but foolishness, unless the moral and spiritual character of the student was trained and molded by religious men. Mental development, spiritual discipline, is the more essential part of education. The true object of college education is the development of the faculties and the formation of character. That was their line, and they have stuck to it now for thirty-four years, with the result that the American college is to-day the chief hope of the future of the millions who inhabit the Sultan's dominions. They have 200 students in the college to-day, but they have trained and sent out into the world thousands of bright, brainy young fellows who have carried the leaven of the American town meeting into all the provinces of the Ottoman Empire. Robert College men are turning up everywhere. If the good work goes on, the alumni of this American institution will be able to supply the personnel of the civilized administration which must some day supersede the barbaric horror that is at present misnamed the government of Turkey.

"The one great thing done in the making of States in the last quarter of the century was the creation of the Bulgarian principality. But the Bulgarian principality, the resurrection of the Bulgarian nationality, although materially achieved by the sword of the liberating and avenging hordes of Russia, was due primarily to the Robert College.

"It was the Americans who sowed the seed. It was the men of Robert College who took into Bulgaria the glad news of a good time coming, when Bulgaria would be free. When the Turks, scared by the propaganda of liberty, descended into savage wrath upon the helpless people with sword and flame, and worse than bestial lusts, to eradicate the newborn national aspirations, it was the Americans who brought the whole horrible truth to the light of day. Mr. Disraeli, then Premier of England, lied about it in his place in Parliament, not even scrupling to falsify dispatches and betray the confidence of his own country in order to shield the Turk. All was in vain. Robert College men were on the spot. Their chief was in constant communication with the ambassadors and journalists of Constantinople. They found in Mr. Sears an English barrister of high standing, a correspondent of the Daily News, a man fearless and capable enough to stand the brunt of making the awful exposure. What followed is a matter of history. The revelation of the truth about the Bulgarian massacres shattered, as by dynamite, the traditional policy of England. Mr. Gladstone sprang into the field. The Russian people, moved to its depth by the stories of the sufferings of their brethren, could not be restrained. The Tsar-Liberator carried the Russian arms in triumph to the very gates of Stamboul. Nor did they return till by the treaty of San Stefano they had created that Bulgarian principality which had been dreamed out on the astral plan by the students of the American College.

"It cost the Sultan $3,000,000 to entertain his friend, the Kaiser. How can he spare $100,000 to compensate the pestilent American?

"I shall never forget the intense conviction with which a fanatical friend of the Sultan once declared to me that there would never be a solution of the Eastern question until an American missionary was impaled and his wife and daughters were flung into the Pasha's harem. He spoke more truly than he knew. Because within one month of such an outrage becoming known to the American people the warships which swept the fleets of Spain from the sea would have forced the Dardanelles and exacted reparation at the cannon's mouth from the assassin of Stamboul.

"And perhaps in the possibility of such a contingency happening any day lies the highest hope that humanity has for the extinction of the devastating despotism of the Turkish horde."—Times-Democrat.

CORPORATION CHAPLAINS.

The old-time charge, so often heard, that railroads, like all great corporations, have no heart, seems with every passing month to be less and less tenable. As a matter of fact railroads are growing to be, if, indeed, they have not ever been, very liberal and humane institutions.

As an instance, however, of the growing tendency of railroads all over the country to care for their employees, the wheel world in the East is all astir over the innovation made by the Chicago and Alton of appointing a chaplain for the road. The Union Pacific, Denver and Gulf has also appointed a chaplain, and railroad people say the Illinois Central has such an appointment under discussion. Just who the Illinois Central chaplain will be remains a matter of speculation as yet. There are no applications for it, for ministers usually do not care to canvass for positions like this. It is said, however, that not only the Illinois Central, but quite a number of other large roads in the country, are discussing the question of chaplains.

The chaplain of a railroad has quite a multitude of duties. Principal among these duties are attendance upon sick or injured employees in the hospitals, rendering assistance at wrecks, officiating at public gatherings in charge of the company, and the maintaining of reading rooms for the employees. Further than this, the spiritual wants of the employees are looked after, so far as circumstances create opportunities. Besides matters like these, which seem to require the attention of the chaplain with some degree of regularity, he divides his spare time among the employees on the trains, in the shops and on the track, often entering into the personal affairs of discharged or suspended men, by interceding with the officials in their behalf, and in cases attempting the reformation of those addicted to unfortunate habits. In addition to this, he supplies literature to employees upon request, and carries in his pocket a supply of tickets good for a loaf of bread or a cup of coffee at bakeries or restaurants in towns along the line, for the benefit of persons in straitened circumstances. The chaplain's time is devoted, therefore, mainly to work of a charitable nature rather than to the performance of formal religious exercises.—Picayune.

God is not a crutch coming in to help your lameness, unnecessary to you if you had all your strength. He is the breath in your lungs. The stronger you are the more thoroughly you are yourself, the more you need of it, the more you need of him.—Phillips Brooks.

"THE ONE THING" NEEDFUL.

BY CHARLES H. DORRIS.

Something to eat, something to wear—
Or more than that ought one to care?

Some place to work, some place to sleep—
For more than that ought one to weep?

Some one to love for love's sweet sake—
For more than that ought hearts to break?

Some place for rest when time to die—
For more than that ought one to sigh?

Some home to enter after death—
For more than that do we waste breath?

No breath to waste—yet waste we breath
On things we leave behind at death,

And oft forget that time and sense
Must look beyond for recompense:

That if His kingdom seek we first,
If we for living waters thirst,

Then all things else shall added be,
Our life be crowned with victory.

FEMALE MEDICAL MISSIONARIES.

Heathens, believing they were serving their gods by mortifying their flesh, have held their hands aloft until they fell palsied at their sides, or have clasped their hands until the nails penetrated the palms. When God called to himself a people from among the heathen and began to educate them, as we begin with a child almost in its nurse's arms, to prepare them that they might receive the Christ, he taught them they must not mortify their bodies, but rather respect them, because they were made in the image of God. He did not spare to go into detail and give specific instructions for their physical welfare.

In that warm country the heat produced by the oxidation of swine's flesh in the body was too great. Consequently, the Jews were commanded not to eat swine flesh. They were enjoined to rest, not only one day out of every seven, but there was a Sabbath of the seventh year, and then every fifty years the great jubilee, the original so popularly imitated in current history. "Six days shalt thou labor" is as clearly commanded as rest on the seventh. That means exercise.

Cleanliness was repeatedly commanded, and the isolation of patients with contagious diseases, for the most stringent laws were enforced to prevent the spread of leprosy. Dietetics, rest, exercise, cleanliness, precautions against contagion—are not those the cardinal principles of hygiene and sanitation to-day? I do not recall anything in regard to ventilation, but when we remember the Jews were living in the open air and in tents, and later the general occupancy of their open courts, we can readily understand the injunction to ventilation was unnecessary.

This, then, is the respect and care that God early showed for the human body, and, at the same time, that he was teaching the Jews, uplifting and elevating them to higher planes and broader conceptions of his attributes, and to a more magnanimous spirit of forgiveness. He was instructing them in the preservation of their bodies.

When Christ came he paid a higher tribute to our bodies. They were not only made in the image of God, but were temples for the indwelling of his Holy Spirit. As he came not to make laws, but to fulfill the law and to enable us to fulfill our obligations, and to forgive transgressions of the law, he forgave the transgressions of the physical law and "healed the sick." Consider how, as he traveled from place to place, he healed all manner of diseases, and how many of his miracles were the restoration to life and health of the sick.

In defining the word "neighbor," in reply to the lawyer who asked its meaning in the divine command, "Love thy neighbor as thyself," he said it was the one, the Samaritan, who bound up the wounds and cared for the man who had been beset by thieves.

Christ, then, thought it not unworthy his divine manhood to minister to suffering humanity in the most loathsome diseases, in filth, upon the most abject objects of charity. Have you noticed the effects of these cures upon their souls? There were probably ingrates among them. Of the ten lepers healed, only one turned back and glorified God, giving thanks. But how many others fell on their knees to give thanks, and were forgiven their sins?

Christ not only taught by his example that the Christian ministry was to physical as well as spiritual needs, but he expressly commanded it. When the twelve apostles were sent out, "he sent them to preach the kingdom of God and to heal the sick"—a command not to be lightly disobeyed, for when the final judgment is pronounced he will say to those on his left hand: "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire. . . . For I was . . . sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not."

In obedience to the fundamental, evangelical principle of our religion, missionary operations have been instituted among the various heathen nations, and Christian people no longer argue their propriety. Time and thought are now given only to the discussion of the best methods of evangelization. Preaching has been aided by teaching, by distributing the Bible in their various tongues, and probably not least by the practice of medicine.

Among heathens generally—Chinese particularly—superstition in regard to the spirits of the dead is so prevalent that they will not dissect human bodies; consequently, they know nothing of anatomy, and intelligent surgery is impossible. They teach that each wrist has three different pulses, and by feeling these a doctor ought to diagnose any case without a further discussion of symptoms. They have some empirical knowledge of the properties of drugs, but of their physiological effects they know almost nothing. Ground tigers' teeth is an excellent tonic with them. Their knowledge of hygiene and sanitation does not compare with what the Jews knew over 3,000 years ago.

Dr. Park, surgeon in charge of Soochow hospital, was called to an official who had received eleven sword wounds. Let me quote from his own description:

"I found him in a room, the doors and windows of which were closed tightly to keep out the air, and what air there was in the room was hot and stifling from six or eight big, sputtering, odoriferous candles used for light, and the thick smoke of a resinous compound they were burning to keep down the smell, and the exhalations from a room full of anxious, smoking, and expectorating friends and relations. The air was so bad that it made my head ache to stay in the room fifteen minutes, and in the midst lay the poor man on a couch, tossing and turning in a raging fever, and complaining of pain in his right hand, which was dangling at the wrist, and which he was holding up and moving to and fro in a way most pitiful to see. The great gashes across his head and face, with a skin flap turned down over his forehead, the whole covered with layer on layer of dirty powder, gave him a most hideous appearance in the dim light, and, in addition, he was covered with dried blood and gore from head to foot, for the original clothes had not been removed, nor the bedding changed, nor his hands and face washed since, weltering in his own blood, he had been placed upon the bed five days before."

Now, that was a high official, aide de camp to the commander of the governor's troops in that province. What, think you, would be the condition of the poorer classes in sickness?

We send physicians. First of all, they must be Christians, for they are under the injunction, "Heal the sick that are therein, and say unto them, The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you." But it is not sufficient that they have the Holy Spirit. They must be skilled and thoroughly equipped for their work. Especially in surgery do we need the best talent, best experience, the best instruments and appliances. Hospitals are needed. It often happens that our physician—sometimes a man, often a woman—has to perform the most serious operations, entirely unassisted, with inadequate instruments and antiseptics, and with no nurse to care for the patient.

We have sent some physicians, and we have a few hospitals; but to equip and maintain hospitals, to support and educate missionaries in medicine and foreign languages, requires money. However, it is not an extravagant or impossible expenditure of money. Dr. Douthwaite, of Chefoo Hospital, in China, says: "The average annual attendance of out-patients at my hospital in Chefoo is about 6,000, and in-patients admitted—chiefly surgical cases—about 120, not including foreigners treated in our sanitarium and schools; but the yearly expense for all purposes does not average more than $550." Less than $5 apiece for the patients who are treated in the hospital, not counting the 6,000 and foreigners outside. Five hundred and fifty dollars a year to run a hospital! Are there not some benevolent members of this church who would like to endow a hospital in China?

In most heathen countries, notably in India and China, women are rigorously secluded from the society of men, excepting their husbands and fathers. On account of this custom heathen women do not receive even the poor assistance of their native doctors, but suffer, with neglect and with seeming indifference from their early maturity to their frequently early deaths, those afflictions that seem almost their only bond in common with their sisterhood in civilization.

No; I will not say that. We do them wrong to think because of their isolation, their subjection, their slavery—I say we do them wrong to think they do not love and hope and fear and aspire to something nobler, and long for a Comforter who may, in the almost total absence of human sympathy, support them in his strong arms. How will they ever know there is such a One? They can not learn it from their philosophy or their boasted traditions. Those same traditions prevent their going to the godly men—preachers, teachers, physicians—we have sent. Shall we give them up? No; we will send them women. But how will the women gain access to them?

You know when people are suffering, especially in protracted suffering, they will try remedies, new and old, rational, and in their desperation things that even to themselves seem irrational. To this spirit I attribute the wonderful sale of patent medicines in this country. For the same reason people try allopathy, homeopathy, osteopathy, so-called Christian science, and I know not what else. Actuated by a kindred impulse, these heathen women will tolerate, and ofttimes apply for, the assistance of our female physician.

Having gained access to them, if she is successful, she wins gratitude and confidence and admiration, not only for her skill, but she has shown the practical side of Christianity, and they can not but be struck by its useful charity. Then they are prepared to believe what she tells them, and she, remembering her commission, "Heal the sick, . . . and say unto them, The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you," tells them the old, old story—so new to them.

Protestant women of Europe and America have organized what is known as a zenana mission. Zenanas are the harems among the higher classes of Hindus. Miss Dr. Spain has been very successful in zenana work. Miss Dr. Howard has been instrumental in opening the homes of Chinese officials. You may be interested to know there is a Mississippi woman, a physician, in the Chinese field—Mrs. Dr. Ann Walters Field, wife of Dr. Field, another Mississippi medical missionary. But there is need of many more.

I have hoped that the urgent necessity for, and glorious achievements of, female medical missionaries would so act upon your hearts and minds that some of our young women would feel constrained to go into that work. But, lest I deceive you, I must tell you I have not told all of a female physician's life. There is dispensary work and assisting in hospitals. They have access to children, the hope of missionaries. Often, however, they nurse these little ones in squalid huts through oases of loathsome small-pox and other diseases epidemic in their poorly ventilated and uncleanly surroundings. When their efforts are unsuccessful they are often in danger of their lives from civil authority, as they nearly always are from the unfavorable climate. At times they seem to be forgotten at home. They are often without money to buy the necessities for their work, and, they almost feel, without sympathy. If we can not go ourselves, is it not a glorious privilege to hold up the hands of these self-denying women by our prayers, words of cheer, and material contributions for the furtherance of their work?

No man can tell another his faults so as to benefit him, unless he loves him.—H. W. Beecher.

Selections.

ILLUSTRATION IN PREACHING.

Two bulky octavo volumes on homiletics by Prof. Phelps, of Andover, and Prof. Hoppin, of New Haven, give neither of them more than two pages of its five or six hundred to the whole, weighty matter of illustration. Prof. Fisk's "Manual of Preaching" finds room for an entire chapter on that subject. If we look back of the appearance of these three volumes, we find the neglect still more complete and deplorable. It has been, in former years, apparently forgotten in our theological seminaries.

The result has been, and is, that not one preacher in a hundred avails himself of illustration as he should. With all nature, science, art, and the numberless affairs of daily life abounding in a marvelous richness of suggestion for such uses, the sermon runs on from beginning to end with hardly an analogy to break the flow of words or stamp a truth upon the memory.

The Great Teacher incessantly availed himself of illustration. "Without a parable spake he not unto them." Familiar objects around him and his hearers, the net, the coin, the sheep, the vocations of men, the sower, the servant feeding cattle, the laborer in the vineyard, the merchantman—how rich the lessons he fastened on them all! He made the vine and branches bear such clusters of ripe truths, and the barren fig tree itself to produce such fruit, as never hung from tree before. So all nature became vocal with new lessons that every thoughtful listener would see and hear again long after the Teacher had passed away. We never fully appreciate the familiar, colloquial style of these illustrations. The language of our English version has acquired, from its antiquity and sacredness, a certain dignity or stateliness that was not in the original. He came home with his simple, but graphic word-pictures to the everyday life of the multitude. Therefore it was largely, we believe—not merely from his marvelous moral excellence and divine authority—that "the common people heard him gladly."

The illustrations with which the world around us teems, most minds probably regard as accidental. As they view it, Jesus, happening to look about him and seeing the sheep or the vine, seizes on them and presses them into his service. A far more sound and wholesome view, we suspect, is that they were originally created for this very purpose. God values moral and spiritual truth above any mere material thing. And he makes the lower serve the higher. We might, for example, have been brought into the world, as was Adam, by direct creation. But instead we come into it from earthly parents. The dear word "father" gains its meaning and its sacredness from a thousand associations that cluster around it. And when it has become clothed with such a charm, the great Author applies it, calling himself our Father in heaven.

Bishop Butler's "Analogy" long ago demonstrated that the "Constitution and Course of Nature" and "Revealed Religion" are only hemispheres of one and the same round orb. And a great lesson follows as to the use of illustration in Christian teaching. The works of God in all creation, the ways of God in all human history, are but as a vast system of diagrams, or object-lessons, constructed for the explanation and impression of spiritual truth. No more useful volume could be written than one which should supplement that "Analogy," bringing it down, in the light of modern science, discovery and invention, to our own day. It would be a most invaluable thesaurus of illustration for the pulpit.

Our Divine Master, then, in his abundant use of illustration, was only disclosing to us a plan which he had, with the Father, before the world was. He was explaining, at one point and another, how exquisitely he had designed the material world to serve moral ends. He was pointing all who teach in his name to a rich secret of power in their work. This secret is not exactly a "lost art." The American pulpit avails itself of it. But to no such extent as it should. To no such extent, relatively to the whole number who neglect it, as the English pulpit of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Years ago Rev. E. Paxton Hood gave, in "Lamps, Pitchers and Trumpets," a slight insight into the immense wealth of illustration from which the English, Scotch and Welsh preachers of those centuries drew. American divines, through the same period, were sadly wanting in this excellence. Dialectics was their delight. Sound and strong, no doubt, were their discourses, but bare of any attractive charm—yea, and exceeding dry. And the pulpit of our day has hardly more than begun to recover from that defect. Most illustrate rarely and as if by accident. Few show signs of having made it a subject of deliberate study. One who is awake to the matter will read no book, periodical or daily journal, will meet with no striking incident or signal event, without the question instinctively arising, What will this illustrate?—Advance.

INDIVIDUALISM IN CHRISTIAN WORK.

BY REV. W. G. EVANS.

Dr. Strong, in his book, "The New Era," makes a most startling statement. The statement is this: That on the average it takes twenty Christians twelve months to lead one soul to Christ. If we stop and ponder this statement, it ought to stir us to the very depths, for it is a great reproach upon the Christian host. How small a degree of the Christly spirit and the divine energy it indicates! The Christian church should pray most earnestly to Almighty God for grace and wisdom and strength and power to put away the reproach. Twenty Christians twelve months to win one soul, and the divine Spirit ever ready to co-operate with the saint!

Many suggestions are made with a view to wiping out this stain. Personal effort, individual Christian work, is emphasized on every hand, and there is need of it, for there are comparatively few Christian workers. I think we need to carry the matter a step farther and press the thought of "individual seizing upon individual" for Christ. All up and at it is not sufficient. All up and at some body should become the watchword. Individual Christians taking individuals out of Christ on mind and heart, pleading their case with God and pressing God's claims upon them, and not letting go of either until Christ is enthroned in their heart. Much of the so-called personal work is of a very vague and general character. Many Christians engage in it to satisfy the demands of a pastor or to appease their own conscience. But when individual takes individual on mind and heart, the work becomes definite and real. There is a concentration of purpose and of energy. The results are sure as the promises of God.

Now, if each Christian in a church, in the city, in the nation, in the world, would thus grip some individual for Christ, how sublime would be the results! What magnificent steps we should make in the matter of world conquest! Speedily the reproach of Zion would be taken away, for brother would consecrate himself on brother man.

There is no reason in the world why every true Christian in the mighty host of God should not win, not simply one soul, but by this method a score of souls to Christ annually. It does not require great learning or superb gifts. It simply requires genuine pity and real love of souls. There are thousands in our churches now doing but little, who, with this method, could become soul-winners. Have you ever tried it, dear reader? If you have not, let me urge that you do not rest until you have taken some individual on your heart, making his case your own, gripping some Christless soul for God. And when you do this you will begin to taste of the sweets of Christian joy, and your own life will become greatly enriched, for he alone is greatly saved who helps in the salvation of another.

It is said that Spurgeon, before admitting young men to his college, demanded as an evidence of their call of God that they had been instruments of leading some soul to Christ. It begins to look as if the supreme test of being a Christian should be, "Have you won some one else to the love of God?" Without this men and women may be saved, but to have an abundant entrance one must be a soul-winner. How sweet to be able to say in that day, "Behold I and those whom thou hast given me!"—Standard.

The Christian Life.

PATIENCE.

Be patient toward all men. The cold hammer fashions the hot iron. He who would govern others must first learn to govern himself. Passion is blind. Cool, deliberate and, at the same time, energetic action makes itself felt in every department of life.

Be patient toward your brethren. Some men are slow to see into good things. They want to do right, but it takes them a good while to determine what is required of them. Every member of the body of Christ is not an eye. To get out of patience with these dull ones will not help either them or you. Give them time and they will do their duty. We all have our infirmities. Let us bear with each other.

To be patient you must have patience. The stream can not flow if the fountain is dry. The fruit will not grow without the tree. Resolutions alone, against impatience, will not answer. You must pray as well as resolve. Ask God, not merely to help you in your outward conduct, but to give you the inward grace. Unless you get that, you will fail as you have failed before. Be determined on victory in this.—World's Crisis.

GROWING IN GRACE.

We pray for one spiritual enrichment and another very much as if we supposed graces were "custom made," or as though the Giver of every good and perfect gift had little parcels of faith and love and gentleness and peace all measured out, done up, and ready to be delivered to supplicants in the order of application. We should be strangely off if God were not wiser in his giving than we are in our asking. 'First the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear." God's Spirit alive within us, but held under the pressure of labor and temptation and pain—that is the slow genesis of our gradual graces; like the leaves on the tree, which are determined partly by the interior life and partly by the stern discipline of wind, storm, and sunshine, into which the interior life lets itself forth.—Rev. C. H. Parkhurst.

LITTLE SINS.

It is said that a man one day was strolling along in the country, and he noticed a magnificent golden eagle flying bravely upward. He watched it with delight and admiration, and as he did so he noticed that something was wrong with it. It seemed unable to go any higher. Soon it began to fall, and then it lay at his feet a lifeless mass.

What could be the matter? No human hand had harmed it. No sportsman's shot had reached it. He went and examined the bird, and what did he find? It had carried up with it a little weasel in its talons, and as it drew these near to it for flight, the little creature had wormed itself out of them and drunk the life-blood from the eagle's breast.

How like this is all sin? It may appear a little thing, but it fastens upon the soul and works death and destruction.—Gospel News.

SOWING AND REAPING.

We are not done with life as we live it. We shall meet our acts and words and influences again. A man will reap the same that he sows, and he himself shall be the reaper. We go on sowing carelessly, never dreaming that we shall see our seeds again. Then some day we come to an ugly plant growing somewhere; and when we ask, "What is this?" comes the answer: "I am one of your plants. You dropped the seed which grew into me." We shall have to eat the seed that grows from our sowing.—Dr. J. R. Miller.

Lazy Christians glide through a useless life to a forgotten death and bury themselves before their friends bury their bodies. What a surprise it would be to them if they were suddenly ushered into a heaven of intense activity: such a heaven as reason and revelation teach us God has prepared for his children.—Rev. M. D. Helmick.

A child of God should be a visible beatitude for joy and happiness, and a living doxology for gratitude and adoration.—C. H. Spurgeon.

"Our eldest child had scrofula trouble ever since he was two years old and the doctors pronounced it very serious. His face became a mass of sores. IN THE SHADOW OF THE CROSS.

BY L. A. FLOWERS.

In the shadow of the Cross
I am resting safe and sure,
For when all things else shall fail,
This, my refuge, shall endure.

In the shadow of the Cross
I abide, and fear no ill;
For whatever comes to me
Is by His permissive will.

In the shadow of the Cross
For awhile content I dwell;
But the joys to be revealed
Mortals can not know, nor tell.

Now, the shadow of the Cross,
Then, while countless ages roll,
Jesus, mighty Conqueror,
Still the refuge of the soul.

Victor, Mon.

TWO GOOD MEN GONE.

Two sorrow-smitten homes, two vacant chairs, and two new-made graves; one on the sloping hill side of the Vicksburg burying-ground, and the other in the quiet cemetery at Jackson, Miss. Two good men gone; one known to the writer all her life, the other but a few short years—both true and tried in all the relations of life. Not only the families and friends of these promoted souls, but all Mississippi Methodism, is most sorely bereaved in the passing of two faithful members, stewards, and Sunday-school superintendents, Mayor W. G. Paxton, of Vicksburg, and Mr. S. S. Cope, of Paulding, who entered life eternal, the one on Oct. 26, and the other on Oct. 27, 1898. As a grateful tribute, and because it is good to recount well-spent lives, the writer sends this little sketch to the Advocate columns.

During the pastorate of our dear Bro. Galloway, now the honored Bishop, a great revival came to our Vicksburg Church, and Mr. Paxton was soundly converted to God. With his lovely wife, he immediately joined the Methodist Church, and was one of a large company gathered around the altar rail to be received into full connection. How well I remember dear, old Aunt Sallie Vick Lane, leaning heavily on her cane, as she passed down the long line of candidates, giving each the right hand of fellowship! What a memorable day it was, and how our beloved pastor's heart rejoiced! From that day, and as long as his health permitted, Mr. Paxton became, an earnest worker in the Master's vineyard, first a Sunday-school teacher, and afterward superintendent, which position he held at the time of his death. He was most punctual in the discharge of his church duties, and was ever ready to engage in every good work. How well I recall a "young people's service," at which the writer asked the question, "How can we tell whether we are really saved or simply drifting?" and the confident smile with which Mr. Paxton arose to answer, saying, "I know I have passed from death unto life, because I love the brethren?" During the long and exceedingly painful illness which preceded his death, it is said that no word of complaint ever escaped his lips, and that he frequently shouted aloud the praises of God. To the writer he was a friend indeed, especially at a time when, in God's providence, she became fatherless, and most gratefully she places this little flower on his honored grave.

My brother-in-law, Mr. S. S. Cope, was one of those strong personalities who leave an impression on all their circle of acquaintances. Perhaps his strongest characteristic was his unswerving faith in God. He absolutely refused to insure his life or household goods, and rigidly adhered to paying a tenth of his income into the Lord's treasury. His regard for the Sabbath was another prominent trait, and a fire for culinary purposes was never kindled in his house on the Lord's day. During his last illness he frequently prayed aloud during the night-watches, or repeated passages of Scripture. Shortly before his death he endeavored to follow in the Lord's Prayer, and seemed to linger fondly on the petition, "Thy will be done!" He was at the head of every good work in Paulding; steward, Sunday-school superintendent, and leader of the choir. When his lifeless clay rested before the altar in the little village church, scarcely a voice could be controlled enough to sing, and the mourning congregation said that he was so missed in the very first service held in the sanctuary after his passing. The ringing voice was unheard, for the leader had joined the choir celestial.

Two graves, two desolate homes, but, thank God! two more friends in heaven: Influence can never die, and the good deeds of these noble men will live and multiply, and the full harvest of their days on earth will not be garnered until "the leaves of the judgment book unfold." Juliet Howe Harmon.

FROM THE WORK.

WEBBERS FALLS, I. T.

You may imagine my interest in the Conference and its proceedings in North Mississippi. I am here now on the banks of the Arkansas river, and have a nice, good place to work. The greatest trouble I find here is that not many of our men are very religious, or, if so, "don't work at it much." Yet I think we are thoroughly up to date here in the "wild West." I never saw a finer body of men (not even in Mississippi) than I saw when I first looked on the Indian Mission Conference. Many old Mississippians are in this Conference: Rev. T. F. Brewer, Rev. John Meklehannon, and one Rev. A. K. Miller, whom "Gilderoy" will remember as a class-mate. We had a fine Conference. All fell in love with the big-souled, Methodistic Bishop Morrison. This was his first Conference, but he did excellent work. We want him again.

Our paper has changed names and editors. Bro. J. J. Lovett now, instead of Rev. T. F. Brewer, edits it. Its name changed from Our Brother in Red to The Indian-Oklu Methodist. We have a live editor and a good paper.

Methodism is prospering here, and will grow faster when the government becomes more settled, which will be in a very few years.

We find room here for hard-working, self-sacrificing men, but no other kind need come, for soon they bluff out and get away.

We had transfers this year from Tennessee to Texas, and from Florida to Montana. We are full now. Good-by.

Sam. B. Cox.

Dec. 12, 1898.

Rev. M. M. Black, Gloster, Miss., Dec. 10, 1898: "While the condition of this charge is far from being satisfactory, some advances have been made during the year, and we are still endeavoring to go forward. We have had this year sixteen accessions to the church—eight by certificate and eight on profession of faith. Until recently our prayer meetings have been well attended. During the past six months our Sunday-school at the new church has shown gratifying improvement as to attendance, punctuality, and interest. The Sharon Church Sunday-school, though small, is doing excellent work. Over $300 have been expended this year in seating and repainting the new church, which is now one of the neatest and most comfortable in the Conference. We are glad to say that the bitterness and strife which prevailed some time ago among our people here are giving place to good feeling and charity. Our work, on the whole, has been pleasant, and we rejoice greatly on account of the many kindly expressions and tokens of appreciation of which we have been the recipients. On Thanksgiving Day we were treated to quite a substantial pounding, which, strange to say, did us no bodily harm. Good things showered upon us till we were thankful to overflowing. While our collections are considerably in arrears, we hope to bring up a good report to Conference. This charge has suffered heavily during the past two years by removals."

A MODEL YOUNGSTER.

Mr. Editor: Mr. Henry Wood is a young man that we are happy to see in our homes at any time, and are more than glad to have our boys who are younger than he associated with one whom we look upon as being one of the noblest of old Adams neighborhood. We can safely say that he is one among the good and the great, and, if no providential hindrance in the near future, will be one of the grandest young men in our State.

Auburn P. O., Lincoln county, Miss., Nov. 8, 1898.

DESTRUCTIVENESS OF INFIDELITY.

The evil effects of infidelity are seen all over the world. Freethinkers imagine that if the "old creeds and Bible restraints" were banished from the earth, society would be much better off. How sadly mistaken such men are! There is a poisonous tree in the tropics called the upas tree. The birds that light in its branches die. The earth around it is blighted. To breathe the air circulating through it is deadly. Infidelity is a moral upas tree. It blights and curses everything around it. A man who had been a disciple of Ingersoll said: "I have been in many frontier towns, and in all of them I found his speeches, his 'Ingersolia,' and choice Extracts; but persons and property were not safe there; society remained in a chaotic state, morals were shocking, and human life was of little value. I have witnessed, on the other hand, the advent of preachers of the gospel of Christ to the same towns, and have seen them creating a Sabbath, closing many of the saloons and brothels, causing a good society to crystallize around their churches, rendering persons and property safe, and bringing beauty out of chaos, order from confusion, and many sweet homes from hells on earth." This testimony, coming from an eye witness, is worthy of deep consideration. And yet the books of Ingersoll are sold along our railroad lines.

A Michigan paper very sharply takes off the destructive spirit of Ingersollism. Col. Ingersoll walks up to a large and ancient structure, shakes his fist, pulls off his coat, and goes to work to tear it down. "What are you going to do, Colonel?" asks a looker-on. "Going to tear the old thing down; don't like the looks of it." "Well," says the looker-on, "suppose, now, instead of trying to tear that 'old thing down,' you go to work to put up another to beat it; and if you beat it, why, then, I'll turn in and help you pull down this one." "You get out," says Ingersoll, "I'm no architect."

That's it. Infidelity has hands to pull down Christianity, but no hands to build up any other religion. Infidelity throws away the Bible, but furnishes no substitute. It has no power to reform the vicious, to civilize the savage, to establish law. It opens Pandora's box, and lets out flying, biting serpents, but raises no brazen serpent to heal the wound it makes. It would blot out our sun, that warms our cold world into the beauties of Spring and the mellow fruits of the Summer, and leave us frozen in the darkness of eternal Winter. It is an iconoclastic Samson, and not a builder of all that is excellent and noble as Christianity has proved itself to be. —Raleigh Christian Advocate.

Is it not possible to make an important reform in our present funeral service? Much has been said about "funeral reform," but we mean reform in the religious services of such occasions. Too much talking is done. Formerly "a funeral sermon" had to be preached at all funerals. We have gotten away from this, but not far enough. A simpler service, consisting wholly of singing, Scripture reading and prayer, and then the burial service at the grave, would be much more becoming and impressive. Much funeral talk is not to edification. If the deceased has led a good, pure life, the people know it; and if he has not, they will not believe the minister if he affirm it. The departed can not be benefited, and the living can not be instructed. As for impressing the living by the solemnities of the occasion, experience shows that little good is ever the result. Occasionally there may be an aged or very eminent Christian of whom it might be well to speak, but the rule should be, no speeches at funerals. Let us have this reform.—Pittsburg Advocate.

There is great power in enthusiasm. Not one of the disciples who had been in intimate daily companionship with the Master, seen his miracles, heard his wonderful teachings, observed the crystal purity of his life, surpassed Paul in zeal for the gospel. With his mind at rest concerning the truth of the gospel, and with the great powers of logical and cultured intellect employed in persuading men to be reconciled to God through Christ, Paul's zeal made him well-nigh irresistible. It was not a zeal without knowledge, but a zeal according to intense and settled convictions.—Independent.

If you love what God hates, and hate what God loves; if you want what God dislikes, and care not for what God likes, how can you hope to be happy?—Rev. George Shaffer, D. D.

Oliver Wendell Holmes says that if a man truly loved a woman he would not marry her unless he was absolutely positive that he was the very best man in all the world that she could marry. According to this a man would have to be very conceited indeed or remain a bachelor.

This is going a little bit to extremes, but in sober fact, no man should marry a woman so long as he is the victim of ill-health. No man has a right to ask a woman not only to be his wife, but a life-long nurse. No man has a right to ask a woman to share the burden of his ill-health, and that is what he does when he asks her to be his wife. Ill-health in man is almost invariably the result of disorders of the digestive and nutritive organs. If a man's stomach is right and his liver right, his blood will be pure and rich, and his nerves strong and steady. When the blood is pure and rich a man cannot suffer from ill-health. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the great digestive tonic. It is not a mere appetizer, but a scientific aid to the natural processes of secretion and excretion. It makes the appetite keen and hearty, promotes the flow of digestive juices, makes the assimilation perfect, the liver active and the blood pure and rich. It builds firm, healthy flesh tissues. It is the greatest known nerve tonic and restorative.

Mrs. P. Morteuson, of Sanger, Oliver Co., N. Dak., writes: "Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best cough medicine I ever tried. A little over two years ago I was afflicted with a very bad cough and my home physician prescribed Cod Liver Oil and other kinds of medicine. He said I might go into quick consumption and might die in two or three months. His medicine did not do me any good. I heard of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and began taking it; when I had taken it about two months, according to directions, my cough was cured, and since that time we have always kept your medicine in the house."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. By all medicine dealers.

Best Edition of the World's Best Book,
—THE—
"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION
of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.
New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the New Orleans Advocate we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to December, '99. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address Rev. W. C. Black.

SELF-PRONOUNCING
S. S. Teachers' Reference Bible
Text Conforms Exactly to the Oxford Teachers' Edition.

The self-pronouncing text enables the reader to pronounce all proper names at a glance.

This Bible is printed from Large, Beautiful and Clear New Type. All Proper Names are Divided into Syllables and Every Vowel is Marked and the Syllables Inflected, showing the Sounds and Accents as they are given in a Dictionary, thus enabling the reader to properly pronounce every word. This feature is a great improvement and a strong recommendation for this Bible over others.

This Bible contains the celebrated Oxford Teachers' Helps together with a complete series of New Maps illustrating the geography of Palestine and the surrounding countries from the earliest times, and embodying the most recent discoveries renders this Bible especially desirable to teachers and students of the Holy Scriptures.

Imperial Seal Binding, Tuck Edges, known as "Divinity Circuit," Linen Lined, Round Corners, Red under Gold Edges, Price, $4.00.

This book in Bourgeois type will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price ($4) to any address; but to that select class who read and pay for the New Orleans Advocate, we furnish it on the following terms: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, viz., to December, '99, and we will send it to you, postpaid, for $1.75. (A little later you will have to pay to January, 1900.)

The same Bible in Minion type will be sent for $1.55; in Emerald type, for $1.15, to those who pay a full year in advance.

For fifty cents additional we will send Bible with index. For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved on the outside in gilt letters.

One of the best ways to keep the mind from bad thoughts is to fill the mind with good thoughts. To do this we must be students of the Word of God. A passage of Scripture will frequently keep the mind from meditating on hurtful subjects.—Exchange.

Let us do what we can. Let us not be seeking some high position; but let us get down at the feet of the Master, and be willing to let God use us—to let him breathe his Spirit upon us and send us out to his work. If you can't be a lighthouse, you can be a tallow candle.—Andrew Murray.

I want my pastor to come to me in the spirit of the gospel, saying: "You are mortal; your probation is brief; your work must be done speedily. You are immortal, too; you are hastening to the bar of God; the Judge even now standeth at the door." When I am thus admonished I have no disposition either to muse or to sleep.—Daniel Webster.

AT MANSFIELD.

We attended the Louisiana Conference during the first three days of its session. Busy as usual with publisher's work, we were so fortunate as to utilize the facile pen of Rev. F. S. Parker in reporting the proceedings. Bishop Morrison's presidency was universally commended. Though always courteous and patient, he nevertheless holds the reins with a firm hand and dispatches business with remarkable rapidity. Up to the time of our departure no connectional officer had appeared. The Publishing House was represented by Bro. Everett. Dr. French, agent of the American Bible Society, was present, and presented its claims in an appropriate address. There was an unusual amount of discussion on various questions connected with minute business. The discussion, though sometimes quite animated, was entirely good humored.

We were so fortunate as to be domiciled under the hospitable roof of Bro. A. F. Jackson, to whom and to his excellent wife we are indebted for many appreciated courtesies. We also enjoyed the generous hospitalities of Prof. and Mrs. Sligh, of Mansfield Female College. The pleasure of our stay was enhanced by the genial companionship of our co-guests, Bros. J. A. Miller, C. C. Miller, and H. R. Singleton.

As we did not stay over Sunday, we did not have an opportunity to hear the Bishop's sermon. From those who heard it, however, we learn that it was a masterly effort.

THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The fifty-third session of the Louisiana Conference was entertained by the town of Mansfield, DeSoto parish, the seat of several preceding sessions, notably that of 1882, known by tradition as the grand scattering. The present session necessitated a large number of moves, as seventeen four-year terms had been concluded, necessitating the change of at least thirty-four preachers. The town shows little conformity as yet to the small city ideals that have long been shaping such of our larger towns and smaller cities in Louisiana; but substantial brick stores, housing strong mercantile establishments, the abundant street illumination, and the excellent natural drainage, combine to render the discomfort of poor passage during inclement weather the least possible.

Rev. Jacob D. Harper, pastor in charge, was our genial host; careful in attention to every detail of the comfort of the members and visitors. Bro. Harper's title to be the host of the Conference was brought into dispute, however, by the Bishop's introduction of Mrs. T. S. Sligh, vice-president of the college, as "the lady who is entertaining the Conference." And truly the title was merited. Prof. and Mrs. Sligh have been assiduous in attention to the wants of the Conference, opening the beautiful new Assembly Hall for the sessions, providing class-rooms for the Committees of Examination and for the Conference Boards, entertaining largely, and successful, in a high degree, in securing their kind purposes for the comfort of guests.

In Mansfield the new and the old appear side by side. The old brick college building, crowned by its quaint ante-bellum cupola, its spacious chapel, dining-hall, parlors, and apartments, present strong contrasts to the newer Assembly Hall, with concert stage, wings, and modern equipment. The blue uniform dresses and mortar-board caps of the college students accord fine contrast to the ancient Puritan simplicity of the buildings and the large campus.

A large sum has been expended upon the college during the past year in improvement of the old buildings and in the erection of new. The seventy boarding pupils enrolled this year, despite the adverse circumstances, are doing creditable work, and more than ever before taking the higher collegiate branches. Mansfield College does not find any modifications necessary in order to conform with the recommendations of the Education Commission, either as to curriculum or faculty.

The sermon preceding the Conference opening Wednesday evening was in Dr. C. W. Carter's happiest style, and made a profound impression. The condensation of thought was remarkable, and the aphoristic phraseology impressed the mind with great truth while teasing the memory, that the very words could not be maintained. Truly a noble specimen of the noblest form of eloquence. In reporting Jackson charge the Doctor said jocosely that he was as popular as his predecessors, who were themselves the most popular men who had ever walked the streets of Jackson. No wonder.

Thursday morning, Dec. 16, at 9:30, Bishop H. C. Morrison opened the Conference. His talk was on "The Vine and the Branches." Fruit, fruit, fruit! The object of the Christian life, especially the end of the Christian ministry. Two great and all-absorbing purposes of our ministry—to bring men to Christ, and to collect money for the work of missions.

We have been long acquainted with Bishop Morrison through his visits to the Louisiana Conference in the capacity of Missionary Secretary, and he has impressed us by his genial personality and superb platform and pulpit ability; but never more delightfully than at this session of the Conference, in which he is serving us during his first round of episcopal visitations. The gentleness and considerateness of Bishop Morrison's presidency has won all hearts, and has not impeded the dispatch of business.

The Bishop's address to the class for admission into full connection abounded in practical counsel of the sort most needed by preachers. Homiletic hints came appropriately from a man who has so well demonstrated his theories of preaching by the results of his ministry. The usual disciplinary questions were commented upon but briefly. To attain perfect love, the Bishop said, was to reach a state of grace in which one could love as God loves, for only God loves perfectly. To love what God loves and to hate what God hates, to overcome prejudice and passion, to abhor sin, to love our brother—this is love of the perfect kind.

Fraternal greetings from the Colored M. E. Church were conveyed by the Rev. A. L. Dotson, of Homer Seminary, whose address was listened to with great delight, and the Conference gave Bro. Dotson a collection for his institution. His excellence in the technique of public speech is remarkable, and his precision of expression almost discredits the assertion that he had reached manhood before acquiring the art of reading.

Connectional men have not honored us this year by their presence, and the inspiration of their addresses is a serious loss to an Annual Conference. We have missed Dr. Tigert, Dr. Atkins, and Dr. Barbee, who have visited us heretofore, and it is a disappointment that the Conference has not had the privilege of becoming acquainted with Drs. Pritchett, Whisner, and Hammond.

If we have been short of connectional visitors, we are blessed with an unusual number of transfers, who are warmly welcomed, and who, doubtless, will add much to the efficiency of the already efficient body of faithful men who compose the Louisiana Conference. To the transfer system this Conference has always been indebted for many of its most useful men, and this system supplies, as no other could, a necessity that has been special, if not peculiar, to Louisiana, and in the present rapid development of commercial, industrial, civil and educational institutions, is becoming a greater necessity. To say that there is no dissent from this view would be wide of the truth, but that the brethren who come to us from other Conferences will be made to feel at home, might go without saying.

Dr. Lloyd, of North Texas, was introduced to the Conference. Rev. George P. French, of the Holston Conference, field agent of the American Bible Society, presented his cause during the session. The Conference declined to make an assessment for the Bible cause, but earnestly seconds the effort of the General Conference to have an offering made in every society for the society. Dr. Inman W. Cooper, the new president of Centenary College, was on hand, and spoke of the material improvements of the college, its ideals and prospects. A larger enrollment than that of many years past was reported. Dr. Cooper also preached a sermon at the Friday evening service of great power, directed especially to the young. It is admitted on every hand that the future of Centenary is promising.

In representing Mansfield College Mrs. Sligh read a paper that was commended by a rising vote of the Conference, and which the Conference also requested to be published by the ADVOCATE, whose readers will, in due time, have the paper before them in print.

The Committee on Admission ordered by the last General Conference was tried, and brought ont considerable discussion. The Conference sustained the all-decisions of the Committee for Admission and Re-admission by a handsome majority against appeals from its decisions. It is evidently a wise provision, and as the Conferences become accustomed to its working, will economize time and spare the Conference the disagreeable necessity of going into many details concerning unfit applicants. Judicious men composed the committee, and there was little question of the perfect impartiality of their decisions.

The absence of connectional officers diminished the effectiveness of the usual anniversaries to some extent; but Rev. Thomas B. Clifford made a taking address on missions, and substantial results in the form of a collection followed. A considerable increase in the total collections for missions is apparent, despite the yellow fever and the partial failure of crops in many sections of the country.

The ordinations were, as usual, that of deacons following the Bishop's sermon at morning service; that of elders in the afternoon, preceded by a sermon by Rev. H. R. Singleton. The Bishop disclaimed the intention of preaching a sermon, and directed his discourse to the younger men of the Conference. "Save the souls of the people" was the burden of his prophesying, and with argument, illustration, practical counsel, eloquent appeal, the theme was impressed upon the audience. No young man, or old, in the ministry can have honestly heard that discourse without becoming a better medium of the Spirit's power.

The sermon for the occasion of ordination of elders was a masterful application of the law of diversity in unity to the work of the church and ministry. Mr. Singleton's peculiar and characteristic eloquence greatly charmed and edified all hearers.

The memorial service, Sunday evening, was introduced by a sermon appropriate to the occasion by the Rev. Fitzgerald Sale Parker, after which tributes were paid to the two well-beloved and honored members—Bros. Christopher R. Godfrey and Enos B. Foust—who had been gathered to their fathers during the year.

It was an innovation, but one most commendable, to bring up the names and submit memoirs of the three noble laymen who had been frequently members of the Conference, who had died during the year. The tributes of affection and esteem to Dr. A. S. Helmick, S. Whited, and John B. Pickles, were not less heartfelt and worthy than to the brethren who had fallen in the ranks of the itinerancy. The closeness of relation between the ministry and laity of the Methodist Church received on this occasion a touching illustration as the ministers testified to the helpful care and fervent love of these noble men of the pew and steward's office.

By Monday morning all the minute business had been completed, and the Conference was ready for reports and resolutions, the place of the next session having been fixed at Monroe. It was expected that considerable difference and debate would be evoked by the report of the Committee on Publishing Interests anent the Barbee & Smith matter; but all such noise and eloquence alike were anticipated by the presentation of the following preamble and resolutions by Rev. Thos. J. Upton, which were adopted with very little opposition:

Resolutions concerning Publishing House:

Whereas, Considerable dissatisfaction has grown out of the course of our Book Agents (Barbee & Smith) relative to their seeming evasions concerning the commissions paid Mr. Stahlman for services rendered in the collection of our Publishing House claim; And, whereas, Said claim has been paid after more than thirty years delay; And, whereas, Two of the senatorial Committee of Investigation have said that, but for the misrepresentation of Barbee & Smith the bill allowing said claim would not have passed the United States Senate; And, whereas, There is no denial of the equity of our claim from any official quarter, nor even an intimation thereof; therefore, be it

Resolved, That if any misrepresentations or evasions were made, we deeply deplore the fact.

Resolved, That as we have no jurisdiction over the actions of said agents, and as the Conference of which Dr. Barbee is a member has already investigated his case, and the church of which Mr. Smith is a member is competent to deal with him, it is neither our desire nor duty to make any deliverances whatever with regard to their course.

Resolved, That we favor the return of the entire $288,000 when, and only when, Congress shall declare that the M. E. Church, South, has had no equitable claim on the government for all these years.

Never were resolutions of thanks more heartily passed than those offered by Rev. C. C. Miller, acknowledging the magnificent hospitality of Mansfield.

The resolutions concluding the report of the Committee on Temperance, presented by Rev. S. S. Bogan, committed the Conference to prohibition, though non-partisan, after some discussion. The Bishop took the platform after the resolutions had been passed, and made a forcible address upon the subject of discipline in the church whenever required by violation of the law against liquor selling.

The Sunday-school report was presented by Rev. John F. Foster; that on District Conference Records by Rev. H. W. Rickey; that of the Epworth League Board by Rev. J. M. Henry; that of the Board of Education by Rev. W. H. LaPrade. Following this last Rev. J. M. Henry addressed the Conference in behalf of the Minister's Education Aid Association, stating that a considerable endowment was being raised and put into use for the education of young ministers, to whom the money is lent upon easy terms of repayment.

The Bishop and Conference had evidently proved very congenial to each other. Very hearty expressions of regard on the part of the Bishop were certainly reciprocated most warmly by the Conference.

The appointments might have been had Monday morning, but were evidently hanging fire at some point, and were deferred to an afternoon session.

The following appointments were read by the Bishop, and Conference adjourned sine die:

NOTES.

Dr. R. G. Porter received a royal welcome from hie new charge at Ripley, Miss.

President Chambers, of Whitworth College, attended the Louisiana Conference on Saturday and Sunday.

Bro. John Kincheon Kearney died at his home in Canton, Miss., on the fifteenth. He was a lifelong Methodist and an excellent man. He had hosts of friends who will be deeply pained by his death.

At the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference, Rev. R. T. Nolen was appointed to Cumberland circuit. His postoffice will be Eupora, Miss. This appointment did not appear in our list of last week.

On Wednesday night, the fourteenth, Mrs. S. C. Trueheart delivered an interesting and instructive missionary address at Carondelet Street Church. After the address a reception was given her. The attendance was good and the whole affair was a very enjoyable one.

From a private letter from Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, presiding elder of the Corinth district, North Mississippi Conference, we quote as follows:

I reached Booneville with my family last Monday night. A noble layman met us at the depot with his carriage, and drove us to the district parsonage, where some ladies of the church greeted us with hot fires and a generous supper. The parsonage is a handsome house, well located and well furnished. I begin my work here to-morrow. Come to see us, and you shall have the right of way.

There was once erected in Rome a pillar bearing this inscription: "In honor of the Emperor who extirpated the Christian superstition." The "superstition" remains, but where is the Emperor? And, if you come to that, where is the pillar itself? There is not much use, after all, in pitting ourselves against God! —Evangel.

A beautiful life—death does not and can not end it. A true life can not be hidden in the sepulchre. Beyond the dim mists and behind the veil the circling years will prove that our hopes were not in vain, "for out of the dust of the sepulchre the voice of the risen Christ will kindle them into immortality."—Zion's Herald.

When you preach on Christian education, remember that the strongest agency for Christian education is your church paper. When your members begin to neglect church services and go out driving on Sunday, visit their homes and you will find that secular and society papers have taken the place of religious reading.—Arkansas Methodist.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Mansfield, La., EDITOR.

At time of writing those notes the Louisiana Conference ie in session at Mansfield, La.

Bishop H. C. Morrison is presiding with ease and ability. He is spiritual and brotherly, and is everybody's friend.

The Leagues in Louisiana are few and far between. We hope to see a large increase in interest in this department of work in the near future.

On account of sickness and low price of prodnots, many of the reports were comparatively short from a financial standpoint. The organization of a League in every pastoral charge would prove to be the pastor's helper in things both epiritnal and financial.

Organization and machinery without power will utterly fail. Power without organization and machinery will dissipate and run to waste. We need both.

The Epworth League was designed to organize our young men and women for work—to teach and indoctrinate them and send them out under the influence of the Holy Spirit to work in both Church and State.

Dr. J. D. Hammond, Secretary of Education, in his address to the North Mississippians, suggested that it would be the proper thing for each Epworth League to have in the chapter room or hall pictures of their own Conference colleges.

The work of the League and the church college are intimately connected. Their work moves in the same direction. Christian education is the aim; "All for Christ" the motto.

The students of Millsaps College have recently issued the first number of their college journal, The Millsaps Collegian. It is neatly arranged and well printed.

The Educational Echo will appear this month as the official organ of Centenary and Mansfield Colleges. In Louisiana there are but two schools owned by the church, viz.: Centenary, at Jackson, La., and Mansfield Female College, at Mansfield, La. Each of these colleges belong to the Louisiana Conference.

We have met many brethren in Louisiana who said they read and appreciate the items found in this department. We thank them for their words of encouragement. Every Methodist family in Mississippi and Louisiana ought to subscribe for the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, especially for the benefit of the children.

Let us be careful as to what our children read. A good man said in our hearing, some years ago, that he never read but one bad book in his life, but it left its impress upon him. In connection with this thought we publish the following from Dr. Hoss' pen, and which recently appeared in the Nashville Advocate:

"When Martin Luther threw his inkstand at the devil, he acted more wisely than he knew. It is just what the church ought to be doing all the time. The devil himself, with a clear discernment of things, has turned the tables, and is vigorously throwing the inkstand at the church. The inkstand is symbolical of literature, good or bad. It holds all the noble thoughts and all the base thoughts that are dipped out and spread upon the written or printed page. To drop the figure and resort to plain speech, the great moral battles of the future are to be waged very largely through the medium of newspapers, tracts, and books. John Wesley saw this fact in advance of other men, and acted upon it. His successors, we fear, are in grave danger of forgetting it. If we are to win and hold the world for truth and righteousness, we must be more diligent than ever in circulating a sound and wholesome literature."

ANNOUNCEMENT FROM CENTENARY.

Our Christmas holidays will close on Jan. 2, and it is important that students shall be on hand and report to classes on Jan. 3

The expenses of a student in the collegiate department from Jan. 3 to the close of the session need not exceed fifteen dollars per month, including tuition, room rent, board, fuel, lights, and washing; and thirteen and a half dollars per month for the preparatory department. Each new student should bring some bed clothes—sheets, blankets, comfort and pillow.

Let the friends of Centenary make a special effort in her behalf during the next few months. The enrollment for the present session is already nearly double what it was for the entire last session.

J. M. SULLIVAN,
Secretary of Faculty.

THE HOLIDAYS.

Special low rate tickets to points in the Southeastern States will be sold by the Texas & Pacific Railway Company from all points on its line, Dec. 20 and 21, the same as in former years. It should be borne in mind that passengers have the choice of three gateways via this line in going back to their old home for Christmas and New Year's, namely: New Orleans, Shreveport and Memphis. It is with a feeling of pleasure and pride that we offer you the best passenger service in the South.

If you contemplate making the trip and want to know the cheapest and best way, write to nearest ticket agent or E. P. Turner, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Texas, & Pacific Railway, Dallas, Texas, or to H. P. Hughes, Trav. Pass. Agt., Fort Worth, Texas.

REV. C. A. POWELL.

Resolutions adopted by the Hattiesburg Quarterly Conference, Dec. 6, 1898:

Whereas, Bro. C. A. Powell's term of four years' service as our presiding elder closes with this Conference; And, whereas, Our presiding elder, by his faithful and diligent work in the cause of our Master for the four years that he has labored among us, has endeared himself to us; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we gladly bear testimony to his faithfulness and worth as a presiding elder, and part with him with regrets, praying that his life and strength may be spared for many years of useful labor in the church.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

Smith's Dictionary

—OF THE—

BIBLE.

Comprising Its Antiquities, Biography, Geography, and NATURAL HISTORY.

EDITED BY WM. SMITH, LL. D.,
Classical Examiner of the University of London.

This great work prepared under the direction and superintendence of Dr. Smith himself contains every name in the Bible and Apocrypha of which anything can be said; gives an account of each of the books of the Bible; explains the civil and religious institutions, the manners and customs, while many of the longer articles, being the results of the most finished scholarship, are complete treatises in themselves; embraces the results of the most successful and approved biblical labors and researches, constituting an indispensable aid to ministers, teachers, families, Sunday-school superintendents, and Bible readers generally.

The simple explanations of this work, unlike the expositions of a commentary, admit of no denominational or sectarian coloring and it is therefore equally valuable to Bible readers of every diversity of belief.

This is, undoubtedly, the best work of its kind in the English language, and has no rival in importance for the elucidation of the scenes and facts of Scripture.

The work contains 1024 large octavo pages, over 150 illustrations and maps engraved especially for this work and is handsomely and strongly bound in cloth. Publishers' price, $4.50.

To any person who will pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: To December, '99, we will sell this magnificent book postpaid for $2. Send in your order at once, as this offer may soon be withdrawn. Address

W. C. BLACK, 512 Camp St., New Orleans.

A Ragged Coat and An Empty Pocket

Changes the Aspect of the World.

Walter Wycoff, a student of social problems, abandoned his station in life and assumed the garb of daily toiler, taking his place among grimy handed workers in order to test the change. A MALARIA POISONED LIVER will also cause as great a change in physical life. Sunshine will leave the face. The eye loses its sparkle; while the skin assumes a dull copper tint. These are least of the evils and merely bespeak the external cry that Nature gives when battling with Malaria germs. Headache, Nausea, dullness of thought, pain in the back and side, a coated tongue, a horrible taste, are among the danger signals which if unheeded portend CONGESTION, CONVULSIONS, SUPPRESSION OF SECRETIONS AND TERMINATION OF LIFE.

Far easier than the solution of the social problem is the remedy for Malaria—DICKS' CHILLIFUGE absolutely exterminates it. A Few Doses, and health spreads her wings over the grateful system, and the sun shines once more, while life is worth the living.

NEARING THE END.

I am very weary, Father,
My steps are short and slow;
I have lost the sprightly vigor
I held long years ago.
I spring not forward with the gait
That in my youth I sped
Life's hopeful paths, with joy elate—
Alas! those hopes are dead.

My eyes see not as clearly as
They did in youth's bright day;
And many objects dimly pass
Like shadows on my way.
The page before me has a blur;
The words so wrapped in haze,
Their purport I must oft defer,
So weakened is my gaze.

I can not hear as plainly now
The swaying Summer breeze,
Nor song of bird upon the bough,
Both ling'ring in the trees.
I climb not up the mountain side
To view the far down vale;
To note upon the river's tide
The slowly passing sail.

But though my weary steps are slow—
Each brings me nearer Thee;
Though dim the path on which I go,
Or page can hardly see,
And song or breeze I scarce can hear,
Nor scan the landscape o'er,
These failings all will disappear
On thy celestial shore.

SUCCESSFUL CAREERS.

In no other country in the world are the possibilities for successful careers so great as in the United States.

If you want more salary, all you have to do is to make yourself worth more; fill your place so full that it will run over, and you will soon be in a larger place. Do your work so efficiently that everybody about you will remark it, and be sure that your superior will soon find it out. The man whose ambition is just to do a fair day's work will never get very high up in life. It is the man who tries to see how much he can do, how well he can fill his place—that rises.

Every employer is on the lookout for marked merit, and even if he does not recognize your superior effort, others will, and you will soon find your proper place.

Business is made up of details, of little things; and whoever attempts to shirk them will fail. Of course, it is disagreeable to spend a large part of one's time on the dry, uninteresting items of the routine of business. They are tedious; but no great success was ever built up without close and careful attention to the little principles upon which success depends.

There can be no system without details, but an effective system once formed, disagreeable, dry drudgery disappears, and doing business becomes a pleasure instead of a bore. However, while we urge the most careful attention to trifles, we would enter a word of warning against becoming a slave to them. We know men who are all detail; who spend nearly all their time in little things and never get time to do great things.—Success.

A TEST OF CHARITY.

One of the pleasantest of day-dreams is to imagine how charitable you would be if you had plenty of money. The role of a bountiful master or mistress is a delightful one, and it is easy to imagine how, if you had command of a fortune, you would make people happy—and with what grace you would receive their gratitude. Of course, few persons can venture to indulge the hope that they will be rich; but while we are dreaming these dreams it is well enough to think whether we are showing ourselves charitable in the use of what is really within our command. Take, for instance, one's thoughts. It is natural enough to put a hard and bitter construction upon the actions of others. Possibly from a superficial point of view their conduct warrants it. But a thoroughly charitable person—one who would use money beneficently if he had it—will certainly make allowances for others, and only reluctantly come to the severe judgment. It is a mistake also to suppose that money can do everything. There are a good many persons who would not, if you were as rich as a Barnato, take a penny from you. They do not want your money, even though they are not rich themselves, but they would prize considerateness, sympathy and fellowship. If we withhold these things that are surely within our power, probably we should not be so very generous if we had plenty of money.—The Watchman.

A MANNERLY BOY.

"His manner is worth a thousand dollars to him," said the man—a statesman—speaking of the boy.

The boy was a distant relative of the man, says a writer in the Lamp, and he had been brought up by careful parents in a far-off city. Among other things, he had been taught to be friendly and to think of other persons before himself. The boy was on a visit in the town where he lived. They met on the street and the younger recognized the elder, promptly went to his side and spoke to him in his cordial, happy, yet respectful, way. Of course, the man was pleased, and knew that anybody would have been pleased. The sentence above was the outcome of it. A little later the boy came into the room just as the man was struggling with his overcoat. The boy hurried to him, pulled it up by the collar and drew down the wrinkled coat underneath. He would have done it for any man, the haughtiest or the poorest.

The boy has not been in society a great deal. He has not learned orthodox selfishness. He positively can't be easy at the table until his neighbors are waited on; a chair is torture if he thinks anyone else is less comfortably seated. He wouldn't interrupt to let loose the wittiest or most timely remark ever thought of.—Presbyterian.

INJURING ANOTHER.

He who tries, directly or indirectly, to injure another in business or reputation is always, eventually, the loser. The injured one, if he maintains his integrity, will come out of the furnace without the smell of fire on him, while the other will bear the taint of the traducer. Some men are, morally, coarse-grained and have a conscience seared with selfishness. They lack that nice sense of moral propriety which leads to a practical recognition of the golden rule: doing unto others as they would like others do unto them. They will perpetrate a petty, mean act without a qualm of conscience or a solitary disturbing emotion. Having done an injury and being aware of it, they never betray the possession of the spirit of true manliness by a frank acknowledgment of the same.

If such a person is a professing Christian, he should repent and do the first works, if at last he would be accepted by the Judge. For in answer to the question: "Who shall abide in thy tabernacle? Who shall dwell in thy holy hill?" it is said: "He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor."—Christian Uplook.

It is well to find out, if possible, the occasion of a child's apparent anger or grief before inflicting rebuke. For example, not long ago we noted a little child in church in a frenzy of impatience and excitement, struggling to get out of the pew into the aisle, and making much disturbance for the moment. The parents had difficulty in preventing a loud display of anger on its part. A little study of the case revealed the fact that the child had a nickel in its hand for the collection; the usher, not noticing the little hand outstretched, had passed by and was going on up the aisle. The little one, disappointed and grieved, and sure that he would be gone out of sight before she could get her coin into his basket, struggled to get out and follow after him. To have punished or rebuked the little one would have been cruel. The mother, as soon as she saw what was the matter and could calm the storm sufficiently to be heard, assured the child that the man would soon come back, and she would have a chance to give him her coin. This incident ought to suggest the propriety of seeking to understand the indignation, the anger, and even the whimsical wishes of little children in order to properly deal with them.—Central Advocate.

Do not complain of everybody and everything. Nothing is more disagreeable to others, or more injurious to yourself, than this habit. An everlasting whine is one of the things that is hard to endure. If people are all wrong, and everything is going to the bad, what is the use of continually fretting about it, when you can not help it? Don't always look on the dark side of things and put the worst construction on them they will bear. There may sometimes be dark clouds in the sky, but more frequently the sun shines out with great brightness. There may be some chilly blasts, but there are many balmy breezes. There may be some thorns, but there are many sweet and lovely flowers. Look on the bright side of things. Think of the beautiful, talk of the good and brightness and beauty, and goodness will come into your heart, and while you are contented and happy yourself, you will spread sunshine around you, and will make others contented and happy.—Recorder.

A SMILING FACE.

Everybody welcomes a smiling face. All doors are open to it; all social circles welcome it. It is an open sesame to heart and home. By it burdens are lightened, cares dispelled, sorrows banished, and hope made to reign triumphant.

Get the glow and radiance from such nearness to the throne as God permits to his own. Bring from a holy and divine communion a face luminous with light, and let it glow and shine on all around. A little child on the street of a great city, wishing to cross at a point where the surging throng and the passing vehicles made the feat dangerous to the strong, and especially to the weak, paused, hesitated, and then asked a sunny-faced gentleman to carry her across. It was the sunny face that won the child's confidence.—Selected.

In the reminiscences of General Hancock, by his wife, there is a very touching allusion to General Robert E. Lee, whom she describes as "the beau ideal of a soldier and a gentleman." When Hancock, then a young army officer, was about to be ordered to the Pacific coast, Lee said to her: "I understand that you contemplate deserting your post, which is by your husband's side, and that you are not going to California with him. If you will pardon me, I should like to give you a little advice. You must not think of doing this. I consider it fatal to the future happiness of young married people, upon small provocation, to live apart, either for a short or a long time. The result is invariably that they cease to be essential to each other. Now promise me that you will not allow him to sail without you."

"Now" is a little word it is well to keep in full practice. Never leave until the next hour, much less until to-morrow, what you can well do now.

LABOR GOOD FOR DELICATE PEOPLE.

Labor is the life of life. And especially is it the life of life to the delicate. When any organ is sick it is then truer than in health that even in sickness and delicacy it is better for it to do what work of its own it can, provided it can do it without injury. And I can say to you from a considerable experience in consumption that those who have got on the best have usually been those who have occupied themselves the most. I never knew my own parents. They both died of phthisis.

At the age of twenty-one, I myself went to Madeira to die of the same disease. But I did not die, and on coming back I had the good luck to get into this great hospital, and in those days they were not very well pleased to have Scotchmen coming to London to occupy such appointments. The members of the staff had heard that I had tubercles, and they wagered one hundred to one that I would not live six months at most. The reason given for this was that I did not eat and worked too hard. I got the appointment. Thirty-eight or thirty-nine years have gone by since that time, and it is all the other doctors that are gone. Only I am left here on the staff—an old gentleman—not dead yet.

Worry is killing. It is bad management that kills people. Nature will let no man overwork himself unless he plays her false, unless he takes stimulants at irregular times, smokes much or takes opium. If he is regular and obeys the laws of health and walks in the way of physiological righteousness, nature will never allow him or any other person to work too hard. I have never yet seen a case of breaking down from overwork alone, but I admit that it is necessary above all things to cultivate tranquility of mind.

Try to exercise your wills in regard to this—for will counts for something in securing tranquility to accept things as they are and not to bother about yesterday, which is gone forever; not to bother about to-morrow, which is not ours, but to take the present day and make the best of it. Those women who will continually peer into what lies beyond never have any present life at all—they are always grizzling over the past or prying into the future, and this blessed to-day, which is all that we are sure of, they never have.—Sir Andrew Clark, in the Journal of Hygiene.

OBITUARIES.

JONES—Mrs. SARAH ELIZABETH, daughter of the late Rev. John Wroten and Mrs. Judy Pate, was born in Lincoln county, Miss., in 1842. She was educated in the neighboring schools, and grew to womanhood in a religious home. She was married to Mr. Joseph Whitington in 1858. A son and daughter were born of this union. Mr. Whitington died in the Confederate Army, in camp at Landerdale Springs, in 1862. In 1864 she was happily married to Mr. James Madison Jones. She was the mother of ten children—six sons and four daughters. She resided with her family near Summit, Miss., where her children attended the Peabody School, for a number of years; then removed with her family to McComb City, Miss. Her sons are worthy men, employed on the I. C. R. R. She was an excellent woman, and left many friends to mourn their loss. She had been for a number of years an exemplary member of the Baptist Church. She was a devoted mother, and her life was spent in labor and care for her children. She was kind and courteous to all around her, and no one in this community was more highly respected and esteemed, and her unexpected death carried sorrow to many hearts. Her illness was of short duration, and the blow has fallen heavily on the heart of her bereft husband and children. Everything was done for her that loving hands could do. If love and prayers and tears could have restored her, then the beloved wife and mother had not died. The kind neighbor and faithful wife and mother gathered up her feet in death and joyfully went home to God, Tuesday, Oct. 25, 1898.

May the God she so faithfully served bring the whole family to meet again in heaven is the prayer of her attached friend,

MRS. M. L. J. HOOVER

DAWKINS—ALFRED EARL DAWKINS, the subject of this sketch, was born June 16, 1894, and died Oct. 16, 1898, aged four years and four months.

Little Earl was the baby boy of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Dawkins, of Montrose, Miss. A chain of eight links has been broken. Earl seemed to be the most precious link in the chain. He was the idol of the family; their affections were set on him. Death is no respecter of persons. He steals into our homes and lays his merciless hand upon one as well as another, and we poor mortals must stand by and witness the sad scene of his awful work. It is hard, but such is common to man. Man is of few days and full of trouble. Let us not become discouraged, but let us look to Him who doeth all things well, and take courage in the fact that He who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven," is still our Savior, and will save our children when they die.

Weep not for little Earl, dear ones, but rather rejoice because of the joy that surrounds his little angel head. The tramp of his little feet and the sound of his little voice are hushed, and his place in the home is vacant, but remember that in our Father's house are joys evermore; joys that are not disturbed by anything that is earthly. He was too tender for this world; he has gone to live with Jesus; he is watching at the beautiful gate. May the chain that is broken on earth one day be united, never to be broken again!

C. C. EVANS

Satartia, Miss.

LAND—LAURA GUSHION LAND was born April 20, 1883, and died Oct. 23 1898. She united with the M. E. Church, South, at Midway in 1890, while Bro. E. E. Riggs was pastor, and died while Bro. J. M. Martin was pastor. She died of swamp fever. Her illness was only two days. She leaves a mother and one brother to mourn her death.

Laura was a good and faithful Christian, and loved by everyone who knew her. Oh, she will surely be missed at school! She was so good, and was loved by her teacher and schoolmates. But cheer up, loved ones, and try to meet little Laura in heaven, for we believe she is there. Oh, how I sympathize with the bereaved mother and brother! Cheer up, loved ones, cheer up.

Written by her dear friend,

L. A. PICKETT

BLACKMAN—In memory of NATIE MARVIN BLACKMAN, who was born June 9, 1891, and departed this life July 20, 1898. His body lies in Saqualena graveyard by the side of his grandpapa and three little sisters. His spirit is now on the beautiful beyond awaiting the dear ones left behind. He was an affectionate and obedient child; bore his suffering with the greatest of patience. His song in his last days was, "When the roll is called up yonder I'll be there." When his last hours came he clasped his darling arms around mama's neck and said, "Good-by."

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant at our hearth
Which never can be filled.

Jesus, while our hearts are bleeding
O'er the spoils that death has won,
We would at this sad farewell
Say, "Blessed Lord, thy will be done."

Dear parents, grandparents and relatives, all: He would not come to us, but have us go to him; so let our song be as sweet little Natie's was—when the roll is called we will be there to meet our dear ones. Oh, may we compose an unbroken family in the beautiful beyond, where there is no more sad farewells!

WILKINSON—Mrs. LAVISA JONES WILKINSON, whose maiden name was McMillan, was born in Amite county, Miss., June 3, 1835, and died at her home near Zion Hill, Miss., Nov. 26, 1898. She was reared a Presbyterian, but shortly before her marriage to Mr. Winston Wilkinson, which took place in 1859, she united with the Methodist Church. For a number of years immediately preceding her decease she resided in Gloster, where she held her membership. By her consistent walk, kindly deeds, and earnest piety, she adorned the doctrine she professed, and has left behind her a bright and blessed influence. Her husband and six of her eight children preceded her to the other shore. Though she was called upon to drink deeply of the cup of sorrows, she bore all with Christian fortitude, joyfully testifying to the sufficiency of God's grace. The last year of her earthly pilgrimage was full of suffering. She passed away sweetly trusting in Jesus, and entreating her loved ones to meet her in heaven. Two sisters, a son and a daughter—namely, Hon. M. H. Wilkinson and Mrs. W. H. Christmas—and several grown step-children are left to mourn her loss, while by a host of friends also her memory will be fondly cherished. May God graciously comfort them all!

(REV.) M. M. BLACK.

CAMPBELL—Mrs. MARY CAMPBELL was born in Fairfield county, S. C., in 1822, and died at the home of her son, J. B. Campbell, in Bossier parish, La., Oct. 15 1898, aged seventy years four months and twenty-seven days. About five months before her death she was badly crippled from a fall, from which she never recovered, and finally resulted in her death; but she had lived to a good, ripe old age. She joined the M. E Church, South, in 1855. She lived up to the demands of her church until the day of her death, which relation she held for over forty years. Her husband having died some years ago, she has been spending the latter part of her life with her son, J. B. Campbell. She was a great favorite with the family, especially with the grandchildren. As a mother, she was tender and affectionate. Her pleasant manners and Christian spirit made lasting impressions on those whom she associated with. She died with an assurance of a life which is eternal. When the angel of death came she was ready and willing to go. Just before she expired she called the family to her bedside, and said to them that she did not fear death, and to meet her in heaven. Thus a good mother in Israel has passed away, with many a loved one to lament on account of her death. We meekly say, "Thy will be done." H. J. BOLTZ.

ROBERTS—Bro. ABRAHAM JASPER ROBERTS was born in Amite county, Miss., June 1, 1830, and died of apoplexy at his home near Bewelcome, Miss., Nov. 11, 1898. When about twenty-five years of age he was converted and joined the Southern Methodist Church. His membership having lapsed during the Civil War, in which he fought valiantly in the Confederate ranks, in 1878 he reunited with our church at Woodland, on the Amite circuit, of which he remained a member until his decease. Though he died suddenly, he was conscious long enough to testify to his readiness to meet God, and left word to his loved ones to join him in heaven. On Jan. 7, 1851, he was married to Miss Catharine Anders, eight children—six sons and two daughters—being the fruit of this marriage. His wife and four grown children survive him.

Bro. Roberts united regularly at the Sam Jones Camp Ground, and greatly enjoyed its annual services. Both there and in the community where he lived "Uncle Jap," as he was familiarly called, will be greatly missed.

(REV.) M. M. BLACK.

BARNES—Mrs. MISSIE KING BARNES was born Nov. 14, 1870, was happily married to Mr. J. A. Barnes, of Benton, Miss., Nov. 3, 1897, and departed this life Nov. 9, 1898.

Sister Barnes identified herself with the M. E. Church, South, at an early age, and continued a consistent member of the same until she was transferred from the church militant to the church triumphant. A more admirable Christian character we had not in our midst, but it pleased God to take her to himself. If by the example of a godly life she has shown us how to live and how to die, surely it is the will of God in Christ Jesus that her life and death should prove a benediction to those of her acquaintances and loved ones whom she has outstripped in the race.

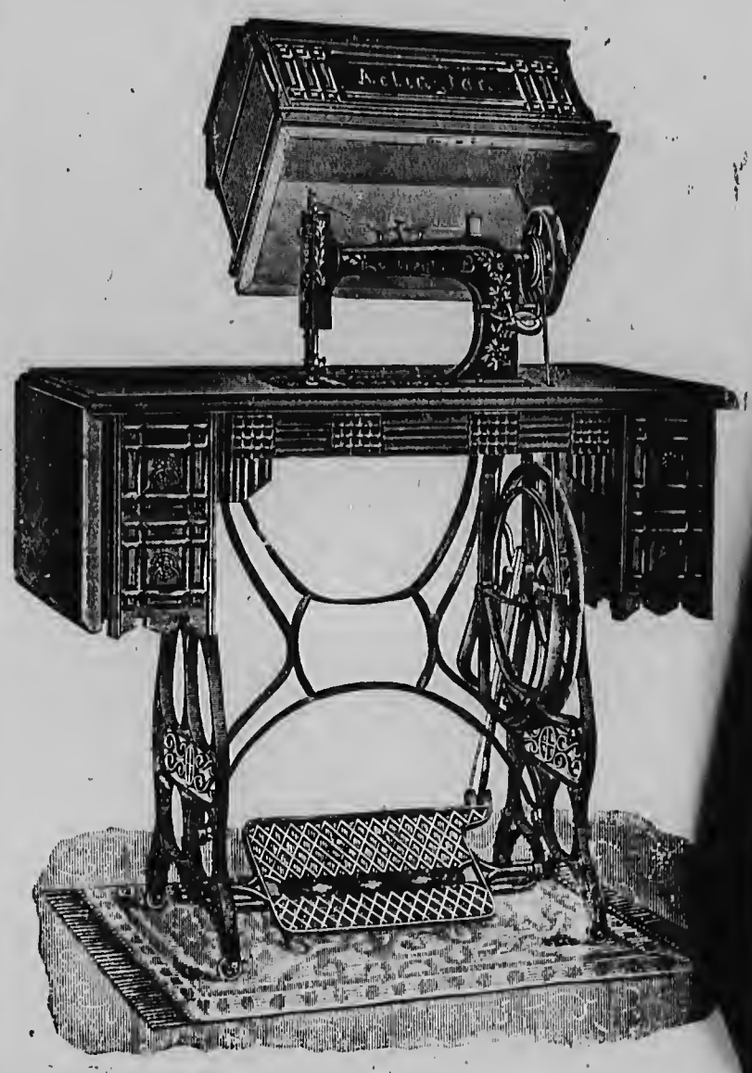
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE ARM is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great length; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $19, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to April, 1900, and send $17 additional, and we will send you the machine. This price does not include freight.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

TO AGENTS:

We will send this machine free to any preacher or other person who will send us twenty new subscribers with the cash—$40. Address

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The total number of depositors in the savings banks of New York is 893,652. The total amount of deposits when the last report was made was $415,260,815. The average deposit is $487.05.

President McKinley, who has been spending some time in the South, was in Savannah on Sunday and attended the Wesley Monumental Church. He is highly pleased at his reception in all parts of the Southland.

Lord Kitchener's punishment for drunkenness, which has passed into a British army proverb, is to tog out the culprit in full marching equipment, a matter of sixty pounds, and compel him for six hours to march, carrying a fifty-pound bag of shot in each hand.

All sorts of rumors are current as to what the Philippine republic is doing with reference to the settlement of the Philippine question, but the Filipino newspapers indicate that nothing but absolute independence will be accepted by the natives.

American ownership and control of the Nicaraguan Canal is advocated by the majority of men in Congress, though some of those who believe that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty is still binding on the United States and Great Britain, favor partnership with England in the enterprise.

Governor Stephens, of Missouri, has issued a call for a conference to be held in St. Louis on Jan. 10, to perfect arrangements for holding a world's fair in 1903, in commemoration of the Louisiana purchase. The governors of fourteen States are requested to appoint delegates from their respective jurisdictions.

The venerable William McDonald Sinclair, archdeacon of London and canon of St. Paul's Cathedral, presided at a public conference at St. James Hall, Sunday, convened by the heads of the various religious denominations in favor of an international demonstration on behalf of the Czar's disarmament proposals. A resolution in accordance with the object of the conveners of the conference was adopted unanimously.

In response to the Vatican's inquiry on the subject, President McKinley has sent an assurance that the Catholics in Cuba and the Philippines will enjoy the same ample liberty as the Catholics in America. The Washington Government has also promised the Pope that measures will be taken to prevent provisional governments despoiling convents or seizing ecclesiastical property. The Pope has sent his warmest thanks to President McKinley.

Ex-Secretary of State Day and Whitelaw Reid will receive at least $100,000 each for assisting in the peace negotiations at Paris. John Bassett Moore, secretary of the commission, will receive $50,000 for his services in Paris. Senators Frye, Davis and Gray, under the law, can not draw two salaries, and they will have only their expenses paid in addition to their senatorial salaries. The dispatch adds that congressmen generally denounce the alleged excessive payments to Reid and Day.

It is said that the revenues derived from the customs in Cuba would not be drawn upon for food and clothing supplies furnished to the Cubans. They will constitute a military fund under the disposal of the governor general, and will be used solely for the betterment of the island and for the expenses of the military occupation. All the outlay connected with the temporary occupation by the United States troops will be charged against there ceipts. Should there be a surplus when the Cubans assume control it will be turned over to the new Cuban government.

Assurances have been given to President McKinley and Secretary of the Navy Long by members of the Naval Committees of Congress that the ship building programme which they recommend will be adopted. This means that Congress will pledge the government to the expenditure of almost $60,000,000 for increasing the navy. An immediate appropriation of such a large sum will not, of course, be necessary. It will be spread over a period of at least four years. In the forthcoming naval appropriation bill an expenditure of only $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 need be authorized. It is proposed to distribute the money among fifteen vessels.

As soon as Mr. Day, chairman of the Peace Commission, presents the treaty of peace to the President on Christmas Day, the authorities will give serious consideration to the question of whether Great Britain and Germany shall be allowed trade concessions in the Zulu archipelago, which they obtained from Spain. There is reason to believe that the matter has been called to the attention of the State Department, but so far as can be learned no decision has been arrived at because, in the first place, the authorities are not informed if any reference is made to it in the treaty of peace, and, in the second, the administration does not care to pledge the government in advance of action by the Senate.

A GRACIOUS YEAR.

We have had a gracious year on the Whitestown circuit, Mississippi Conference. More than 200 have professed either conversion or entire sanctification. Sixty-five received into our church. We have built one church at Whitestown, valued at $1,000, and have raised for all purposes about $2,500. This work is a mission, but we expect to be self-sustaining after this year. To God be all the glory.

FREE TO MILLIONS.

A SCIENTIST'S DISCOVERY.

A CURE FOR CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, CATARRH AND OTHER COLD WEATHER DISEASES.

If you are one of the millions who suffer from consumption, pneumonia, coughs, lung troubles, catarrh, loss of flesh, or any wasting disease, you are entitled to the three free bottles of medicine which Dr. Slocum, of New York City, has offered to send to those who write him.

Nothing could be fairer, more philanthropic or carry more joy to the afflicted than this generous offer.

The Doctor makes no exceptions.

If you are sick, write.

If your relations, friends, neighbors, are sick, get them to do so.

Send your name and full address to the Dr. T. A. Slocum Laboratories, 98 Pine St., New York, and the three free bottles will be sent you at once.

This new scientific system for the treatment of consumption, which, by its timely use has cured so many thousands of apparently hopeless cases, is thus made obtainable by everybody.

Modern antiseptic methods are applied by the Doctor to the cure of disease. His researches on consumption, and his discovery of the curability of this dread disorder, have made his name famous.

The actual cures of the Slocum System have made him still more so.

He has on file in his American and European laboratories thousands of "heartfelt testimonials of gratitude" from those benefited and cured in all parts of the world.

This offer puts into your hand the greatest weapon that modern science has forged against disease.

Don't delay until too late, but commence treatment at once for that cough or lung weakness which may otherwise lead to your early death. Write at once for the three free bottles of the Slocum Treatment and please state that you saw this offer in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

CLOTH $10 4 Vols.

BIG CUT IN PRICES

HALF-RUSSIA $12 4 Vols.

Since the close of our famous Introductory Sale of the only genuine ENCYCLOPÆDIC DICTIONARY, nearly two years ago, we have been fairly besieged by requests, from all over the United States and Canada, to make a special, low-priced edition of that greatest of all reference libraries, and thus place it within the reach of people in moderate or even poor circumstances. Such a course would have compelled a cheapening of either materials or workmanship, which we have not deemed wise—not even in so worthy a cause. Nor could we afford to make an open offer at a sweeping reduction in the price of a gigantic work, like this, costing more than $750,000, to recover which investment will require many years of constant selling at regular prices. But, yielding at last to the irresistible pressure, we now propose to celebrate the Christmas season of 1898 by distributing just 1,000 sets of our world famous Dictionary and Cyclopedia at less than one-quarter the prices at which the genuine edition is now being sold every day. These books will be stock, latest revision. Paper, printing, binding, illustrations and contents precisely identical with our regular $40 to $70 sets, except that some of the bindings are very slightly worn or defaced, leather corners a trifle crooked, possibly scratched here and there by careless handling. These defects do not reduce the practical value of the books one penny's worth; but we cannot offer them as perfect stock. With the exception noted, every set is as good as new.

Guaranteed Perfect in Contents and Binding

This is the Genuine ENCYCLOPÆDIC DICTIONARY

Containing more than 250,000 defined words—nearly twice as many as the largest "unabridged." It is accepted as an unquestioned authority wherever the English language is spoken. It is not only the greatest and only up-to-date Dictionary, but is also one of the best of Encyclopædias, treating over 50,000 separate subjects—nearly double the number claimed by even the great Britannica. To produce this mammoth work and years of arduous labor by more than 100 of the world's greatest lexicographers, scientists and specialists. More copies of this great Dictionary and Encyclopedia have been sold during the past five years than of all other similar works combined; and the sale is steadily increasing. The four great volumes comprise more than 5,000 pages and contain nearly

Cost Over $750,000

3,000 Illustrations

Four massive volumes, each 9 in. wide, 11 1-2 in. long, 3 in. thick, containing 5,359 pages, 16,000 columns of clear type matter, 3,000 illustrations, 250,000 words defined, 50,000 encyclopædic topics. Weight, about 40 lbs.

JUST AS THEY LOOK When in Book Case

The genuine Encyclopedic Dictionary needs no introduction to the intelligent readers of this paper. It has been adopted for use in the public schools of American cities and towns from Maine to California. Of the thousands of cordial indorsements received from prominent men and influential newspapers we can quote only the following

From Eminent Critics

At the very head of all contemporary publications of its kind, and firmly established as one of the few great reference books of the world.
—Christian Herald, N. Y.

It forms in itself a library for the busy man of affairs, the merchant and business professional, whether himself in his line, or the student or apprentice just making a beginning.
—Scientific American.

A standard reference book, treating every branch of knowledge and research in a masterly manner.
—Philadelphia Press.

REMEMBER, this is not a rehash or a mutilated reprint. It is the real thing—the one genuine and complete edition of the greatest reference work the world has ever known.

On Easy Monthly Payments After Ten Days Free Examination

This is our Holiday Offering to 1,000 worthy men and women who thirst for knowledge but are handicapped by slender purses; hence, easy monthly payments will be accepted, and such orders will be filled just as willingly as those for spot cash. Never before have we sold this genuine revised edition for less than double the price now asked; never again will an opportunity be presented to struggling students, teachers, preachers, mechanics, apprentices, etc., to secure this latest and greatest, most comprehensive and most highly endorsed of all the great reference libraries of the world at less than the lowest wholesale price. Remember, every set is guaranteed complete in contents, practically perfect in binding, and of our latest revised edition.

HOW TO GET IT WITHOUT PAYING A PENNY IN ADVANCE

Send your application by first mail, stating which Cloth or Half-Russia leather binding is desired. The complete set will be forwarded by freight. You shall have ten days for thorough examination. If not satisfactory, you can return the set at our expense; or, you can keep the books on the following

You Pay No Money until you're Satisfied

SPECIAL TERMS FOR THESE SETS ONLY: Cloth Binding, $1.00 after 10 days' examination and thereafter $2.00 a month for 5 months; total, $11.00. Half-Russia Binding, $1.00 after 10 days' examination and $2.50 a month for 5 months; total, $13.50. If you prefer to send Cash in full with Order, you shall have the Cloth set for $10.00 cash, or the Half-Russia set (which we strongly recommend) for only $12.00 cash. At these unheard-of low prices the trifling freight charges will be paid by purchaser. This is a chance for which thousands of anxious buyers have been eagerly waiting; but we cannot discriminate, and must honor all applications in the order received. Not more than one set will be allowed any one applicant. Only 1,000 applications will be considered, and none will be honored after Dec. 31. Promptness now will assure you this truly wonderful bargain. Delay will inevitably bring disappointment. Mention this paper. MY DEAD.

BY FREDERICK L. HOSMER.

I can not think of them as dead
Who walk with me no more;
Along the path of life I tread
They have but gone before.

The Father's house is mansioned fair
Beyond my vision dim;
All souls are his, and here or there
Are living unto him.

And still their silent ministry
Within my heart hath place,
As when on earth they walked with me
And met me face to face.

Their lives are made forever mine;
What they to me have been
Hath left henceforth its seal and sign
Engraven deep within.

Mine are they by an ownership
Nor time nor death can free;
For God hath given to Love to keep
Its own eternally.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

Well, Bishop Key stuck his pen in me and flung me from the bottom to the top—from the Mississippi bottom to the top of Tippah county hills. I am now in the region of the short-leaf pine, of sand, and of fine water. Malaria does not breed well in this section, and mosquitoes, frogs and turtles are not numerous here. Ripley and New Albany have a beautiful, comfortable and well-furnished parsonage located at Ripley alongside of a beautiful new church. Ripley is the shire town of Tippah, and New Albany of Union county. They are eighteen miles apart, and connected by a narrow-gauge, or vest-pocket, railroad. This road is not to be grinned at, not by long odds. It is a fine institution, and does the hauling for a large section of country. It is hauling a large lot of jugs at this time from rum-cursed Tennessee into the saloon-free State of Mississippi. We will have to free Tennessee from this curse before we can be free ourselves. Middleton, Tenn., has four small stores and four large saloons, so I hear. That town is a curse, a blight and blast to three or more counties in Mississippi. The traffic is carried on through the express agency. The express offices are the blind tigers in most of our Mississippi towns. They keep up and carry on the whisky trade. The express agent gets a good per cent. or clerk hire from the saloons. He may not drink, and dare not get drunk, but he sells the stuff, all the same.

New Albany sits on the bank of Tallahatchie river, some fifteen or twenty miles from its source. All the water from my parsonage roof runs down by Minter City and on to New Orleans. So you see we are bound to you by a water-tie. The largest half of the North Mississippi Conference pours its floods into the Mississippi river, and thus on to the Gulf of Mexico. A part of our territory sweeps its way to the gulf by way of the Tombigbee and Mobile Bay. Just above me "gravitation turns the other way," and the water goes by the Hatchie, the Tennessee and Ohio rivers to the great Mississippi, and on to the gulf by that circuitous route. So you see I am almost on the top knob of the North Mississippi Conference—from bottom to top at one leap.

Ripley is an old town. It has been here a long, long time. It is a fine place to live, fine people, good churches, excellent schools, splendid water, and good health. I dare not abuse anybody here, for they are all kinfolks in all sorts of ways. Dr. J. V. Murry, whom you know, seems to be the father, grandfather or uncle of half the people here. He is the patriarch of the place. They all take after him, and he takes after the preacher if he doesn't do right. So you may be easy, for I will be kept straight this year.

New Albany seems to be growing rapidly. It is a nice town, fine people, good stores, good school, and a good church. The narrow-gauge road crosses the Memphis and Birmingham road in that town. Some of my earliest recollections are connected with Nesbitt's Camp Ground, seven miles south of New Albany. In 1861 I traveled the Middleton circuit, embracing all the territory between Ripley, Miss., and Bolivar, Tenn. A few of my members on that charge are members of this charge. A man ought to make friends of all the people he meets, for there is no telling when or under what circumstances he may meet them again.

I am delighted with my present charge; indeed, I have never been otherwise than pleased for forty years. I have always had a charge, and all of them have been good charges, better far than I deserved. The fact is, I have deserved nothing, but I have always had something. It is so much better to go cheerfully than to go moodily and out of sorts. When I get out of sorts I think I will quit. I do not want to go at the Lord's work in an ill humor. Jonah got mad when the Lord sent him to Nineveh, and it took a whale to convert him, and even then he did not stay in a good humor long.

Now, if we can only have a great revival of religion in Ripley and New Albany, how glad I will be! Revivals are the life of the church. No church can live, grow and prosper without them. The gospel is an aggressive system of evangelism. This is the purpose of it. It was meant to win the world to Christ. In so far as it falls short of this it fails in its purpose and meaning.

Things are in good condition here for a great work. Whoever follows Rev. J. M. Wyatt will always find the church in good condition. He is a faithful, true man of God, and a wise and diligent pastor of the flock. He will be a prudent, faithful and painstaking presiding elder. Nothing will be left undone and nothing half done. This charge, the churches and the parsonage were all left in good order. He sowed good seed, and I come to reap the harvest. GILDEROY.

Selections.

IN WHAT SPIRIT ARE YOU WORKING?

The discontent with the work you are compelled to do comes from your doing it in the spirit of a drudge. Do your work with the ideality of an artist, with a perception of the beauty which inheres in all honest toil, and the drudgery will become delight. It is the spirit in which we work, not the work itself, which lends dignity to labor.

Every man's soul is a gallery. He can hang it with works of art; he can fresco it with faithfulness, and decorate it with beauty, or he can mar the walls with half-done and botched work; he can hang it with daubs, instead of beautiful pictures; he can blot and bespatter it; he can stain and spoil it. He can not leave the walls blank, for if he is idle, they will grow dingy and grimy, moldy and forbidding; idleness will smite, corrode, and blast. Something he must do, and every touch of the brush is indelible. He can not change or erase it, and begin again. Every indifferent or careless stroke will remain there forever, to reproach him for his folly.

He can never get out of this gallery. It must be his home forever, through time and eternity. He can make it a place of beauty, which shall inspire and elevate, which will be a constant uplifter to his thought and purpose, and which will lead him into a higher life of beauty and holiness; or he can fill it with hideous images which will haunt his disappointed soul through eternity. The canvas is given him, the brush is placed in his hand by an unseen messenger when he enters life. As he looks forth for the first time in this gallery, these words confront him: "The canvas waiteth. What will you do with it? Will you make the most of it?"

In one hand a thousand dollars increase to a million; in another they dwindle to a dime. One buys a title-deed in the West, and his descendants become rich. Another buys canvas, or pen and ink, and sends his genius down the ages.

It is not a question of how many talents you have, but, Have you doubled what you already have? A man who has doubled his one talent does infinitely better than he who merely preserves his ten.

How near do you come to doubling your talents and making the most out of the stuff that is in you? Are you improving your opportunities to the utmost? How near do you come to equaling your possibilities? How does what you are compare with what you might be? You are a failure if what you might be is ten times as large as what you are. You are a failure if you are not doubling your talent or talents, whether at a cobbler's bench or in Congress. A good farmer is more useful than a bad governor; a good private than a bad general.

Mendelssohn once went to see the great Freiburg organ. The custodian, not knowing who he was, would not let him touch it. After much persuasion he allowed the persistent youth to touch a few notes. The old man stood entranced; he had never heard such melody before. At length he asked the great player his name; and, when he had been told, he stood humiliated and self-condemned. A greater musician than Mendelssohn, unknown to us, perhaps, has stood by the human organ which very possibly has given out only "wolf-notes" before the world, pleading with us to let Him touch the strings, and bring out music divine. But we have refused till ago and disuse have rendered the instrument almost unfit to express harmony, even at the touch of the divine hand. We have not made the most of our lives.

There is no one so small that he can not make his life great by high endeavor; no sick, crippled child on its bed that can not fill a niche of some kind in the world.

"Be your own palace, or the world's your jail."

Beautiful lives have blossomed in the darkest places, like pure white lilies full of fragrance springing from the slime of stagnant waters.

A hundred-pound youth may be of but little more value than a brute of the same weight, or may be developed by toil and study, hardship and struggle, ideality and aspiration, into a thorough man or woman, a Washington or a Lincoln, a Milton or a Gladstone, a Grace Darling or a Florence Nightingale, a Mrs. Livermore or a Miss Willard.—Success.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE ARRAIGNED.

The common-sense, no less than the educated, thought of the time must surely frown upon such follies as Christian Science, and unhesitatingly condemn it where it fraudulently usurps command of the healing art and sacrifices life. The other day in England two instances came to light of valuable lives having been lost through the votaries of this dangerous cult, who, without any knowledge of medicine, and disdaining the use of human means to bring about the recovery of their patients, allowed their victims' ailments to run their course and hurry them to the grave. In one of these instances—that of Harold Frederic, the novelist and London correspondent of the New York Times—death was so clearly traceable to the charlatanry of two women Christian Scientists that a coroner's jury brought in a verdict, "guilty of manslaughter," against them, and they are now being proceeded against by the courts. The usual cry, of course, will be made that the women and the adherents of the mischievous organization behind them are being persecuted and are the victims of prejudice. Yet what else is to be done where flagrant cases of maltreatment, or rather want of proper treatment, are forced upon the notice of the legal and health authorities, than to indict those who have been the unquestioned cause of death, prompted either by delusion or by the sake of gain? Under somewhat similar circumstances we proceed legally against quacks and fraudulent people, and though some advance the plea, as a bar to prosecution, that the victims themselves are also under delusion, the law nevertheless justly punishes such, as it punishes attempts at suicide and self-destruction. In Mr. Frederic's case there was, perhaps, not fraud, so much as delusion, in the motives that caused the resort to these women; but delusion or ignorance can be no shield against prosecution where life is sacrificed or put in jeopardy by irregular and criminal usurpation of the science and art of healing. Were this otherwise, the care and sanctity of human life would vanish.

However complacent and even considerate one may desire to be with people who are under a delusion, and who, doubtless, in many instances, honestly believe that they are under the "illumination" of the Divine Spirit, the public safety and interest demand protection, especially from those who profess to treat human ailments without familiarity with medicine, and are ignorant of any scientific knowledge of the healing art. No toleration is permissible when, added to this ignorance, there is a fanatical disregard of human remedies and a passive treatment of the suffering and the ailing, by simply calling into exercise upon such the forms of prayer and the often vagrant power of thought and will. Still less dare the law be tolerant, or even merciful, where, as is often the case, there is willful fraud and imposition, and a pretense of healing, for the sake of gain and what can be wheedled out of the patient. In such instances it is no defense, legal or moral, to say that the patient is a willing victim, or is himself under "delusion," which is more likely to spell "undue influence" or "intimidation."

That we are not writing heedlessly or from prejudice, in dealing with this matter, let us endeavor, if we can, to find out what "Christian Science" is or professes to be. Fortunately, we have at hand an examination, from a dispassionate source, of the text-book or gospel of Christian Science, compiled by its founder, the Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy. The work is entitled "Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures," a bulky volume of over 650 pages. In it, according to our critic, who writes in the London Review, of Nov. 12, last, Christian Science is explained by its author to be "the adaptation of truth to the treatment of disease as well as sin." Now, observes the critic, what is truth? According to Mrs. Eddy, truth is the principle that mind is everything, and matter is nothing.

Since matter is, according to Mrs. Eddy, nothing more nor less than an illusion of the senses, it follows that every accident of matter, such as disease, is an illusion of the senses; and the way to treat disease is to cast out the illusion from the patient's mind. The patient is to be assured that the only real part of his nature is his spirit or soul. If only he can be brought to realize this truth, sickness and disease will no longer have any significance for him—will, in fact, cease to exist.

The fallacy inherent in such a proposition is plain. There is "pain in truth," and, conversely, there is unfortunately a great deal of "truth in pain." But to a person who can set out with the principle that there is no reality in pain and disease, the treatment of them presents no difficulties whatever. He has only to assure the patient that he has been nourishing a delusion, and, presto! the thing vanishes.

The infectiousness of disease, says the writer from whom we quote, is dismissed in a similar spirit of easy assurance.

When a Christian Scientist takes a disease in hand, and, notwithstanding his efforts to cure it, death supervenes, this might be regarded by commonplace minds as a proof that Christian Science had failed. But the interesting feature about the gospel, according to Mrs. Eddy, is that it will never admit failure. Death is as much an illusion of the mortal mind as disease itself. It is our imagination which is playing tricks with us when we fancy we see people dying. A very comfortable theory, to say the least.

Of course Mrs. Eddy finds it necessary to the promulgation of her creed to discredit medical science. She is unmercifully hard on physiology, doctors, drugs, et hoc genus omne. The only trace of treatment in the work is the passive one of reasoning with the patient. What this did for Harold Frederic—who suffered from heart disease and rheumatic fever, and was allowed by the women who attended him and prayed with him to take violent exercise, smoke, and use stimulants!—we know.

Mrs. Eddy recommends "unspoken pleading with the patient," "naming the disease inaudibly," and "mentally arguing with the patient that he has no disease." "Mentally insist that health is the everlasting fact, and sickness the temporal falsity. Then realize the presence of health, and the corporal senses will respond, 'So be it.'"

* * * * * *

But we are wasting words. Aristotle says somewhere that certain people cut themselves off from all argument. The Christian Scientists belong to this order. There is really no arguing with them, because they refuse to admit the fundamental principles of common sense. The only refutation that they can be made to understand would consist in taking them at their word. Long before Christian Science was discovered a French dramatist parodied the character of a quack, who tries to impose upon his patient that pain is imaginary. The patient turns the tables upon his doctor by administering to him a sound thrashing. When he cries out with pain he is laughingly admonished that his sufferings are imaginary. Some such argumentum ad hominem seems to be the only answer that one can return to the pretensions of Christian Science.—Self-Culture.

THE FALL OF SPAIN.

The close of the year 1898 witnesses the withdrawal from the American continent of Spanish rule, established four hundred years ago, with the victorious arms of a Ferdinand, the genius of a Columbus, and the courage of a Cortez and a Pizarro to sustain it. Advancing to take the place is our American civilization, the American spirit of liberty, progress and order, starting from the trading-post at Manhattan, the Rock of Plymouth, the spreading elm under which William Penn signed his treaty of everlasting peace with the red man, and the other rude settlements of early days, where men and women sincere in their religious belief, however different in their creeds, sought "freedom to worship God." Who would have dreamed, a quarter of a thousand years ago, that Spain's vast empire would crumble to utter decay, while those frail settlements, founded on the eternal corner-stone of truth, would rise to be the overshadowing power of half the world?

Yet it has come to pass, and nothing in history has a deeper lesson for individuals as well as for nations. Spain rioted in the wealth of her colonies; she used them only as a means for enriching herself, regardless of the welfare of humanity beyond her borders; she lavished in luxury, without any thought of the morrow, the gold and silver wrung from the toil and tears of subject and perishing races. She abandoned the path of industry, forgot the rugged virtues which had made her sons formidable in war, and happy and contented in peace. She thought the golden stream would flow on forever; that America would never cease to yield the riches necessary to minister to Spanish idleness and indulgence. But from this dream there was a rude awakening, when nations that had retained their vigor stepped in, and colonists asserted their independence.

Spain, stripped of her possessions in South America, still retained her bigotry and her pride. She had learned nothing by experience, and now she loses all, and is once more confined virtually within the boundaries of the peninsula. With a staggering burden of debt she faces a future as gloomy as her past has been reckless and infamous. It is a sad fall—the saddest of modern times; but it is the inevitable, natural, logical result of Spanish prodigality, cruelty and aversion to every virtue that tends to make enduring the strength and wealth of men and of nations.—Exchange.

PREACHING TO THE "TIMES."

In actual fact "times" are less variable for the purposes of a preacher than is commonly supposed. Steamships and railway cars differ materially from the conveyances they have superseded, but their passengers have, as men and women, undergone no corresponding change. The carnal mind is still enmity against God. Man is still so ignorant that he needs a great Prophet; so guilty that he needs atonement; so rebellious that he needs to be defended; so wayward that he needs to be "established" and kept by the mighty power of God. Nor does the enemy of our souls discover or invent a great deal. Satan is a finite being. He has not materially modified or improved his devices since the beginning. Worldliness in our time is in substance the same as before the flood. If you study the history of our first parents' temptation, you will see how few improvements the tempter has effected in all these thousands of years. Study the temptation of our Lord, and you will see that the policy tried on him is still the diabolical policy applied to man. To sow the seeds of distrust of God and confidence in self; to point out easy roads to elevation on Satan's plan; or to lead men into self-destroying presumption—this is, even now, as then the aim of Satan in all the agencies he establishes and in all the movements he inspires.—Dr. John Hall.

SUBDUING FIGURES.

We are told that Professor S. W. Burnham, an astronomer of Chicago, has invented a calculating machine by the aid of which multiplication and division, the extraction of square roots, and roots up to the ninth power, entail no more mental work than the mere moving of a screw and an index hand. It consists of two metal circles, the scale cut on the inner edge of the outer circle, and on the outer edge of the inner circle. It is divided into a thousand lines, with extended lines at the hundreds and tens. Multiplication is made by bringing the lines of the figure to be multiplied and the multiplier together. The result is read at zero. There is an index hand swung to the center of the machine.

Figures being arbitrary, such combinations are possible. The adding machines used in banks are wonders in their way.—Exchange.

WHAT WE KNOW.

BY JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER.

Thal more and more a Providence
Of love is understood,
Making the springs of time and sense
Sweet with eternal good—,

That death seems but a covered way
Which opens into light,
Wherein no blinded child can stray
Beyond the Father's sight -

That care and trial seem at last,
Through memory's sunset air,
Like mountain ranges overpast
In purple distance fair—

That all the jarring notes of life
Seem blending in a psalm,
And all the angles of its strife
Slow rounding into calm.

And so the shadows fall apart.
And so the west winds play;
And all the windows of my heart
I open to the day.

INDIAN MISSION.

Since my last article to the ADVOCATE I have traveled in or through Neshoba, Leake, Scott, Newton, and Jasper counties, in which most of the Choctaws are situated. I find about 2,000 in all in these counties. I am told there are a considerable number of them in Yazoo and Green counties, making, according to the last census, 3,000 in all. I find the Roman Catholics have two churches among them, with a membership of, perhaps, 400 (children included). The Baptists have five organizations among them, and, perhaps, 300 members and adherents; and the M. E. Church, South, has an organization and 100 members and adherents, which leaves a balance within the bounds of our Mississippi Conference of 2 200 Choctaws in our midst utterly destitute of the gospel. Moreover, I find that the Catholic Indians are Catholics mainly to get a few acres of land on which to live and a school for their children. As to its Christianizing them, it seems not to do it. The priest allows them to dance, become drunken, attend ball plays, where they gamble and kill each other. I have the following from an old Indian who lived six years on Catholic lands. He says: "Catholic, he no make Injun any better. He let Injun dance, drink whisky, get drunk, play ball, bet, and fight. He no make him any better in here" (laying his hand on his breast).

The Baptists have very nearly ceased to do anything at all for them. They have virtually left them to themselves. And the Methodists are only furnishing them one missionary, with only half of his time given directly to them. Well might they say, "No man careth for my soul." While to Christianize and educate them will require the whole time of eight or ten preachers (as they are so badly scattered) for a generation, and the expenditure of several thousand dollars, it seems to me to be imperative for some one of the evangelical churches to espouse their cause and undertake the work. The Baptists possibly could do it better than any other, as they have a larger membership; but will they do it? I think not. Hence the all-important question to us may be expressed by the poet:

Shall we whose souls are lighted
With wisdom from on high,
Shall we to men benighted
The lamp of life deny?

If not, then may I suggest the remainder of the stanza as our motto?

Salvation! O salvation!
The joyful sound proclaim,
Till earth's remotest nation
Has learned Messiah's name.

For another year: One young white preacher to take charge of the mission circuit now organized, and two or three Choctaw preachers and helpers, and a more experienced preacher in charge of the whole affair, to counsel and direct the others, to assist them in their protracted meetings, to locate and have established public schools wherever needed, to select sites and to secure deeds to our church, to raise funds to build suitable churches, and superintend the building of some, will suffice. And one year hence we can increase our force largely without much greater financial expense.

The following amounts have been received since last report:

OCTOBER.

Walnut Grove	$ 85
Paulding	2 05
Pachuta	3 35
Quitman	16 60
Why Not	3 90

NOVEMBER.

Pleasant Hill	$ 1 75
Why Not	25

DECEMBER.

East End, Meridian	$ 75

Also $3 from Quitman to help buy a saddle for our Choctaw preacher, which was purchased forthwith. And then what should I receive but a card from Bro. M. L. Burton and other friends of Water Valley, notifying me they had shipped to my address for Bro. Jim Johnson a new saddle! So the Lord has provided for him "more than we asked or thought" to receive—two saddles. But better two than none. I also wish to acknowledge the receipt of school books from The American Book Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; Flora, Miss., and from two unknown sources, for all of which we are profoundly thankful. And may God's richest blessings rest upon the givers!

NOTICE.

MR. EDITOR: Please say that at the late session of the North Mississippi Conference, W. S. Shipman was elected president of the Board of Missions, and J. H. Shumaker, of Inka, was elected treasurer of same. I write this to call the attention of the brethren to the fact that they are to send their mission moneys to Bro. Shumaker, and not to me, and it will be well for presiding elders to remember that by resolution of the Conference they are not to pay mission preachers. All domestic funds must pass through the hands of the treasurer.

When you can, brethren, send your money to Bro. Shumaker in exchange, made payable to him; then, if it is domestic money, he puts it in the bank to his credit, and when an order comes on a call for it, he can check it out, and by this means keep his own books. If it is foreign mission money, he makes the exchange payable to J. D. Hamilton.

If you will observe these rules, it will save our treasurer a very great deal of trouble, and, remember, he is an unsalaried and hard-worked man.

W. S. SHIPMAN.

"TOBACCO."

The North Mississippi Conference passed the following resolution with a very hearty vote:

Whereas, Ministers of the gospel should be examples to their flocks in all things; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we discourage the use of tobacco to the full extent of our ability, especially among the rising generation.

The above was signed by seven preachers and four laymen.

The Western North Carolina Conference passed the following:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Conference that all our preachers and laymen should prudently discourage the use of tobacco in all forms, among our young people especially.

Resolved, That we encourage the enforcement of our State statute against the sale of the cigarette to minors. (Nashville Christian Advocate.)

We are glad to see a growing sentiment against the use of the weed.

After having passed through such trying seasons—war, pestilence, and bereavements—it was fitting that those of us who gathered at Brookhaven, Dec. 1, to hold the nineteenth annual meeting of the W. F. M. S., Mississippi Conference, should have for our preliminary service that evening a Bible reading on prayer. Papers were read on the prayer-lives of our now glorified sisters, Mrs. Hayes and Mrs. McGavock; also of Livingstone, whose soul took its flight while on his knees in prayer.

We met in business session Dec. 2, 10 o'clock A. M., with our president, Miss Marshall, in the chair. Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. E. D. Jones. Hymn 732 was sung, and Acts xvi, 25 40, was read. We were reminded that Paul was led by the Spirit into Macedonia, and to the woman's prayer meeting by the river-side on the first Sabbath. Then and there the Holy Spirit planted the seed in Lydia's heart, which established the first Christian home in the Aryan race—"a woman's heart was the plant-bed for missionary progress and power." And it has been said: "To a careful student of the Pauline epistles it is not too much to say that this woman (Phebe), sent under apostolic sanction, with the guidance of the Holy Spirit, bore the commission to form the first purely foreign missionary society known to Christendom." We also learn that the first convert in this country was led to conviction of sin by the testimony of a faithful Christian woman in a conversation on experimental religion.

About thirty persons were present, including visitors; twenty-two accredited voters. Several of the officers were absent. We felt honored and inspired by the helpful presence of Mrs. Trueheart, the corresponding secretary of the W. B. M., and Miss Moore, the returned missionary from Brazil.

The greater portion of Friday was devoted to the consideration of reports from districts and auxiliaries. Mrs. R. R. Parker opened the discussion on foreign work by telling of the earlier life of Mrs. Lambuth, which was most interesting. Mrs. Trueheart confined her talk principally to the work in China, but gave a glowing account of the work in Mexico. She said Bishop Wilson said, "Go to Japan; go to Cuba," and that our Board would enter Cuba as soon as the General Board prepares the way. The corresponding secretary's report will hereafter be read at the beginning of the session, which will insure more valuable committee work. A kindly greeting, by letter, from Mrs. Reed, of Natchez, was read, and the Conference voted a response. (Read Num. vi, 24-26.)

ANNIVERSARY WITH GREETINGS

This pleasant interval between business hours was, as usual, a restful time of feasting. Dr. Featherston, who so kindly encouraged us by his presence and prayers during almost the entire session, led the devotional exercises.

Rev. B F. Jones expressed in his most kindly greeting, in behalf of the Methodist Church and town, what we already were made to feel in our hearts—the royal welcome to hearts and homes.

With pathos and eloquence the Presbyterian minister mirrored his kindly thoughts in impressive words, the reflection of the Christ-like spirit, evoking loving echoes from all hearts. "We are one in Christ Jesus."

Mrs. Vance represented the Baptist Church, and her few chosen words were luminous with the same Christ-like spirit.

Miss Agnes Chrisman cheered and enthused us with loving words from the Brookhaven auxiliary, which dissipated all stray thoughts of loneliness, for we felt at home with sisters and friends.

Mrs. Featherston, with words clothed in beautiful imagery, responded most fittingly in behalf of the Conference.

The strong, forceful words of the president, Miss Marshall, followed, inspiring us to enter the labors of the new year with a new inspiration of loving zeal and holy aspiration.

SATURDAY.

Reports from auxiliaries and some committees were received. A letter from Miss Bettie Hughes, our beloved missionary to China, was read by Miss Smylie; also one from the missionary society in Shanghai. The original in Chinese none could decipher.

Fraternal greetings from our sister society, W. H. M. S., was presented by Miss Sue Stephens, eliciting, we trust, the ardent hope that there shall be "such an adjustment of our relations as will please our heavenly Father and promote the good of the societies."

In order that we may have at once the benefit of the deliberations of the Board meeting, which is held in May, and that the treasurer's report from March to March shall be the time for reports from auxiliaries, we return to our usual time of holding our annual meeting, which will be the Saturday next preceding the fourth Sabbath in June. We changed from Friday to Saturday as the day for beginning business.

The editor's report was read, who emphasized the importance of keeping all informed of the work through the medium of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. A great many obtain information from no other source. She referred to her communication some time ago in the ADVOCATE concerning the value and great need of female physicians in the foreign fields; that the remaining leaflets secured from Dr. Lambuth will be distributed among the district secretaries not already supplied. She also advised through the column the observance of the Friday before the annual meeting as a day of fasting and prayer. We trust it was faithfully observed in accordance with the request of our president. Have we claimed the inspiration and help from our motto, "Attempt great things for God; expect great things from God," and garnered sufficient fruitage? Let's endeavor to surpass last year's achievements, and realize a fuller meaning under the same motto.

Saturday evening Mrs. Trueheart and Miss Moore addressed the congregation. The stormy weather prevented a large attendance.

SABBATH SERVICES.

We were most forcibly reminded of our obligation to pay the debt of all debts by Dr. Featherston, who preached the annual sermon, selecting Rom. i, 14: "I am debtor both to Greeks and to barbarians; both to the wise and to the foolish." (R. V.) His words served to mellow the hearts of the large number, who bore testimony to this obligation by partaking of the Sacrament.

The afternoon service was specially for the children, but the overgrown children were delightfully entertained. It was conducted by the president of the young people's auxiliary. Besides some recitations and most appropriate music by the members, Mrs. R. R. Parker entertained and instructed the children with a talk on character, making it more forceful and impressive by presenting printed cards with the parallel quotations, "Even a child is known by his doings," of the Old Testament, and "By their fruits ye shall know them," of the New Testament. Miss Moore gave splendid advice, and sang a song in Spanish. Mrs. Trueheart gave them the benefit of some of her travels among the heathen.

Sunday evening the teachers of the college and other friends, as at other times, gladdened our hearts with beautiful music. Miss Sallie Smylie read a portion of her report of the Board meeting. We considered the report of the treasurer, presented by Miss Mary Andrews, gratifying, considering the many hindrances.

The fifth Annual Conference of the Woman's Home Mission Society, Mississippi Conference, was held at East End Methodist Church, Meridian. Reports showed gratifying progress, though only 30 of 140 charges have organized auxiliaries. Cordial words of greeting were spoken by delegates from three Meridian Churches: West End, East End, and the Young Ladies' Home Mission Society of Central; response in behalf of visiting delegates by Mrs. Duncan Harmon. The session was delightful and harmonious throughout, and all signs point to greatly increased numbers the coming year. Appropriations were made to four parsonages: Chunky, Raleigh, East End, and Roxie; the last conditionally, if the title be made perfect. The absence of several members was greatly regretted, especially Mrs. Turner, Mrs. J. P. Drake, and our strong right hand, Mrs. S S. Cope.

The following officers were elected: President, Miss Purnell; vice-president, Mrs. Chatfield; second vice-president, Mrs. Turner; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Cope; treasurer, Mrs. Holloman; recording secretary, Miss Inez Watts.

Orders for Minutes will be filled by applying to the recording secretary, Meridian. Five cents a copy for publication.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

Dear Friends of the Home Mission Society: We give you a glad and heartfelt greeting. The society which I represent to-night is doubly glad to have you come from your work all about over our dear State of Mississippi, to tell us what it is that you are doing, and how it is that you are doing it.

Our Young Ladies' Home Mission Society of Central Church is yet an infant hardly out of its long clothes, and has taken but a few short first steps. We would ask you to teach us to train our hands what things to grasp and hold and use as our dearest duty and pleasure; to show us where to place our feet, that we may not stumble or fall; to tell us what food for heart and brain we must take, that we may grow strong for this noble work for God and our follows. From the bounty of your knowledge and experience we would beg you to replenish the empty store-house of our knowledge. Into the broad and fertile field in which you labor we, who have just entered the wicket-gate, would advance and bear the heat of the day beside you. Truly this work is a grand one. In the mighty march which the organized societies for benevolence will make in the next twenty-five years, I see our Home Mission Society taking valiant strides. I see in every town, village and circuit of the South parsonages built or aided by us. Ideal parsonages, most of them; roomy and comfortable, with conveniences to help the busy pastors' wives with their household burdens, that they may have time to take part in the woman's church societies, and to know and be known by their husbands' parishioners. Parsonages with ideal pastor's studies, well lighted, well heated, and well arranged for the good man's beloved books and papers.

I see an army of Visiting Committees carrying light, sunshine and hopefulness into the homes of the poor and the lowly and the lonely and the grief-stricken, uplifting, broadening and Christianizing narrowed and shut-in lives; doing his bidding who spoke of "the least of these my brethren." I see the thousands of the godly men who, with their wives and families, have left home, comfort, and the dear delight of enlightened civilization to take the message of Christ to the frontiers and wilderness-borders of our land, with hearts made glad and home made home-like by the cheer and comfort sent them by our societies; lifting grateful hearts to our heavenly Father for the gift of "those good women."

I see our sister lands, Cuba and Porto Rico, and the neighboring islands, dotted with Southern Methodist Churches, and by their sides cosy little parsonages holding their treasures of helpfulness to the darkened lives around them, built and kept in comfort by the Home Mission Societies. For surely these are not foreign lands, and we have full right to claim them as our fields; and the thought that we may help in educating and enlightening these hitherto degraded lives is enough to inspire us with a great and glad joy. God grant that we may, far more than we have done, reach out our hands, overflowing with physical and spiritual comfort, to our Cuban and Porto Rican sisters and brothers.

And, last, scattered here and there I see those thrice-blessed, because merciful, homes, where unfortunate and shadowed lives may find peace and usefulness and a Savior. And all this we may bring about. Does it not inspire us to labor as never before? You who have been so long in this work, no doubt have these and far more beautiful visions deep in your hearts as you toil. We would learn of these that we may catch more of the divine fire.

Frances Willard, in an address to a vast throng of her white ribboners several years ago, said something that, in closing, I would like to say with her to you. She said: "This is an age that does not forever keep talking about coming to Christ as a Savior, but talks about going with Christ out to the suffering and forgotten and tempted and destroyed. Oh, let us take the pierced hand; let us follow the white figure of the ages; let us all come into line with him, going with Christ, and by his grace may it truly be said of us, when we have worked our little work and passed away, 'These are they who heard the cry of the world.' It is only the spiritual ear that can hear that cry. I can wish for myself or for you nothing more heavenly than that, forgetting the dissonant voices which are round about us, we might come up to the level where we can hear the cry of the world and help to hush it into peace, as a mother soothes the baby on her breast."

Whatever may be the mysteries of life and death, there is one mystery which the cross of Christ reveals to us, and that is the infinite and absolute goodness of God.—Charles Kingsley.

The Christian Life.

THE BEST CONSECRATION.

The best consecration about which we know anything is open-handed liberality for the cause of Christ. When a man gives to the Master through gratitude for what has been done for him by the gospel, he affords excellent proof of the sincerity of his Christian life. Prayers made in the devotional meetings of the church and exhortations to the brethren are good in their way, but they may be all nullified by the practice behind them. What use, for instance, is a petition asking for the coming of the better kingdom, if one is doing little or nothing toward bringing about that result? Or what use is there in addressing one's fellow-Christians upon the needs of the missionary interest, if he is withholding the means which would help to spread the knowledge of the truth over the world? As well might a citizen declare his loyalty to the government, and then seek to overthrow the foundations upon which that government rests. Speaking favorably for Christ with the lips, and saying not a word for him with the hands, is treason.

Many of our churches to day are filled with selfishness. An abundance of money is spent for personal gratification, and a pittance given for the enrichment of the cross. A great river of expenditure rolls earthward, but into the treasury of the Lord dribbles a rill of contribution. The consequence is that such churches are out of the reach of God's blessing and are dead. The fires of revival can not be kindled upon icebergs and snow banks. But where true benevolence is, there the Holy Spirit sends his quickening flames. Consecrated gold and silver make a lever for lifting the world into the millennium. When the whole Christian church awakes to this fact, we may listen to the sound of the King's chariot wheels over the pavement of the sky.

Dear readers, how are you helping to maintain and speed on the work of Jesus Christ? Do you give as you pay your fare in a street car, thoughtlessly tossing a nickel into the plate as it is passed along by the collector in the church? Then we fear that you are not a consecrated Christian. The true way is to set apart a certain amount of your income, and systematically give that amount. Your own conscience, if you have not stifled its voice, must determine the sum. But whatever you decide, do not, let it be begged of you, be miserly toward God. A lean purse put aside for him, when you reserve a fat one for yourself, will be an indication of a starved soul. "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver"—one who smiles as he gives, and then breaks out into a laugh of gladness at the thought of willingly paying a little of the enormous debt of thankfulness owed by him to God by reason of the gift of salvation. Oh, for a multiplication of such givers within the church in these present times! No more stories, then, of mortgaged sanctuaries, and unpaid pastors and missionaries, and abandoned fields, and all those detailed reports of crippled work with which the religious press is burdened. Every Christian consecrating a portion of his income, making it sacred to God, and wisely employing it, would be the means of causing incalculable good, and in the end there would be widespread blessing of oceanic depth and power.—The Rev. William Bancroft, in The Presbyterian.

"In all thy ways acknowledge him." Perhaps we acknowledge God in spiritual things, but shut him out of the other parts of our life. We talk to him about our souls, but not about our daily work, our week-day life. What did you pray for yesterday? Did you men talk to God about your business, your buying and selling, your farm work, your common task work? Did you women pray about your household affairs, asking God to help you keep tidy homes, to train your children well, to be sweet-tempered, gentle, patient, thoughtful? Did you young people talk with God about your studies, your amusements, your friendships, your books? We make a mistake when we take God into our counsel in any mere section of our life.—J. R. Miller.

The more thoroughly a man believes in heaven the better citizen of earth does he become.

A MISSIONARY'S WIFE

Interesting Letter from India—A Long Summer Season.

The following letter is from the wife of an American Baptist missionary at Nowgong, Assam, India: "After living here for several years I found the climate was weakening me. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla every summer. This I found so beneficial that I now take one dose every morning for nine months in the year, that is, through the hot weather. My general health is excellent and my blood is in good condition. My weight does not vary more than one pound throughout the year. I find Hood's Sarsaparilla indispensable in the summer and recommend it for use in a debilitating climate." MRS. P. H. MOORE.

The above letter is similar to thousands received and constantly coming in.

PEACE.

BY D. C. DICKERS.

Lord God of Peace, at last—at last—
Thy pitying ear hath heard
Above the roar and battle's blast
And boom of cannon firing fast
The mother's piteous word
From harrowed heart, the stifled cry
Of sorrowed humes, the sobbing sigh
Ily keenest anguish stirred—
Lord God of Peace, thou heard'st on high.

Lord God of Peace, at last—at last—
Thy face is toward us turned,
And thro' the war-cloud flying past,
And thro' the shadows melting fast,
Thy smile is yet discerned;
And o'er the ashen eastern skies
We see thy bow of promise rise,
And thru' the dark we learned,
Lord God of Peace, thy priceless prize.

Thy still, small voice is heard
Above the battle's besom blast
And boom of cannon firing fast—
"Be still." The welcome word
Hath soothed the surging, troubled seas,
Hath lulled the tempest wind to ease,
And stilled the passions stirred—
Lord God of Peace, we bend our knees.

Lord God of Peace, at last—at last—
Thine overlasting arm
Is bared; we see in periled past
Thy providence; thou ever hast
In o'er the war's alarm
Had still thine ends of justice meet
To compass—these are now complete;
Shield us from further harm—
Lord God of Peace, thy reign we greet!

THE GRAND OLD MAN.

During the thirty years prior to the Spring of 1894, when he retired from political life, no other man so powerfully molded events or shaped the history of his country as William E. Gladstone. Four times he was prime minister of England. But the stirring episodes of the past generation are too familiar for repetition here, further than recurrence to them will serve to illustrate the moral growth of the great statesman. Most men are radical in youth and conservative in age. With Mr. Gladstone, the rule has been reversed. As we have seen, he entered public life dominated by prejudice and ancient thought. Long he struggled toward the light, but his course has been ever upward, because his heart has been always pure. He has afforded our century a conspicuous example of a man of conscience and moral rectitude, and therefore he has been untouched by the materialism of the market or the deification of the dollar. The closing decades of his life hold a wonderful interest for students of human progress; for here we see that a passion for justice and right more and more overmastered all considerations of policy or expediency. His vision broadened. He became a moral leader. It is not easy to be at once an apostle of justice and a prime minister of England, and so it happened that while for a time the people followed their chieftain with a blind, unquestioning loyalty rarely seen in modern times, at length the leader distanced his party. He spake to them in an unknown tongue. He had ascended the mountain too rapidly for even his chosen companions, and when he sought to crown his career by giving to Ireland that measure of Home Rule which would allow her people to govern themselves, while remaining subjects of England,—when, in a word, he spoke for justice and humanity, when he uttered the Golden Rule in connection with the Emerald Isle, he beheld his trusted lieutenants falling away, aye, even ranging themselves against him. And I know of no sublimer sight in modern political history than that presented by Gladstone during the memorable years extending from 1886 to 1893. It was the spectacle of an aged statesman crowned with the snow of fourscore years, but with the light of justice blazing in his eyes, and with voice strong and eloquent as of old, opposing the unreasoning prejudice of centuries. We saw old warriors who had fought shoulder to shoulder with him deserting. All this, however, seemed to nerve and stimulate him, and with redoubled energy he pressed forward as a young knight battling for a more perfect realization of the Golden Rule on earth. Very impressive was the scene presented by the Grand Old Man when, on Feb. 19, 1893, after delivering his last great argument on Home Rule before one of the most distinguished audiences that had ever assembled in London, he slowly, and in a voice low, but clear and almost bell-like, thus closed his speech in the House of Commons:

"Sir, it would be a misery to me if I had omitted, in these closing years, any measure possible for me to take toward upholding and promoting what I believe to be the cause, not of one party nor of another, not of one nation nor another, but of all parties and all nations inhabiting these islands. Let me entreat you,—if it were my latest breath, I would entreat you,—to let the dead bury its dead. Cast behind you every recollection of bygone evils. Cherish love, and sustain one another through all the vicissitudes of human affairs in the times that are to come."

And what shall be said of the last great battle, by which the bill for Home Rule passed the House, only to be killed by the lords? Was it a failure? Did Mr. Gladstone err? I answer, No; not if we admit that it is better to be just than victorious; not if Wisdom is the child of Goodness; not if the Golden Rule is the ever safe guide for civilization. No; Mr. Gladstone did not err. The short-sighted under-leaders were so engrossed in considerations of self-advancement that they checked for a time the triumph of justice. But time has vindicated the far-seeing statesman, and established the wisdom of Gladstone's contention, for in the long run it is ever wise to be just.

In the Spring of 1894 Mr. Gladstone retired from public life and sought rest at his beautiful home, almost under the shadows of the purple-clad hills of Wales. He went into retirement, but could not remain idle. His tireless brain was not accustomed to rest, and he has continued to be a real power in the thought-world until recently, when the angel with the lilies laid her hand upon his arm, and, bending low, whispered, "Rest awhile, for the morning cometh."—Success.

The old saying that "the prayer meeting is the thermometer of the church," may to some extent be true, but we are strongly inclined to the opinion that the subscription list furnishes about the best test of the piety of the church. There are many who will attend the prayer meeting and fervently participate in its exercises, who wretchedly fail to do their duty in financially supporting the Lord's cause. We once knew an elder in one of our churches who was always faithful in attending the Sabbath services and the prayer meeting—generally taking part in the latter, who, though a man of large means, was most niggardly in his contributions for the support of the church. Words are cheap. It generally involves very little if any self-denial to attend the prayer meeting, but when it comes to the giving of one's substance, a different spirit is evinced. He hems and haws and finally puts his name down for a sum which represents no self-denial whatever. And it often happens, too, when a financial stringency comes, and he feels the need of economizing, the first thing he does is to cancel his subscription to the church. Then there are others whose personal and family expenses are kept at a high figure, while their church subscription is almost a mere pittance. It is idle for such people to talk about self-sacrifice when they show themselves to be strangers to its spirit and experience. It is along this line that the church needs a revival. We have enough of the so-called revivals which seem to consist only in the addition of names to the membership roll, but what the church sorely needs is a revival within the church; a revival which will awaken Christian people to a realization of their stewardship and the responsibilities growing out of it. Such a revival will come as a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, and when it does come the church will feel the thrill and strength of a new life.—Exchange.

THE KIND OF REVIVAL NEEDED.

The kind of revival needed is one that comes from heaven, and will last all through the year; that will glorify God, exalt the Lord Jesus Christ, and honor the Holy Spirit; that will prefer the Bible to the Sunday newspaper and novel, and remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy; that will choose the house of God to Sunday visiting and pleasure seeking, the prayer meeting before the theatre, club-house, skating rink, or dance party; that will repair family altars and recognize God at the dining table; that will think of the door-mat and scraper, and that mother, sister or wife may need water, wood or coal brought into the house; that in putting up the stove will rigidly follow the directions of James v, 12; that will be sweet, kind, gentle and helpful in the home; that will not fail to pay all just debts, taxes and church dues; that in harnessing up the horse or mule in Winter will not put a frosty bit into the mouth of the dumb brute; that while putting the can of milk into the water will be careful not to let the water get into the milk; that will not put all the best strawberries, peaches, and apples on the top and the poor ones in the bottom; that will make people keep their word—in fact, will make them upright, downright, outright and all-right; that will not put off visiting the sick until Sunday; that will avoid the drink demon and abstain from that superfluity of nastiness, tobacco, and will treat the saloon by vote as Moses treated the golden calf (Ex. xxxii, 20) and as Hezekiah did the serpent of brass (I. Kings xviii, 4). Such a revival as this, we think, will soften hard times, will make the wilderness and solitary place glad, and the desert to rejoice and blossom as the rose, and earth will thus become as the garden of the Lord.—Zion's Herald.

NOTHING TO FEAR FOR CHRISTIANITY.

There are here and there so-called "new religious systems" being developed, and even organizations formed, in view of which some are despondent as to the future of our evangelical faith. Spiritualism, "Christian Science," and the like, are specimens. I have no fear about the issue, although trembled over these who are fascinated by these plausible substitutes for the religion of the Bible. Time was when atheism and infidelity stood boldly in front of advancing truth, and tried to threw it back. The prince of this world is cunning enough to know that such policy is now practically useless. He does not assail religion as in other days, but tries to get worthless substitutes for it. The train could not be met and stopped, but ingenuity may put down some new rails and get it off the track. But these revivals of old human speculations will have their day and disappear. This will be not from the inherent energy of the church, but from the power of God the Holy Spirit working through the truth; and it is not a hope built on the zeal, fidelity, and consecration of our denominations, for we are far from being up to the standard fixed by the church's Head, and are too much inclined to formalism and the teachings of worldly wisdom, but it is based on the infallible truth that "the Lord reigneth."—Doctor John Hall.

GOLDEN GOSSIP.

How easy it is to speak kindly of everyone. If, during our conversation a bitter thought comes in our heart, we can just hesitate a minute; we will be sure to change that hard word to something pleasant, and thus make life happier not only for the friend in question, but it will certainly make our hearts lighter to know that no hasty word of ours has been the means of making another sad. For cruel words, sometimes intentional, but more often uttered thoughtlessly, can never be instrumental of good, and when once spoken can never be recalled. There is certainly something good to be found in every human soul, so we should try during our whole life to speak well of others. It certainly is difficult sometimes to see the good in the midst of so much dross, but if we can not speak well, do not speak ill. We must leave such unfortunates out of our conversation. There are so many pleasant truths to be uttered which will make life sweeter and more worth the living. We must ever try to put away all unfriendly thoughts and temptations, and remember the example we have to follow. Strive to be more like him every day and every hour. Now, if we must talk, let it be golden gossip. "Speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle, showing all meekness to all men." (Titus iii, 2.)—Selected.

A prayerless membership makes a powerless ministry. And a church which prays much for its pastor will surely receive power through its pastor.

A woman does not have to be placed under an X-ray to show to all beholders that she is suffering from ill-health. Ill-health marks a woman much more quickly than it does a man. It destroys the sparkle in her eye, the bloom of health on her cheek, her vivacity of manner, her sprightliness of carriage and makes her nervous, petulant and despondent.

Generally ill-health in a woman is due to disorders or derangements of the delicate and important feminine organs which are the cradle of the race. No woman who suffers in this way can retain her good looks or her attractiveness. The daily burden of torturing, dragging pains that she carries, will soon make her a physical wreck, and eventually either kill her or drive her to insanity. Any woman may restore and retain her health and strength in a womanly way by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures absolutely and completely the weakness and diseases peculiar to her sex. It does away with the necessity for the obnoxious "examinations" and "local treatments" insisted upon by nearly all physicians, and enables her to treat herself in the privacy of her home. It is the invention of Dr. R. V. Pierce, for thirty years chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. Any woman may consult him by letter free of charge. All correspondence sacredly confidential.

"I was sickly for sixteen years with prolapsus, weakness, disagreeable drain, pain in the small of my back and costiveness," writes Mrs. Mary Ashlin, of Barronett, Barron Co., Wis. "When I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I could not sit up. After taking it for one week I got up and did my housework. I have taken four bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription,' one bottle of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and three bottles of the 'Pleasant Pellets.' These medicines have cured me. I feel as well as I ever did. Seven of the best doctors in the land treated my case, but gave me no relief."

Best Edition of the World's Best Book,

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers. New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to January, 1900. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

SELF-PRONOUNCING

S. S. Teachers' Reference Bible

Text Conforms Exactly to the Oxford Teachers' Edition.

This Bible is printed from Large, Beautiful and Clear New Type. All Proper Names are Divided into Syllables and Every Vowel is Marked and the Syllables Inflected, showing the Sounds and Accents as they are given in a Dictionary, thus enabling the reader to properly pronounce every word. This feature is a great improvement and a strong recommendation for this Bible over others.

This Bible contains the celebrated Oxford Teachers' Helps together with a complete series of New Maps illustrating the geography of Palestine and the surrounding countries from the earliest times, and embodying the most recent discoveries renders this Bible especially desirable to teachers and students of the Holy Scriptures.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1898.

The year is closed, the record made.
The last deed done, the last word said;
The memory alone remains
Of all its joys, its griefs, its gains:
And now, with purpose full and clear,
I turn to meet another year.

There are no crown-wearers in heaven that were not cross-bearers here below.—Spurgeon.

Three things are known only in the following way—a hero in war, a friend in necessity, and a wise man in anger.—Arabic.

The constant duty of every man to his fellows is to ascertain his own powers and special gifts, and to strengthen for the help of others.—John Ruskin.

Come, take that task of yours which you have been hesitating before, and shirking, and walking around, and on this very day lift it up and do it.—Phillips Brooks.

Yesterday is yours no longer; tomorrow may never be yours; but to-day is yours, the living present yours, and in the living present you may stretch forward to the things that are before.—F. W. Farrar.

Life is made up, not of great sacrifices and duties, but of little affairs, in which smiles and kindness and little services cheerfully rendered are what win and preserve the heart and secure comfort.—Sir Humphrey Davy.

We make unlovely all our every days by the little soul we put into our efforts, by the way in which duties push us forward, by lack of that electric something which makes all word, all deed, quiver and glow. J. F. W. Ware.

There are joys which long to be ours. God sends ten thousand truths which come about our souls like birds, seeking inlet; but we shut them out, and so they bring us nothing, but sit and sing awhile, and then fly away.—Selected.

Nothing so strengthens the mind and enlarges the manhood and widens the thought as the constant effort to measure up to a high ideal, to struggle after that which is beyond us and above us. It stretches the mind, as it were, to a larger measure, and touches the life to finer issues.—Success.

It is sweet to know in time of sorrow that God's love changes not. It is the same in the brightness and when the brightness changes into gloom. It is the same in joy and when the joy turns to grief. It is the same when blessings are given and when they are recalled.—Sacred Heart Review.

The library, therefore, of wisdom, is more precious than all riches; and nothing that can be wished for is worthy to be compared with it. Whosoever acknowledges himself to be a zealous follower of truth, of happiness, of wisdom, of science, or even of faith, must of necessity make himself a lover of books.—Richard DeBury.

THE CLOSING YEAR.

As the old year dies it is both helpful and appropriate to celebrate its departure by taking a serious glance backward over its scenes and occurrences, its joys and sorrows, its successes and failures. At such a time there is no little profit in giving ourselves both to introspection and retrospection, in order that we may ascertain whether we are making real progress, or whether we are merely drifting about on the ocean of circumstance.

The man who seldom pauses to review the past, or to consider his inner life, is almost certain to move in a circle and make an ignominious failure, so far as the improvement of character is concerned.

Meditation upon our mistakes and failures brings us to see their causes and consequences, and induces us to plan for better things. The passing of the old year is a time when men are especially inclined to give place to serious reflection and to the forming of new resolves; and well is it so. Thus it is we are led to cast off the things that have served as weights, and to gird ourselves anew for the race. With truth does the poet sing:

"Men may rise on stepping-stones
Of their dead selves to higher things."

Thus, while we lament the death of the old year, and mourn over the mistakes and sins of which it found us guilty, we should greet the new year with new hopes, new aims, and new purposes, for without these the future will be no better than the past. Our future faithfulness will be no stronger than our purpose; our mental and moral improvement no greater than our aspiration; our reformation no more lasting than our resolve. Expansion of faith and of desire must precede expansion of character and of effort.

Few indeed are they who can look back upon the year just closing without experiencing self-reproach and deep regret on account of misused opportunities, inexcusable follies, and deplorable backslidings. With many it began auspiciously, but it ends in gloom, because of numerous shortcomings and repeated yielding to the Tempter. Even the saintliest feel that much of it has been unwisely spent, and that the lofty purposes which accompanied its beginning have been but imperfectly realized. How grievously does conscience accuse him who has spent the year sinfully and foolishly, and now reaps in the spiritual realm nothing but a harvest of barren regrets. Most pitiable of all, however, is the condition of the man who, after calmly reviewing his conduct during the year, feels that there is little room for improvement. Such a man is doomed to stagnation and ruinous decay. That man has the fewest regrets who, in the fear of God, has striven to live worthily and unselfishly. He may not, in every instance, have lived up to his high and holy purpose, but, inspired by its power, he has breasted many a storm and warded off many a dart of the Evil One. Though fortune may have frowned upon us, and though conscious of numerous failures, the remembrance of good deeds done, of duty faithfully performed, of sacrifices made for Christ's sake, bring a deep joy to the soul, and make us more willing to face new difficulties and responsibilities.

As the new year dawns, countless will be the good resolutions formed and the new vows made; but, alas! how soon most of them will be broken! Man resolves and re-resolves, yet how oft he continues the same. The drunkard, the gambler, the swearer, the spendthrift, the neglecter of duty—each determines to reform; but when the old life begins to reassert its powers, their resolutions are broken like flax under the touch of a Samson. Good resolutions, unsupported by trust in divine help and unaccompanied by full consecration, are like a sudden push given to a car standing isolated on the track. There is a temporary advance, which is soon followed by a dead standstill. The man who merely reforms without committing his life to God is like one of the old-time sailing ships driven out of its course by every adverse wind, and frequently becalmed on the deep, while the Christ-controlled man is like a stanch steamship that steadily ploughs its way onward in spite of wind and wave. Like an army bent on victory, we must, in order to carry our noble purposes into execution, burn every bridge behind us, so to speak, and assume the aggressive.

To a great multitude this has been a year of peculiar trials and disappointments, while to not a few others it has been a year of mistakes and defections. But however dark and disappointing its continuance and close, God's rainbow of hope still spans the sky, and the voice of Jesus bids us, undismayed, go on, saying, "I will be with thee all thy days." And anon through the mists of doubt and discouragement there is wafted to us this strain from the harp of God's providence, "It is better farther on." To the trusting disciple the future ever has something better in store, for in the kingdom of grace there is "always more to follow." There is deeper joy, clearer light, a broader horizon, and more abundant grace.

Not the least of the lessons which the passing of the old year should impress upon us is the fleeting nature of opportunities.

"Scarce could we their possession boast,
When, lo! we found them gone."

But while the past is beyond recall, the present is ours to be gloriously improved, or to be shamefully squandered. "The old year has its blots, but the page of the new year is clean and fair." Let 1899 find us resolving to live more for God and humanity, and less for self; more for eternity, and less for temporal things. Let us

"Speak a shade more kindly
Than the year before;
Pray a little oftener,
Love a little more;
Cling a little closer
To the Father's love;
Then life below shall liker grow
To the life above."

EVERY-DAY RELIGION.

Not all that wears the garb of piety is genuine any more than all is gold that glitters. Pure religion, like every other good thing, has its counterfeits, yet is the same in its lofty principles, its far-reaching demands, and its glorious results the world over. The man who abides in Christ "walks not after the flesh, but after the Spirit," "sets the Lord always before him," and strives in all he thinks, feels, says, or does, to honor God, not only occasionally, but all the days of his life. He who purposes to do otherwise is not a loyal disciple any more than that man is honest who every now and then stoops to trickery and fraud.

We are commanded to "serve the Lord with all the heart, soul, mind and strength," and to take up our cross daily; yet it is a deplorable fact that many believers act as if religion were a secondary matter, as if God were to be obeyed but partially and temporarily. While the intention of most Christians, no doubt, is to "continue in the faith," many, by reason of weakness of will, the deceitfulness of sin, and the lack of unceasing vigilance, are guilty of frequent defections and inconsistencies.

Among the chief reasons why so many fall short is the vagueness of their conviction of the duty of serving God every day, everywhere, and in all things. Lacking the determination to "fight the good fight of faith" so long as life shall last, they soon fall into sin and thus bring reproach upon the gospel. For instance: there is the believer who has what may be called "Sunday religion." He attends church, contributes to its support, and scrupulously observes the forms of religion; but when the Sabbath is past, his fervor abates, his airs of goodness vanish, and his habits change. During the rest of the week he is a stern, selfish business man, gruff in language and deportment, thoroughly absorbed in money-making, and unscrupulous in driving a bargain. Such a man falls far below the standard of true discipleship.

Then there is the brother who has "camp-meeting religion." He is always in evidence on such occasions, participates largely in the services, tells a rapturous experience, seems to be on fire with the love of God and with the love of souls; and then goes home to do little or nothing the rest of the year. Occasionally, it may be, he attends church, but exhibits such lukewarm interest in its services that a stranger would never recognize him as a camp-meeting saint. The idea of continuous service, of every-day religion, is far from his thoughts and purposes.

Then, too, there is the man who has company religion. He is a model of suavity, gentleness and unselfishness when in public, or among his friends, but the instant he reaches home there is a strange transformation. As he crosses the threshold his smiles change to frowns, his compliments to complaints, and his mildness to moody sternness. When home affairs do not go exactly to suit him, he storms at wife, children and servants, and makes the entire home circle miserable. Within the sacred precincts of his home, where, of all places in the world, a man ought to be pleasant, loving and self-sacrificing, he is sour, selfish, and exacting.

Then there is the man who has what may be called "common-day religion," which means that on ordinary days he is fairly consistent in his walk and faithful to his duty; but on extraordinary occasions, such as Christmas, Independence Day, Election Day, New Year's Day, etc., he throws restraint to the winds, tramples conviction under foot, and for the time being wallows in the mire of sensuality, intemperance, gluttony, etc. Or, if he goes not quite this far, he is guilty of inconsistencies and follies of which a professing Christian should be heartily ashamed. Such disciples sometimes felicitate themselves with the reflection that their ordinary good behavior will sufficiently atone for their occasional lapses.

Still another brother belongs to the class appropriately dubbed "fair-weather Christians." He attends church when the weather is bright and pleasant, or when there is some unusual attraction, and performs his religious duties when all goes well with him; but when his business goes wrong, and the service of God means a measure of self-denial and difficulty, he "faints by the wayside." Gain, and not godliness, is first in his thoughts. He has not learned to endure hardness, or to realize the necessity of daily cross-bearing. Says our Savior, "If ye continue in my words, then are ye my disciples indeed." Religion is meant for every day in the year, and every hour in the day. Would to God that every-day piety were more general! Then would the wheels of Zion roll gloriously forward.

A NEW BOOK.

DOCTRINAL TRACT. By Rev. C McDonald, of the Mississippi Conference. Containing Timely Strictures on the Second-Blessing Theory of Sanctification. NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE Print, 512 Camp street. 1898.

By courtesy of the author the above-named work lies upon our table. The scope of the work is clearly indicated by the title. Its aim is to refute the second-blessing theory of sanctification as taught at the present day. While the author has strong convictions, and states his views vigorously, he deals with his antagonists in a spirit of fairness. The work will doubtless have a good circulation. It can be had by writing to the author at Caseyville, Miss. Price, five cents.

A BROKEN VOW.

But few churches would be financially burdened if all the members did their part in bearing the church expenses. In some congregations one-third of the membership carry the financial obligations, and the remainder do next to nothing. At the altar of God, when we are taken into the church in full membership, we register a solemn vow in this connection. We promise to "contribute of our earthly substance according to our ability to the support of the gospel and the various benevolent enterprises of the church." But how often this vow is forgotten or willfully violated. When there is no devotement of our riches to God, we may be sure there is no change of heart. A religion which gives nothing to God is a sham, and the professor is controlled by a delusion which will lead to his destruction.—Peninsula Methodist.

As we look over the denominational exchanges which come to our office, we are impressed with their general vigor, variety and adaptation. It is true that our undenominational newspapers also show much intellectual and moral force, with here and there some of unique importance and power, but they are not, as a class, superior to their distinctively church contemporaries. . . . No denomination can thrive in these days without its newspaper defender and propagator. Let, then, the paper which seeks to build up the faith, polity and principles with which it stands related be well and faithfully supported by ministers and laymen. The better the support, the better can it be made and the more useful will it become.—Presbyterian.

OFFICIALS AND CHURCH PAPERS.

One of the leading ministers of the New England Conference, occupying what is considered a very good appointment, reports that only four of his entire Official Board are subscribers to any denominational paper. This may seem at first thought an extreme case, but we are confident that much less than one-half of our officiary are subscribers to the Methodist press. While this is a most humiliating and discouraging fact, it is no new thing. The condition is better in this respect in our borders than it was ten years ago; but it is, nevertheless, so bad that it should enlist the determined and united action of our ministers to effect a radical change. It will be impossible to lift the general average of intelligence and usefulness in our membership until those who occupy the position of official leadership among us take sufficient interest in the work of the church to read its representative papers and become familiar with its thought and activities. We are gratified to learn that some of our presiding elders are giving this subject special and urgent consideration at the session of the Quarterly Conferences.—Zion's Herald.

FORE-WORDS.

Start the new preacher off right. Let him feel that the confidence and sympathy of his people are freely given him, for his work's sake.

And don't burden his heart by filling his ears with the shortcomings of his predecessors, or the sins of his people. If he is a true man and a worthy minister, it will give him pain instead of pleasure. If he is a sensible man, he will know that these same people will be quite as ready to tell his faults and failures to his successor. Don't prejudice him against members of his flock by telling him at the beginning of his ministry of the worldliness or penuriousness of some of his people. He will find that out all too soon. Besides, the chances are that those same people will tell him how mean you are. If he believes all he hears that is bad, he will lose heart. If he discounts some of the information, he is as likely to discredit your statements as those of other people. If he has had much experience, he will set a good deal of it down to the credit of personal dislike. If not experienced, hope will die out of his heart and he will start into the year's work in despair.—Alabama Advocate.

It is impossible to overestimate the importance of Egyptological discoveries to the Bible student. The Egyptologists have forever silenced the chief arguments of destructive criticism against the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch. They have unearthed the most indubitable proofs of the advancement of the ancient Egyptians in the arts, in science, and particularly in literature. Thanks to the climate of the Nile valley, their ancient records on stone and even on papyrus have been preserved. Thanks to the ingenuity, scholarship and perseverance of men like Ebers, these records are unearthed and their exact purport deciphered and given to the learned world. Thanks to an ever-watchful, over-ruling Providence, these discoveries are made just in the niche of time. The mouths of gain-sayers are stopped, the foes of the Bible are put to rout, and the old bulwark of Revelation is triumphantly vindicated. God has watched over these corroborative evidences with a jealous eye, and caused them to be brought forth just when they were needed, and no sooner.—Messenger.

A man's life consists not in the abundance of the opportunities which come to him. A mere globe-trotter stumbles on a thousand opportunities on his way round the world, and returns home poorer every way than the contemplative cobbler whom he left sticking to his last. Men have lived gloriously in dungeons; lacking in manhood, they would have lived ingloriously though given the freedom of the universe.—Sunday-School Times.

Some travelers who are galloping around the globe in ninety days speak slightingly of missions and missionaries; but not so those who have any real knowledge. Henry M. Stanley, the great African traveler, says: "The story of the Uganda missionary enterprise is an epic poem. I know few secular enterprises, military or otherwise, deserving of greater praise."—Pittsburgh Herald.

God be praised that metaphysical speculation has less and less to do with the interpretation of the fundamental facts of redemption, and their application to faith, experience, and life. Arminians are content to pray in harmony with the sovereignty of God, while Calvinists are content to work with us in harmony with the doctrine of the freedom and responsibility of man. The metaphysics that would deny sovereignty to save freedom, or deny freedom to save sovereignty, is practically remanded to cloisters, and to the limbo of conjectures more or less probable, while the entire harmony of sovereignty and freedom becomes a simple article of faith, a grand expansion of the simple formula: God should be trusted where he can not be traced. —New York Advocate.

The man who is fertile in plans which never flower into deeds may have a great name for a little time, but eventually he falls in the popular estimation distinctly below his silent neighbor who is always on hand when there is a real work to be done.—Central Advocate.

To think we are able is almost to be so; to determine upon attainment is frequently attainment itself. Thus earnest resolution has often seemed to have about it almost a savor of omnipotence.—Samuel Smiles.

It is to live twice when you can enjoy the recollection of your former life.—Martial.

We are pained to learn of the serious illness of Dr. J. O. Keener, president of Southern University, Greensboro, Ala. Bishop Keener is with him.

The readers of last week's ADVOCATE are indebted to Mrs. Robert McLaurin, of Vicksburg, for the excellent paper entitled, "Female Medical Missionaries." This paper was read before the Annual Conference which recently met at Brookhaven, Miss.

From a private letter from Rev. W. W. Mitchell, of the North Mississippi Conference, we quote as follows: "We are comfortably housed in the neat little parsonage at Como. Much has been done for our comfort, and a good work is going on. We hope to have a prosperous year."

***

Morean Street Church and Craps Street, of this city, have been consolidated, and the new organization will hereafter be called Burgundy Street Church. The Craps Street building will be used. The Morean edifice will be sold. This is a wise move, as the two churches are only three blocks apart, and neither has a large membership.

The Educational Echo is the title of a new venture in journalism. It is an eight-page monthly, issued as the official organ of Centenary College and Mansfield College; subscription price, seventy-five cents a year. It is edited by Rev. T. B. Clifford, who is financial agent for the two colleges, and also educational secretary of the Louisiana Conference. Its mechanical make-up is excellent. Clifford's name is a guarantee of sprightly editorial work. It is published at Mansfield, La.

***

In our report of the proceedings of the Louisiana Conference we inadvertently omitted any mention of the Home Mission Society. Mrs. F. A. Lyons, president of the Conference Society, was introduced to the Conference, and made a brief, but interesting address. The outlook for the society is regarded as quite hopeful. With the hearty co-operation of all the pastors and presiding elders, there ought to be a large increase in membership and revenues in the near future. Bishop Morrison spoke ex-cathedra in hearty endorsement of the society. We hope his earnest words will bear much fruit.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Mansfield, La., EDITOR.

We hope the Louisiana Leaguers will heed the exhortation contained in the report of the Conference Epworth League Board as read by Rev. J. M. Henry at the recent session at Mansfield.

The particular exhortation referred to was that items of interest be sent in to this editor from time to time from each League in the State.

In the language of Dr. Rankin, of the Texas Advocate, we would say: "Send us in short and well-written news items. Brevity is the soul of wit, and of interesting news notes, too. Give us results, and you will help to make a live paper."

Dr. DuBose has recently visited the Conferences in South Carolina and Florida. We are indeed sorry that he could not reach Mansfield. The members of the Louisiana Conference would have given him a hearty welcome.

President McKinley expects soon to make a visit to several cities in the South. Extensive preparations are being made to this end. Mr. McKinley is not only an ardent Methodist, but likewise an active Leaguer. He has been prominent in this particular work in the M. E. Church for some years past.

It was our pleasure recently to meet W. M. Sloan, Esq., and his excellent wife, of Shreveport, La. They are among the prominent Leaguers of Louisiana, and were visiting Mansfield enjoying the sessions of the Louisiana Annual Conference.

This is a day of great privileges and large opportunities. The following piece from the Youth's Companion is, doubtless, familiar to many; nevertheless, we publish it as a reminder:

In one of the old Greek cities there stood long ago a statue. Every trace of it has vanished now, as is the case with most of those old masterpieces of genius; but there is still in existence an epigram, which gives us an excellent description of it, and as we read the words we can surely discover the lesson which those wise old Greeks meant that the statue should teach to every passer-by. The epigram is in the form of a conversation between a traveler and the statue.

"What is thy name, O statue?"

"I am called Opportunity."

"Who made thee?"

"Lysippus."

"Why art thou standing on thy toes?"

"To show that I stay but for a moment."

"Why hast thou wings on thy feet?"

"To show how quickly I pass by."

"But why is thy hair so long on thy forehead?"

"That men may seize me when they meet me."

"Why, thou, is thy head so bald behind?"

"To show that when I have once passed I can not be caught."—Youth's Companion.

The Louisiana State Conference of Epworth Leagues will be held (D. V.) at Crowley, La., in the Spring; exact time to be published later. We hope to have the pleasure of looking into the faces of several hundred hopeful Leaguers when the roll is called at Crowley.

Having been raised a strict Episcopalian, we have always had great reverence for sacred things. We have no desire to depart from our "raising" in this regard. The following from an Epworth League paper of the M. E. Church will not be out of place just here:

Have you, who whisper during prayers, ever thought that the preacher was talking to God; therefore, you should be silent?

Have you, who talk during the reading of God's Word, ever thought that God is talking to you through his minister?

Disrespect to God's ministers and his sanctuary is irreverence. Now, this thoughtlessness on the part of those who attend church may not be prompted by an utter disregard for the divine services, but it has that appearance.

We are commanded to avoid even the appearance of evil. We take it that when Christians so far forget the place as to engage in conversation during the services they are lacking in interest in the Lord's cause, and we can not marvel at the misbehavior of those who make no pretensions to religion.—Epworth League Union Herald, Pittsburg.

FROM REV. J. A. BOWEN.

MR. EDITOR: Rev. W. T. Bolling, D. D., and family left this morning for their new charge, Shreveport, La. They have greatly endeared themselves to these people by two years of efficient work. Dr. Bolling is not only a great preacher, but he develops the church in many ways. One of the most beautiful auditoriums in the South, and a new two-story parsonage well furnished, are some of the evidences of the great work done here by our worthy predecessor.

These good people have given us a hearty Christian welcome. We could not ask more than they have done for us. We are much encouraged. While we regretted to leave the good people of Wood Street, Water Valley, we feel sure that our very efficient successor, Rev. W. S. Lagrone, will do more good there than we could. We gratefully acknowledge the valuable assistance of Rev. R. A. Burroughs, presiding elder of Columbus district, in starting our work here.

Dr. Black, be sure to come to see us and preach for us.

Yours faithfully,

J. A. BOWEN.

There is no revival so much needed to-day as a revival of the religion of righteousness. If your religion does not win men to righteousness, it did not come from God; it is false, through and through.—Rev. David Jones, D. D.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DAY.

January 15, 1899, is to be the first celebration of "Epworth League Day," an anniversary established by the General Epworth League Board at its last sitting. The General Secretary has prepared a special programme for that occasion which will be furnished Leagues at the rate of 50 cents per hundred; 25 cents for fifty. Order these programmes and fittingly celebrate the day. The Secretary begs that the day be made an occasion for extending the circulation of the "Epworth Era." Take subscriptions in clubs of ten or more, or singly. Devote the special collection of the day to a club subscription for your League, and in purchasing our admirable League Reading Course.

DR. BELL'S COUGH SYRUP IS THE best remedy for coughs, colds, sore throat and grippe. This is the verdict of the people.

SOME REFLECTIONS.

The last session of the North Mississippi Conference was an occasion of great interest, and it may be regarded as a notable Conference for two things: Speech-making, and many changes in the appointments of the preachers. Every question received a full share of attention, and while mighty combatants crossed swords, the debates were conducted in the utmost good humor. It is now more than a week since the Conference has adjourned, but I feel like jotting down the following reflections for the ADVOCATE:

THE MATTER OF REVIVALS.

Bishop Key's searching question probed the heart of many a preacher, and caused some of us to examine ourselves more earnestly than we had ever done before. "Why are there not more conversions?" "Gilderoy" said the people had lost faith in the preachers, and the Bishop suggested that maybe too much dependence had been put in the evangelists, etc. Well, if the people have lost faith in the preachers on this point, I do not hesitate to say that the preachers are largely to blame for it. We have educated the people to expect no revival work from us, but to depend upon the famous brother whom we expect to employ to hold the revival services for us. If we preachers would deal less in the theories of religion, and make the gospel a practical application to the lives of our people, making them feel that Jesus is the model, and fashioning their lives after him, we would succeed better. Read Peck's "The Revival and the Pastor."

THE CONFERENCE ANNOUNCEMENTS.

One of the growing evils of our Conference sessions is the frequent and numerous announcements made at the close of its daily sessions. Each Board and committee—no less than one dozen in all—makes some announcement, and the confusion and demoralization are such that only a few persons get any definite information from these announcements. If the Boards and committees would organize the first day, and agree on a time and place of future meetings, why burden the Conference with additional announcements? Let us try this plan: As soon as the Nominating Committee announces the members of a Board or a committee, let the first-named then and there announce when and where they will meet, and that will end it.

"NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE SUCCESS."

In looking over the report from Montpelier circuit (old Sparta circuit), I can not but exclaim, "Surely the man and the occasion have met."

TESTIMONIAL.

LINDEN, ALA.

I. L. LYONS, New Orleans—

Dear Sir: Last winter I had a severe cough, pain in the chest and spitting of blood. I procured a bottle of Dr. Locock's Cough Elixir, and am happy to state that four doses relieved me entirely, and I can safely say that I think it is the best cough medicine I ever saw.

NEW ORLEANS

Rev. J. W. Raper now has five churches on this circuit; everyone comparatively new. Last year he built a new church; this year he is building another. He has just completed and furnished a new parsonage which cost nearly $1,000. His salary last year was $385; this year it is $500, and it has been paid both years, and he has raised all the collections in full. This is a country charge, no church being nearer than sixteen miles to the railroad. He begins his third year with fine prospects. What Bro. Raper has done on this circuit may be done on almost any circuit, if the preacher will put his life into the work. Some brethren do not succeed because they do not expect to succeed. Such men as W. M. Young, J. W. Raper, O. L. Savage, J. R. Countiss, and others, can succeed anywhere.

All that I am my mother made me.—John Quincy Adams.

The Scientific Catarrh Inhaler, which treats local catarrh with medicated air, is an invention which should be welcomed by all sufferers from this disease. It is of course equally efficacious for pains in the head, bronchitis, sore throat, asthma and hay fever. These local diseases are best reached and most quickly and effectively cured by local application. The medicated air penetrates all the minute cells of the parts affected, and spreads itself out over every membrane and is absorbed by every tissue. Hence the disease is reached in all its hiding places. It is superior to any similar remedy offered to the public for cold in the head. It is also so simple that any child can use it. It is cheap. Read Dr. E. J. Worst's advertisement on page 8.

A Ragged Coat and An Empty Pocket

Changes the Aspect of the World.

Walter Wycoff, a student of social problems, abandoned his station in life and assumed the garb of daily toilers, taking the place among grimy hard-fisted workers in order to test the change. A MALARIA POISONED LIVER will also cause as great a change in physical life. Sunshine will leave the face. The eye loses its sparkle; while the skin assumes a dull copper tint. These are least of the evils and merely bespeak the external cry that Nature gives when battling with Malaria germs. Headache, Nausea, dullness of thought, pain in the back and side, a coated tongue, a horrible taste, are among the danger signals which if unheeded portend CONGESTION, CONVULSIONS, SUPPRESSION OF SECRETIONS AND TERMINATION OF LIFE.

Far easier than the solution of the social problem is the remedy for Malaria—DICKS' CHILL-I-FUGE absolutely exterminates it. A Few Doses, and health spreads her wings over the grateful system, and the sun shines once more, while life is worth the living.

GOOD INTENTIONS.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Tho wonderful things we have planned, Love,
The beautiful things we have done,
The fields we have tilled, the gifts we have willed
In the light of another year's sun,
When we think of it all we are baffled,
There's so much that never comes true,
Because, Love, instead of our doing,
We're always just meaning to do.

The friends we are wanting to help, Love,
They struggle alone and forlorn,
By trial and suffering vanquished,
Perchance by temptation o'erborne;
But the lift and the touch and the greeting
That well might have aided them through
The perilous strait of ill-fortune,
They miss;—we're but moaning to do.

We dream of a fountain of knowledge,
We loiter along on its brink,
And toy with the crystalline waters,
Forever just meaning to drink.
Night falls, and our tasks are unfinished,
Too late our lost chances we rue,
Dear Love, while our comrades were doing,
We only were meaning to do.

HIS FIRST HUNDRED DOLLARS.

The late Mr. Massey, of Toronto, who was a successful business man, is quoted as having said that the hardest money to acquire of all the wealth he had accumulated was the first one hundred dollars. This has been the experience of numerous others, several hundred of whom have said the same at different periods during the past fifty years, or so. Mr. Massey, like those others, was wont to add that the young man who could get ahead that amount, possessed the qualities necessary to succeed in life.

There is a lesson of great value in the fact mentioned by Mr. Massey. Young men themselves know how true it is, if they have the quality of self-examination. They have small salaries, and after living expenses are provided for there is little left at the end of the week or the month. It seems such an insignificant amount that they do not think it worth while saving it, and so it goes in some superfluous pleasure or gratification. It is burning a hole in their pockets until they hurry to get rid of it. They find it impossible to hold the saving of one week or month until that of another could be added to it. Mr. Massey had this difficulty just as hundreds and thousands had before him. But he resisted the temptation, no doubt at great sacrifice of desire, and in course of time accumulated what to most young men starting out for themselves on small salaries is a fortune; he was the proud possessor of one hundred dollars, all his own, made by himself, and free from claims of all kinds. He was a capitalist, and in his circumstances a very considerable one. He got with his money his first idea of the power of it, and he learned the lesson, which he could never forget, that it was only by saving the pennies that the pounds accumulated. It was the lesson that he and all others had, and have, to learn to make business success possible.—Manitoba Free Press.

THE HOUSEHOLD ANGEL.

The glad-hearted, cheery woman who makes the best of everything is a treasure in any home. She may make mistakes, she may forget, she may spoil a dish in mixing or in baking, but if, with the mishap, she sends in a gleam of sunshine, a smile, a laugh, or some gay and kindly word, people forget their disappointments and make the best of what they can not help.

And how much better this is than the unvarying precision of one who has no faults and no patience with those who have; who never makes mistakes nor makes allowances for others who do. Accuracy and precision are excellent; punctuality and promptness are most valuable; but "love is the fulfilling of the law," and Christian charity is greater than faith, hope, faultless housekeeping, or anything else.

If you're born with sunshine in your heart, thank God for it, and let it shine out.

But, if not, turn your gaze to the Sun of Righteousness and catch the brightness that beams from his face. "They looked unto him and were lightened, and their faces were not ashamed."—Common People.

THE SIN OF FRETTING.

There is one sin which, it seems to me, is everywhere and by everybody underestimated, and quite too much overlooked in valuations of character. It is the sin of fretting. It is as common as air, as speech, so common that unless it rises above its usual monotone we do not even observe it. Watch any ordinary coming together of people, and see how many minutes it will be before somebody frets—that is, makes more or less complaining statement of something or other which probably everyone in the room, or in the car, or the street corner, it may be, knew before, and probably nobody can help. Why say anything about it? It is cold, it is hot, it is wet, it is dry; somebody has broken an appointment, ill cooked a meal; stupidity or bad faith somewhere has resulted in discomfort.

There are plenty of things to fret about. It is simply astonishing how much annoyance may be found in the course of every day's living, even at the simplest, if one only keeps a sharp eye out on that side of things. Even Holy Writ says we are prone to trouble as sparks fly upward. But even to the sparks flying upward, in the blackest of smoke, there is a blue sky above; and the less time they waste on the road, the sooner they will reach it. Fretting is all time wasted on the road.—Helen Hunt Jackson.

YOUR INFLUENCE IS OF IMPORTANCE.

Remember, too, that your influence in the community is of the greatest importance. As a rule, the men who are looked to for advice and counsel, who are depended upon in emergencies, are educated men, men of wide intelligence, whose horizons have been broadened by extensive reading and far-reaching observation.

You will be of no great account in the community if your whole ambition is bounded by your store, office, or place of business. You are a part of the community. You have interests and duties and obligations to the outside world which you can not ignore if you would reach the highest success. It should be the ambition of every young man to be public-spirited; to be known in the community as a man of ideas and progress. You may make millions in your business, and yet, if you are narrow in your sympathies, and confine yourself to your little corner, the world will care little for you.—Success.

"IT'S BREAKING MY HEART!"

The newspapers never reported a more pitiful story than the following: "A wretched mother dropped dead about four weeks ago at the feet of the son who had been a burden and a sorrow to her. This son, who was thirty years old, instead of helping his mother, spent his wages for whisky. At last the mother concluded that committing him as an habitual drunkard might lend to his reformation. She was called to the witness-stand to swear to the complaint, but the strain was too great for her, and she fell dead with the words on her lips: "It's breaking my heart!" No orator, living or dead, ever delivered a temperance lecture equal to this in pathos and eloquence.

Bedtime should be a time for the most pleasant thoughts and the most encouraging and helpful words of any hour of the day, and thus pleasant and refreshing sleep may be courted with greater certainty of success. We have recollections of a home where we spent a few months in which the husband and wife seemed to take the hour for retiring also for the time in which the misunderstandings and all other unpleasantnesses of the day were to be considered. The nights were anything but hours of refreshing rest to the members of that household.—Wesleyan Methodist.

"When I get to be a man," said the boy who has a good memory for phrases, "I'm going to strive to cultivate an unselfish nature." "That's right," replied the father. "How are you going to go about it?" "Well, in the first place, if I have any little boys, I'll let them shoot their own fire-works instead of telling them they must let me do it for fear they will hurt themselves."

A recent writer says that "in all his experience he has never seen a man succeed in life who treated his parents with contempt." He adds: "I know of no evil to-day in this country greater than the way sons and daughters are treating their parents."

Hygiene.

WHY I ABSTAIN FROM STRONG DRINK.

Because strong drink does injury to the body. It breeds disease. It disturbs, inflames, and excites one or the other of the vital organs. Thousands die from strong drink who were never drunk in their lives. Many used to think that whisky was both meat and drink, not only strengthening, but comforting; that it made you warm when cold, and helped to keep you from catching cold when warm. But all that is nonsense. Medical men now tell us that it is no article of food, and can only be of use as a medical stimulant; that there is more real nourishment in a single glass of milk than in a whole barrel of beer; and when people begin to take strong drink, they form a craving for it that leads them to take it often, and then their bodies get poisoned.

Once a good man told me that when he got his arm broken, it healed all the faster because his body had none of the poison of alcohol in it. Lately I was called in to see a man dying in a hospital. His disease was consumption, brought on by exposure when under the influence of drink. And we are told that at least 120,000, or more than all the British army put together, die in Britain every year, not from consumption, but from strong drink. And if you will count, you will see that if 120,000 die every year from strong drink, then 356 die every day, and about 15 every hour! Solomon said: "Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? . . . who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine." Therefore, if you wish to have good health and live long, never begin to touch strong drink.

But again, I abstain because strong drink affects the mind. It weakens it, it darkens it, muddles it, deadens it, destroys it. What babblers and half-idiots men become when under the influence of alcohol! How it stirs up all the evil lying at the bottom of the heart! For when a man gets intoxicated, how often he begins to swear and use most horrible oaths and curses! And then how the fighting propensities rise up—leading often to outrage and murder! In Glasgow a poor man was hung on the gallows because, for four hours, under the influence of drink, he kicked, and bruised, and battered his wife to death. And when he was lying in the condemned cell he called in his son and said, "Oh, never touch strong drink, for it was that which brought me here!" It was too late for him, but not too late for you.—Dr. Alexander Andrew.

Do You Have Rheumatism or Neuralgia?

Are You Sleepless, Nervous, Irritable?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

SWAMP-ROOT IS THE GREAT REMEDY FOR KIDNEY, BLADDER AND URIC ACID TROUBLES.—TO PROVE ITS WONDERFUL MERITS, YOU MAY HAVE A SAMPLE BOTTLE SENT FREE BY MAIL.

Well people have healthy kidneys.

They filter your blood, keep it pure and free from disease-breeding germs.

Your other organs may need care, but your kidneys most, because they do most.

If you are sick, begin with your kidneys, because as soon as they are well they will help all the other organs to health.

The treatment of some diseases may be delayed without danger, not so with kidney disease.

Swamp-Root is the great discovery of Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is a genuine specific with wonderful healing action on the kidneys.

It will be found by both men and women just what is needed in all cases of kidney and bladder disorders, lame back, dull pain or ache in the back, gravel, catarrh of the bladder, rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, uric acid troubles and Bright's disease, which is the worst form of neglected kidney trouble.

Swamp-Root corrects inability to hold water and promptly overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day and to get up many times during the night.

To prove its merits you may have a sample bottle, and a book telling more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail.

The great discovery, Swamp-Root, is so remarkably successful that our readers are advised to write for a free sample bottle, and to kindly mention the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE when sending their addresses to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

OBITUARIES

BARNES—Mrs. Missie King Barnes was born Nov. 14, 1879, and died after a brief illness at the home of her mother, Mrs. Lizzie King, in Benton, Miss., Nov. 9 1898.

"She was the only child of her mother, and she a widow." What words could tell in more pathetic story of heart-breaking sorrow? Reared in an atmosphere of love and tenderness, she early developed those amiable qualities which made her so lovable. When the writer first met her she was just blooming into young womanhood. She appeared to me the impersonation of delicacy and refinement. I loved her for her beautiful transparency of character, her modesty and gentleness. Physically, she was cast in nature's most delicate mold. Petite and graceful, she was a vision of dainty, girlish beauty.

November 3, 1897, she was happily married to Mr. J. A. Barnes. The fond young husband and his fair bride lived with her mother, and happy indeed was that home; but, alas! it was a happiness destined to be of short duration. In a little over a year, when her heart had just awakened to the sweetest and holiest of all human affections—mother-love—Missie closed her eyes forever on earthly things. The snowy hands were folded over the peaceful breast, which "nevermore should throb with joy or pain." The precious girl baby tarried a few days, and then went to join its gentle mother in the skies.

Missie joined the church at the age of twelve, and as her sorrowing mother says, "tried always to be a little Christian." Her friends say of her, "She never did anything wrong, knowingly, in her life." One who loved her says, "She always spoke of her friends' good qualities—never spoke evil of anyone." Beautiful record!

The light of the home is gone, but God knows best. May he comfort the mother and the young husband! MRS. J. S. PARKER.

Jackson, Miss.

PARKER—Mrs. Mary Parkan was born in Lauderdale county, Miss., Aug. 24, 1836, and departed this life Dec. 15, 1898. She was the daughter of Rev. Paul W. Harper.

Sister Parker was reared in Copiah county, Miss., where she lived and died. She was married twice. Her first husband was F. M. Mickman, who died March 24, 1863. To them were born four children. She was afterwards married to Bro J. A. Parker, Nov. 13, 1866. To them were born six children. She was converted at twelve years of age, and joined the Methodist Church, and lived a consistent Christian life until death. She suffered great afflictions for several years, and was deprived of attending church. She was greatly loved by all who knew her, and the ministers always found a welcome in her home. She leaves a husband, two brothers, two sisters, eight children, and a host of friends, to mourn her death. She will be sadly missed, but God doeth all things well.

I commend the bereaved to our Father, whose grace is sufficient, and who sanctifieth our trials and afflictions to our good and his glory. God bless the bereaved, and grant them that they may so live as to meet their loved one in heaven. H. A. GATLIN.

Tyro, Miss.

PITCHFORD—Mrs. Sarah J. Pitchford, daughter of Judge J. G. and Mrs. Brunette Skinner, was born in Alabama, Aug. 9, 1833. She was married to Lawrence Pitchford, of Lexington, Miss., in 1854; died in Vicksburg, Nov. 14, 1898.

In early life she joined the Methodist Church, and was a consistent member of the same until her death. She was a woman of most excellent character, honored and appreciated by all who knew her. Not of that impulsive nature, but of that "steadfast, unmovable" disposition, she impressed all with her genuine worth. We buried all that was mortal of her in the cemetery at old Wesley Chapel, in Yazoo county. Many were the expressions of appreciation of the mourning company who assembled to comfort those that weep, and to perform the last service of love to a true friend and thoughtful neighbor. Three daughters and one son remain to sorrow at her departure, but their sorrow is lightened by a sure hope of a meeting in the Father's house. T. B HOLLOMAN.

Yazoo and Lexington papers requested to copy.

MCINNIS—Mrs C. B. McInnis, wife of Randall McInnis, departed this life Nov. 8, at 6 o'clock A. M. She died perfectly happy in the arms of Jesus. She was loved and esteemed by all who knew her. Surely she was a Christian. Nobody had aught against her. She suffered severely for three weeks with an apoplectic stroke of paralysis, but she bore it cheerfully. She was a devoted Christian from childhood up. She said she was ready to meet her Savior in heaven. She was a celebrated member of the M. E. Church, South, of Pine Grove Church, on Lankesville charge. She was an affectionate wife and mother. She left her husband and six boys and one girl to mourn her deplorable loss, but God giveth and God taketh. They were united together twenty-seven years. She was fifty-five years and twenty-eight days of age.

M. C McINNIS.

ROUNSAVAL—Mrs. ELIZABETH ROUNSAVAL (nee McCall) was born Aug 9 1819, in Franklin county, Miss., and fell asleep in Jesus at the home of her son, Mr. S. S. Rounsaval, near Belevne, Ouachita parish, La., Oct 4, 1898.

Sister Rounsaval joined the Methodist Church when well advanced in years, and was ever afterwards true to her church, seldom ever being absent at church; a good neighbor, a true, loving mother and grandmother, ever ready to help the suffering. She leaves two daughters, one son and a number of grandchildren, and a host of friends, to mourn her death. Grieve not, dear ones, as them that have no hope. Think of mother and grandmother as being at rest, and be prepared to meet her in the sweet by-and-by, where partings are no more and the weary are at rest.

A FRIEND.

O'BRYANT—BONNIE JONAS O'BRYANT, son of Rev. S. L. and Katie O'Bryant, was born June 7, 1891, and died Sept 22, 1898, aged seven years three months and fifteen days.

Little Bonnie was religiously inclined all his life; was obedient, kind, and affectionate. He was papa's pet, a great pleasure to mother, and the light and joy of home; but, alas! disease prostrated his frame, and his little spirit swept away through the starlit skies to his home in heaven, where he awaits the arrival of mother, father, brothers and sisters. Weep not as those who have no hope, for he is happier now, and sings more sweetly. Don't disappoint him, for he will be glad to welcome you in that beautiful home above, where he will enjoy the association of angels and the loved ones gone before. W. J O'BRYANT.

EWING—ANDREW JOSEPH, son of M. C. and A. R. Ewing, was born in Madison county, Miss., Oct 26 1874, and died in Yazoo county, Miss., Dec 12, 1898.

Joseph was one of those amiable characters who was admired and esteemed by all who knew him. He was a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, and died in the faith of our holy religion. With respect to his moral and religious training his parents have nothing to regret; with respect to his future, nothing to fear. H. L. NORTON.

THE GREATEST TEXT IN THE BIBLE.

Love is the highest experience of the human soul. Faith and hope, it is true, are gifts from God to man, but love is the very essence of God himself. God is love. When God imparts love to us he imparts himself. "Everyone that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God."

There is no simpler truth in Scripture than this of God's love to man, and yet I know of no more difficult subject to present to the world. Could I but make the world understand and believe that "God is love," I should never preach from any other text. My best days would be devoted to proclaiming that one fact in every part of the world, and I know that every day would be a veritable Pentecost. For if the world were convinced that God is love, a God of mercy and not of judgment, our prisons would be empty and the kingdom of God established in our midst. For love begets love; and if we can make men really believe that God loves them, many will love him in return. We are apt to judge others by ourselves. If a man is covetous, he thinks everyone else is covetous; if he is base, everyone else is base. And so men would think of God as like themselves; and because they love those only who are lovable, they think of God as only loving those who are good and who are deserving of his love.—Dwight L. Moody, in Ladies' Home Journal.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Time was under the regime of the Jewish religion—the purest and best in the world at that time—when a man might attain to religious perfection, fulfill all the requirements of the law, and thus could say, "Ni plus ultra." But under our Christianity no man, no matter how saintly, can say that. It is always and only, "plus ultra." And that is the beauty and divinity of our Christian religion; there is always something farther on, something to strive for, some heights of attainment we have not reached, some glorious achievement that ever beckons us onward and upward. It is a religion of ideals. It is a series of excelsiors. It is a continuous development. It is a race set before us that we attain unto the "measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." It is a life of ever-widening possibilities.—Paul M. Strayer.

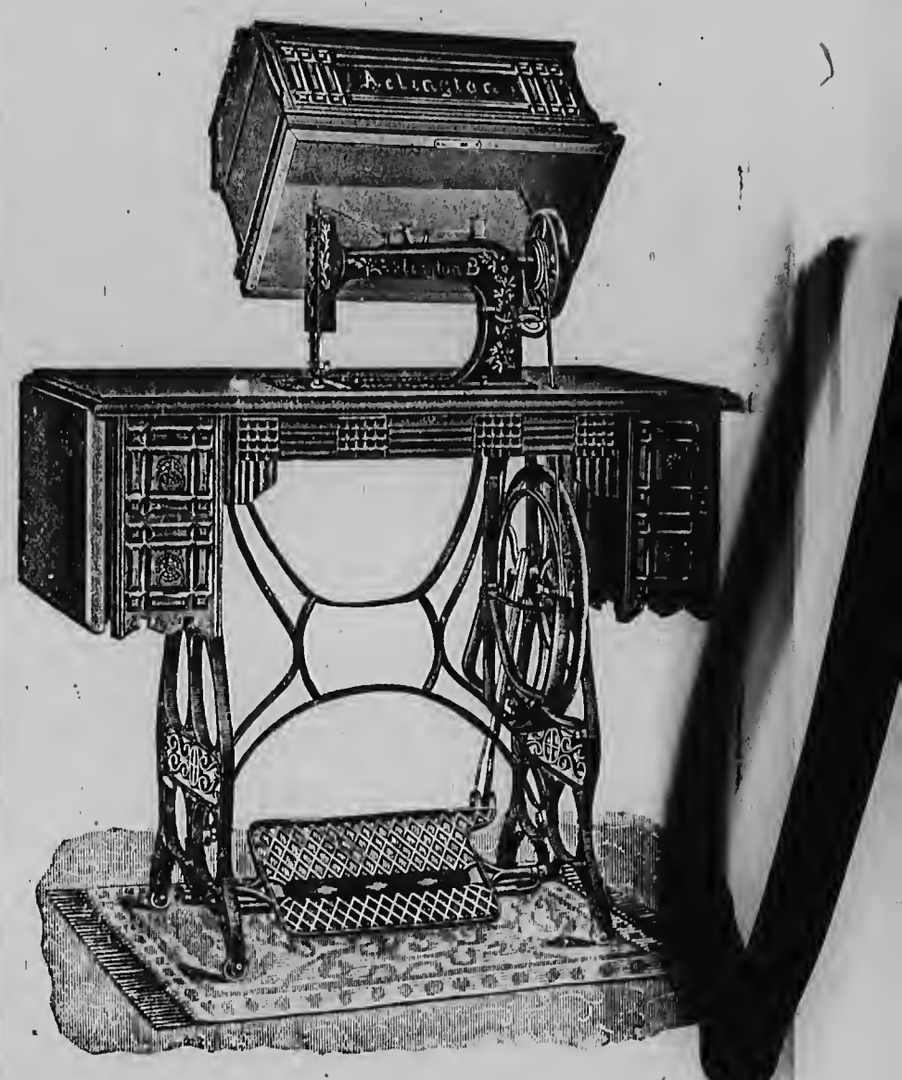
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one guage, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great length; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $19, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to April, 1900, and send $17 additional, and we will send you the machine. This price does not include freight.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Governor-Elect Roosevelt, of New York, driven to desperation by the army of office-seekers by whom he is besieged, has issued this notice: "No person, no matter who he may be, need come to see me hereafter unless he has an appointment."

The most lasting of the consequences of the war with Spain is likely to be the increase in the cost of government to our taxpayers. Even supposing that the new possessions will prove largely self-supporting, there will, nevertheless, be a large increase in expense attributable to them.

One of the measures which it is proposed to introduce in the German Reichstag is a new emigration law. One of the provisions of this proposed law holds that once a German always a German. This would prevent German subjects from becoming naturalized subjects or citizens of any foreign power.

The cotton receipts at Houston, Texas, for the first months of the present season have been 2,000,000 bales, a record never equaled by an interor town or port of the United States, and which will be celebrated with a banquet to which all the prominent civic officials and cotton men will be invited.

The Bank of Spain has ceased to make advances upon Philippine and Cuban bonds, and has asked a supplemental guarantee for previous advances, owing to the decline in the value of the bonds. The government has arranged with Madrid and Barcelona bankers to advance the amount needed for service of those bonds in January.

A peanut trust is the latest thing in the way of trade combinations. The headquarters of the new combine, it is said, will be at Norfolk, Va., and it is proposed to consolidate all the peanut farms in Virginia and North Carolina. It is claimed that there are twenty-five peanut farms in this country, and that their values range from $4,000 to $20,000. The capital of the combine will be, so it is proposed, about, $1,000,000.

The members of the Southern Educational Convention, and of the Louisiana State Teachers' Association, have for several days past been arriving in this city to attend the formal assembling of their respective associations on Tuesday. The Southern Convention will be opened in Dr. Palmer's Presbyterian Church, while the State Association will meet in the hall of the Boy's High School, for the transaction of their business respectively.

The Navy Department is going to be prepared for any emergency that may hereafter arise in the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans by carrying on hand the enormous stock of nearly half a million tons of the best steaming coal for warships that can be procured. This supply is to be systematically distributed in American ports most conveniently located for the coaling of ships for any operations the navy may conceivably be called upon to undertake.

The following order has been sent by the Secretary of War to the commanding officers in Cuba, Puerto Rico and the Philippines: Until otherwise ordered, no grant or concessions of public or corporate rights or franchises for the construction of public or quasi public works, such as railroads, tramways, telegraph and telephone lines, water works, gas works, electric light lines, etc., shall be made by any municipal or other local governmental authority or body in Cuba, Puerto Rico or the Philippines, except upon the approval of the major-general commanding the military forces of the United States in Cuba, Puerto Rico or the Philippines, who shall, before approving any such grant or concession, be so specially authorized by the Secretary of War.

Under instructions sent to Maro Island, and from the point forwarded to Commander E. D. Taussig, commanding the gunboat "Bennington," that officer is to hoist the American flag over Wake Island, and formally take possession in the name of the American Government. By this action the United States will obtain possession of a small piece of territory on a direct line between the Hawaiian and Ladrone Islands, which will be used for a station for the proposed Pacific cable.

The first steps indicative of a determination to assume active control of affairs in the Philippine archipelago have been taken, and it will shortly be known whether or not the Philippine insurgents will resist American rule in the islands. According to advices received from Washington, General Otis has been ordered to proceed to Iloilo, capital of the Island of Panay, and restore order there. The insurgents have been actively besieging Iloilo, which is still held by the Spaniards, for many months.

There is a strong sentiment in naval circles in favor of the passage of a law which shall permit the retention of Rear Admiral Dewey upon the active list for ten years, as was done in the case of heroes of the Civil War. Reports from Manila that Rear Admiral Dewey desires to return home are not believed by the department officials, their advices from him indicating that he desires to remain in the Philippines. It is not expected here that he will be detached from command of the Asiatic squadron until just in time to reach the United States on the day of his retirement.

CATARRH TREATMENT

Sent FREE to Readers of the N. O. Christian Advocate.

Sufferers from Catarrh, Hard of Hearing, Bronchitis and Sore Throat Invited to give the Treatment a Trial.

BUSINESS INCREASING.

Physicians are Amazed at the Wonderful Treatment and are Writing from All Parts of the United States to Learn More of the New Germicide.

OUR READERS SHOULD NOT MISS THE FREE OPPORTUNITY.

DR. E. J. WORST
ASHLAND, O.

Dr. E. J. Worst, of Ashland, O., has made himself famous in a few years by a treatment for Catarrh and Bronchitis, of which he is the originator. While physicians generally were treating these very common diseases with sprays and douches, Dr. Worst perfected his dry air treatment. Air is the only agent that is fine enough to reach the air cells of the head and respiratory organs. It was the agent that carried the disease there, and it must be the one to successfully remove it. Vapors, sprays and atomizers are all dangerous. Nature never intended them for the windpipe, and instantly repels them. When you get a drop of water down "the wrong way," how soon you cough and gag. This is because nature has placed a very sensitive valve in the windpipe, which closes the instant water in any form comes in contact with it. The only way to reach the inflamed membranes of these organs is by properly medicating the air you breathe. Not one person in fifty was ever cured by the old method of treating catarrh, now everywhere condemned. Dr. Worst has been so uniformly successful in curing patients that he writes, asking us to make the following announcement.

SPECIAL OFFER.

"I will for a short time mail any reader of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE one of my new scientific Catarrh Inhalers and medicine for one year, on three days' trial, free. If it gives satisfaction, send me $1; if not, return it. It cures more cases than all others combined, hence this offer."

Thousands of people have been cured by Dr. Worst's treatment after suffering for many years from Catarrh, Asthma, Hay Fever, Colds, Pains and Roaring in the Head, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Headache, Partial Deafness and all diseases of the air passages. The treatment is indorsed and used by all leading physicians.

Space forbids printing a long list of testimonials. Persons can receive descriptive pamphlets and testimonials by writing, if interested. Below are given two testimonials from grateful people who have been cured by Dr. Worst's wonderful dry air treatment:

"I have received and tested the inhaler. I am happy to say the longer I use it the more I esteem and consider it the most effective treatment I have ever used for catarrh and lung affections. It has relieved a constant cough I have had for eight years."
PROF. U. S. NASON,
6027 Main St., Germantown, Pa.

"I have been using your Catarrh Inhaler, which I consider a little wonder. I have had Catarrh for seven years and had taken so many remedies that I had become discouraged. I am almost deaf, but your Inhaler is restoring my hearing and stopping the discharges. Respectfully yours,
"H. V. HAWKINS, Algona, Ia."

Dr. Worst's cure by inhalation treatment is the only one that has sufficient merit to inspire enough confidence in any manufacturer to send it to the public on trial, to be paid for if satisfactory. If you are afflicted with any of these diseases or have an afflicted friend, do not fail to write at once and accept this generous offer.

EPWORTH COLLEGE.

THE STUDENTS OF EPWORTH COLLEGE

Will enjoy a literary feast of rare excellence during the remainder of the session. On the evening of Dec. 23d, Miss Sallie McGee Isom (University, Miss.) will give, in the College Chapel, a Shaksperian Recital, and in February, "Scenes from 'Quo Vadis.'"

Beginning January 5th, Miss Clara Conway, of Memphis, will give a series of six lectures, dispensed through first and second week of January (three each week).

SUBJECTS.

1. How to Enrich the Vocabulary.
2. The Abuse of the Superlative.
3. A Study of Verbs.
4. Common Errors.
5. The Value of Science.
6. Ethics of Conversation.

We have in preparation what we will call our Easter Program, that will be of great educational value; and, better still, we have a course of study mapped out especially for pupils who enter after Christmas, that for real, true educational worth will approximate the work of a whole session.

Write for terms, and come and spend five months with us, and meet and hear the most distinguished readers and lecturers in the South. Address
